

Adkins, Marsh Seek Third District Post

Prospective Regents Air Views On University Service To State

Editor's note: This is the second of two articles concerning the candidates for two seats on the University Board of Regents. Today's article concerns Board President Richard Adkins and his opponent, Warren Marsh.

Seeking election to the University Board of Regents in the Third District are Richard Adkins, current Regents president from Osmond and Warren Marsh, a farmer from Archer whose father served on the board from 1929 to 1935.

Both men were contacted by the Daily Nebraskan this week in order to learn the bases of their campaign.

One of the questions asked the two candidates was "Do you think the University is adequately serving the state at this time?"

Adkins said "Communications between the Board of Regents and the average citizen should be increased. It is the job of the Board to encourage more interest among citizens about the University."

Adkins

"The University is building up great reservoirs of knowledge that can be of great benefit to businessmen, industries and economic development of the state," he said.

Marsh said "I think the University is doing a good job. There are areas for improvement in any rapidly growing institution and, as a man of the soil, I would like to see the research facilities at the College of Agriculture expanded."

"A good physical plant is essential, but even more important is the securing and holding of top personnel."

Adkins said the University should "continue to cooperate with the universities of other states in any possible way in order to give better areas of instruction to the students of this University."

"We should continue to assist other colleges within the state on the same type of exchange programs we have now."

On the subject of the University's relations with other colleges in the state, Marsh said, "I would seriously consider the possibility of eventually incorporating some junior colleges in to the state educational program."

"Additional trade schools are a must and would help handle some of the student population problems," he said.

Adkins said the time has passed when colleges have to compete for the top students. "It is no longer a matter of competitiveness, only a question of whether we will be able to take care of the young people as they come."

Adkins expressed concern that some Nebraska students might be restricted from attending their university.

Adkins, a graduate of Norfolk High School, attended college at Grinnell College, and Columbia University in addition to the University. He served as a director of the Nebraska Livestock Feeders Association and an officer in the Naval Reserve.

He is a former director of the Sioux City Symphony and very interested in music and literature.

Married in 1942, the Adkins have three children: Rick, 21 and Mary, 18 attend the University, and Jack, 15, is a sophomore in high school.

First elected to the Board of Regents in 1958, the Osmond cattle feeder, who also has banking interests, was chosen president of the board early this year.

Marsh is active in civic, church and professional activities, including the Merrick County Fair Board, the Central City Chamber of Commerce, the Nebraska State Farm Bureau, Lions Club and the Parent-Teachers Association.

He and his wife are both former teachers in the Nebraska School system. He taught at the Nebraska School of Agriculture at Curtis for six years and briefly at the College of Agriculture Farm Operator's Course.

He graduated from Nebraska Central College at Central City and took post graduate courses at the University Teachers College.

Marsh and his wife have one son, presently a junior in high school.

A spokesman for the Plumbers and Steamfitters Local Union 88, which is picketing the Capital air conditioning project on 16th St., said that the union's purpose in the picket is "to gain recognition." He would not name the man picketing, nor would he give any more additional information on the reasons for the picket. He said that the sign is enough explanation.

"The picket will continue until an agreement is made, or until the job is finished," he said. Dobson Brother's, the company involved in the dispute, said that the United States Department and the Nebraska Department of Labor both have approved the company's wages, hours, and working conditions. He said that as of now the union has not sent in a grievance complaint to the state offices.

Constitution Draft To Be Submitted In Student Election

By Priscilla Mullins
Senior Staff Writer

Student Council yesterday accepted the policy statement of the Council Executive Committee on the Constitutional Convention.

In essence, the report read this way:

"The draft of the University Constitutional Convention committee of the student body shall be automatically placed on a ballot to appear before the students as soon as such draft is complete.

"The constitutional convention draft shall be voted upon via special election. This election shall be financed by appropriations allocated for this purpose in the Student Council budget. It shall be governed as are all student elections.

"The 1964-65 Student Council shall continue to operate until such time as representatives composing the new student government are elected, as provided for in the newly approved constitution."

