Kansas used the second-highest rushing (314 yards) and total-offense (447 yards) efforts in the Big Eight Conference this year, to become Nebraska's chief challenger in the team offense standings, statistics released today by the Big Eight show.

The big day against Iowa State moved the Jayhawkers into second in both rushing, with a 229.5 average, and total offense, with a 295.5 mark, cutting Nebraska's lead in both, even though the Cornhuskers held their own in each category and moved back into the passing lead.

The Cornhuskers now have a 383.2 average in total offense to become the first team in the Conference to rack up over 1,500 yards and score over 100 points. Nebraska, after four games, has 1,533 total yards — 1,046 rushing and 487 passing — and has now scored in 27 straight games, tying its record.

In team defense, Nebraska also controls the standards with almost as strong a grip. Only Oklahoma State still dents the Cornhuskers' bid for a clean sweep, hanging onto the passing-defense lead, even though giving up 125 yards last week against Colorado, 16 more than the Cowboys had surrendered in the first three games.

However, Nebraska, last week's challenger in this category, ran into an aerial barrage, too, and fell to fifth.

Oklahoma State has now given up an average of 58.5, while second-place Colorado has allowed 61.5 per game in this, the tightest race of all, with the sixth-place team within 32 yards of the top.

Kansas is also challenging neighboring Kansas State for second in rushing defense, after holding Iowa State to a season low of 32 yards, not a first down rushing, and Tom Vaughn to net total of 10 yards. Kansas State still is runnerup in total defense.

LAST WEEK'S RESULTS: Oklahoma State 14, Colorado 10; Kansas 42, Iowa State 0; NEBRASKA 28, South Carolina 6; Texas 28, Oklahoma 7.

THIS WEEK'S SCHEDULE: Colorado at Iowa State, Kansas State at NEBRASKA, Oklahoma at Kansas, Missouri at Air Force.

No North Bleacher Seat For Bill!

By Bob Samuelson.

Bill Gast, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell G. Gast, is a 16 year old Creighton Prep student from Omaha who has an enviable job. He is a spotter for sportscaster Jack Payne on WOW radio.

Bill has been helping Payne for the past two years as a statistician and as a spotter. He works all home games and spots the opposing team.

Since he has to be able to identify on sight all the players of a team he probably has never seen, he faces the arduous task of memorizing names and corresponding numbers every week.

"It isn't difficult, it just takes time," Bill said. "I spend from an hour and a half to two hours memorizing the players. Since only around thirty-five players may be sent by opposing teams, that cuts down the job a lot."

Bill said that he enjoys spotting because he gets to see all the home games. He has no aspirations towards a career in announcing.

Bill explained the technique he uses to relay information to Jack Payne who, in turn, relays the information to thousands of Cornhusker fans in the WOW listening area. "We have what looks like an old checkerboard with eleven pins on it. We have cards with the number, name, hometown, weight, class and other information on each player on them," explained Bill.

"When a player does something outstanding, I point at a card and visually show Mr. Payne what the player did. For instance, if a player did a good job of covering an intended pass receiver I make a covering motion with my hand." Bill cupped his palm and made an up and down motion with his hand by way of demonstration.

"However, we have no set system of signals. I just try to get a cross to him what I mean," the youth grinned.