Amendment Made

At this point in the report an amendment was made, and itself amended to read: "The Student Council recommends that such election shall not be held before Monday, following the first Saturday of May, 1965."

Council discussion here pointed out that Student Council had no right to say when the election should be held, but that an early election during the year would leave the present Council programs hanging in air, if the new governing body should choose not to follow them.

Several Council members stated that they felt that they had been elected for the full term of 1964-65, and that they should be allowed to fulfill this term before the new governing body takes over.

The amendment was added to the statement and the report was passed with it included.

If Draft Defeated

The report continued: "If the draft is defeated, or if the draft is not completed at least two weeks prior to the May 3, 1965 election (as outlined in the present Student Council constitution), the 1964-65 Student Council shall continue as the government of the student body."

The report said that funds for the administration of the Convention "will be appropriated from the Student Council treasury," and "any appropriation requests must be approved by the Treasurer of the present Student Council."

A graduate student, Don Kruse, in the College of Pharmacy, was selected by the Council to be the graduate representative on Student Council.

Donald Mienke and Sharon Eboch were also interviewed before the Council for the position.

Counseling Service

A motion made by Kent Kneumeister, stating that Student Council form a Counseling Service Committee to work with the University Counseling Service, was passed by the Council.

Kneumeister said that such a committee would be valuable as a go-between with students and the University Service. He said that the idea is directed toward freshmen, who are sometimes "shy about going to their advisors with questions, but would not be so reluctant about going to other students."

He said that there are three main adjustments the student must make when coming to the University:

1. Adolescence to maturity.
2. Protected provincial environment to less protected, more cosmopolitan environment.
3. Secondary education to University education.

Kneumeister said that he feels that the committee could work with the University Service by sending students who come to them as friends to the Service.

JoAnn Stratemann told Council members that in setting up the committee, they could look into possibilities of any further help to the University Service.

A motion passed naming Kneumeister chairman of the new committee.

Michel Moves

Diane Michel made a motion, which the Council passed, that the University join the Nebraska Student Government Association, pending approval and possible revision of its constitution.

She said that Student Council programs from the University would be taken to meetings of the association and discussed, along with those of other Nebraska colleges.

Council President John Lydick announced the names of final committee chairman for Student Council this year. They are: Larry Frolik, Public Issues; Mike Jeffrey, Public Relations; John Luckasen, Student Welfare; Kent Kneumeister, Libraries; Bob Coufal, Masters; John Kenagy, Senators; and Andy Taube, Peace Corps.

Reports Heard

The Council also heard committee reports at their meeting. The reports included:

Activities — Susie Segrist told Council members that they must submit a list of their officers to administration for approval. She said that Council is one of the last organizations to be doing this.

Associates — Sue Graham reported that the new associates have, of their own accord, shown an interest in pursuing the matter of the financial situation of the Daily Nebraskan. She said that Pam Hedgecock has been named chairman of a committee for this purpose, and Mike Jeffrey, Council member and business manager of the Daily Nebraskan, will serve as advisor to this committee.

Parking Checked

Parking—Bill Poppert told the Council that his committee has been checking into the inter-campus bus situation. He said that the University, to hire extra drivers and buses for peak hours, must hire them for at least two hours. Poppert said that seven parking ticket appeals were heard this week, and one granted.

He said the one granted was probably for "originality" if nothing else. "Apparently there is someone going around campus moving Renault Dauphines out of their parking spaces," he said.

Libraries — Kent Kneumeister said that the hours for the East (Ag) campus library, effective Nov. 1, are 7:30 a.m. to 10 p.m., Monday through Thursday; 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., Friday and Saturday; and 2 p.m. to 10 p.m. Sunday. He said that the hours will change to the same as Love Library on the city campus in about two months.

Builders Reveal New Program

... 'Professor Of Year' Award

A student professorship program to select one professor a year for recognition is being planned by the Builders Board.

The board felt it was necessary for a professor to be recognized on the basis of student selection for methods of teaching and personal guidance, according to Cheryl Crosier, chairman of campus promotion.

The board sent letters of inquiry to 35 universities asking if they were involved in such a program, and asked them to send any information of its details.

The University of Illinois had a similar plan, and sent a sample nominating ballot, which the board revised and is using in its program.

All organized living units and Lincoln independents will receive this ballot and are asked to nominate professors they feel best qualified under the criteria listed on the ballot, according to Miss Crosier.

Criteria for an Outstanding Professor include: his desire and enthusiasm for learning, his influence as a teacher beyond his own classes, his personal concern and respect for students both individually and collectively, his possession of qualities intellectual, personal and moral one can admire and respect, his mastery of his own field as well as adequate knowledge of other disciplines.

The present goal of $500 will be used as an award for the chosen professor. It is hoped that in the next few years this goal can be exceeded. If enough funds are raised, future plans include student-given scholarships and loans.

Tentative plans include a special convocation in which the selected professor would be honored. All organizations are being contacted explaining the Student Professorship and are asked to contribute as much as possible.

Progress Reports Replace Seven Week's Down Slips; Will Be Sent To Parents

No down slips will be sent this semester. In their place scholastic progress reports for the first seven weeks will be sent to student and parents, according to Lewis Fowles, assistant dean of Student Affairs.

Fowles said that the name has been changed due to the fact that any scholastic report at this time is only an indication of a student's progress. Fowles feels that scholastic progress report is a more appropriate term than down slip.

"We are more concerned about alerting students as to their present scholastic situation. Many students don't realize that they are doing unsatisfactory work in a subject until they receive this report. This realization still gives a student time to work harder and redeem himself," said Fowles.

Faculty members have been asked to turn in reports of students not doing satisfactory work, and they may also submit reports on students doing well.

Satisfactory work is considered to be a grade of 4 or better. Reports are expected to be sent out by November 16. This year parents and advisers will be notified at the same time due to a new processing system. This will be beneficial to advisers who need to confer with students before second semester registration begins.

This year the progress reports will be standardized to the same size as grade reports.

YD Rally To Feature Callan, Arndt

A Young Democrat (YD) rally will be held at 7 p.m. tonight in the Pan American Room of the Student Union.

Featured at the meeting will be Clair Callan, democratic candidate for Congress from the 2nd District, and Raymond Arndt who is running against Republican Sen. Roman Hruska.

Following the rally students are invited to watch a television debate between gubernatorial candidates Frank Morrison and Dwight Burney which will be broadcast at 9 p.m. in the small auditorium of the Union.

Big Brother's Watching

Unsuspecting University student Dianne Deitch, marks her ballot in the Student Council mock election yesterday under the watchful eye of Big Brother, Daily Nebraskan photographer Rich Eiser.

Polish Film Posters To Highlight Art Show

A display of Polish film posters and a talk on the "Aesthetics of Modern Sculpture" highlighted activities at Sheldon Art Gallery, Sunday.

"Human relations is the keynote of the work of the Teenage Project at the University," according to Dr. William Hall professor of educational psychology and measurement, history and principles of education. "The project has as its main objective the development of a better understanding of human relations, and in doing so to better understand the principles and techniques of human relations," Hall said.

Twenty-five University students participate in Teenage Project. The students try to establish a personal relationship with the high school students who have demonstrated leadership ability in some activity in school.

Hall said, "The project members meet once a week for a hour in a general meeting in which they discuss major projects and hope to gain a better insight into human relations." The project members spend between three to seven hours a week with their high school students.

"The interested project member usually spends more time with his student than does the lackadaisical member," he said.

The high schools which participate in the project are: Lincoln Northeast, Lincoln Southeast, Lincoln High and University High.

"The project is also an attempt to learn how effectively we can build good human relationships," he said.

The project has as one of its goals the creation of an incentive to learn more about students in the other Lincoln schools in the individual high school students. Unlike athletics, there is no competition present among students.

On discussing the benefits derived by the project member, he said that the understanding of young people is the obvious benefit. He also said that the experience gained in working with the students is invaluable in later life for the member.

He ended by saying, "This is an organization whose survival depends entirely upon the visible results and the caliber of the project members. We can not afford to remain static."
