

LBJ, Morrison Win Landslide Victories

A landslide victory gained the office of President for Lyndon B. Johnson yesterday in the Nov. 3 elections. Barry Goldwater was described last night by NBC news as "the worst defeated candidate of this century in terms of popular vote."

Johnson carried all of the New England states, as well as taking the traditional GOP states of Iowa, Vermont, Kansas, and New Hampshire. Three of the major states, Illinois, California, and New York, went to Johnson early in the returns. Several of the southern states, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, South Carolina, and Georgia, went to Goldwater. The loss of these states to the Democrats was attributed to the positive civil rights stand taken by President Johnson. The remaining southern states did not seem to be influenced by civil rights, and went to Johnson. Nebraska, traditionally a Republican state, went over to Johnson, making it the first Democratic win in the state since 1936. In the Nebraska governor's race, Frank B. Morrison took a commanding lead from the first. Described as a "lone wolf" candidate in a Republican state, the Democrat candidate swept past Republican Dwight Burney with a surprisingly great lead. In the University Regent's race, Dr. Benjamin Greenberg won over his opponent, State Senator Clifton Foster.

At press time early this morning, the race between Regent's Board President Richard Adkins, seeking re-election, and Warren Marsh, was very close. Adkins, however, appeared to be winning. In pre-election statements, Greenberg said he believed that the strength of the University lies in the quality and abilities of its faculty. He said he would work to "further development of our University faculty and staff. Greenberg, 61, has been a physician in York for 35 years. He has been active in the National Assn. of Governing Boards of State Universities, and was elected president of that group in 1962. Adkins, who is the president of the Board of Regents at present, said the University should "continue to cooperate with the universities of other states in any possible way in order to give better areas of instruction to the students of this University."

A cattle feeder from Osmond, Nebraska, Adkins also has banking interests. He is active in civic, church, and professional activities, including the Parent-Teachers Association and the Nebraska State Farm Bureau. Marsh said that he felt the University is doing a good job now, with some areas for improvement which occur in "any rapidly growing institution, and as a man of the soil, I would like to see the research facilities at the College of Agriculture exposeded." Foster said he would improve the University by "taking the story of the University to the legislature and providing some leadership for a change. I would the seat hot enough for the legislature that they'll have to start some long range planning," he said. In the race for Lt. Governor in Nebraska, the margin at press time was small, but Charles Thone had a slight edge over Democrat Phil Sorensen.

Half Of Students Contacted Want 50 Cent Tuition Rise To Aid Daily Nebraskan

Marilyn Hoegemeyer
Senior Staff Writer

About one half of 100 University students contacted by the Daily Nebraskan recently were in favor of the 50 cent increase in tuition rather than solving the Nebraskan's financial problem in any other way.

The Daily Nebraskan is publishing only 6500 copies each day this fall for a student population of over 13,000 because the daily cost of printing, $250 is too high for the present tuition allotment of one dollar for the Nebraskan.

This has made a great amount of advertising necessary, according to Mike Jeffrey, business manager for the Daily Nebraskan.

A recent Student Council poll suggested four remedies: a 50 cent increase in tuition per semester, a three-day-a-week paper, a circulation cut-back or no Daily Nebraskan at all.

The students questioned by the Nebraskan had various views. "It is somehow such an integral part of campus life, a guide for everything you are doing," Carol Hall said. "I'm in favor of the 50 cents increase in tuition," she said.

"Three times a week would be just right," Eugene Prosski, said. "It could come out regularly on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. There is not that much news," he said, "although 50 cents a semester wouldn't hurt anybody."

"I voted for the 50 cents increase, but after I have considered everything, I believe if we would increase this, then we'd start increasing the tuition for everything else," Jan Mach said. "I think the news could be covered just as well in three issues," she said.

"I am in favor of the 50 cent increase in tuition because I like to read the Nebraskan to keep up on what's going on," Gary Clark said. "I was rather surprised with the results of the Student Council poll. I'd just as soon it would come out five times a week. There's kind of a dull spot on Tuesday," he added. "I favor the Nebraskan three times a week, because I'm never around to get one," Dean Beecher said. "Three times a week would be enough," he said.

"I'd just as soon see the Daily Nebraskan four times a week," Dave Meyer said. "I'm in favor of the 50 cent increase."

Freshman Larry Beerbohm said, "I don't have time to read it, I'd rather have the Nebraskan only three times a week," he said.

"I am in favor of the 50 cent increase if I'm assured of a paper," Steve Lagerberg said.

"Three Daily Nebraskans are sufficient," Marilyn Fuhrman said.

"It would be a big bother to increase the tuition to 50 cents. Three issues would provide adequate news coverage." These were the views of Mara Krums and Anna Temmers.

"Four issues is too much work for the staff members. I'd be in favor of three issues a week unless the 50 cent increase could be used to increase the staff," Linda Dean said. Pam Morrison agreed that if an increase in staff could be made, 50 cents increase would be agreeable.

"You can get more news in four issues. I don't think 50 cents would matter that much," Vicki Palmer said.

Alice Speece said, "You can't afford to cut out one day's reporting. I would choose the 50 cent increase."

"I think three issues a week is enough," Ron Griese said. "Stories should be written that directly affect the University students," he said.

No one suggested eliminating the Daily Nebraskan altogether. Though some admitted never reading the Nebraskan.

Former Faculty Member To Lecture Here Friday

A former University faculty member, Dr. Stanley Ross of Stony Brook, N.Y., will present the first in a new series of Latin American Lectures at 8 p.m. Friday in Love Library auditorium.

The lecture will be open to University students, students in nearby colleges, high school students and other interested persons, according to Dr. Roberto Esquenazi-Mayo, director of the University's Latin American Studies Program.

Ross, a University staff member for 14 years, is acting dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at the State University of New York. He will speak on "Mexico: A Successful Social Revolution."

The lecture series is being conducted under auspices of the Latin American Area Studies Program with financial assistance from the Sperry and Hutchinson Foundation Lectureship Program. Theme of the lecture series is "Latin American Social Change in the 20th Century: Progress and Prospects."

An authority on Latin American affairs, Ross has served as advisory editor of "The Americas," contributing editor to "The Handbook of Latin American Studies" and member of the editorial board of "The Hispanic American Historical Review." He holds an A.B. degree from Queens College and M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Columbia University.

"Through this lecture program, students and the general public will have an opportunity to become better acquainted with Latin America," Esquenazi said.

Other lecturers in the 1964-65 series will include Prof. Munro S. Edmonson, department of anthropology, Tulane University, Dec. 3; and Tad Szulc, the New York Times, March 11.

Debating Squad Wins 18 Of 26

The University Debate Squad, in competition with 26 colleges and universities, won 18 out of 26 debates at the University of Omaha kickoff forensic tournament dinner last week.

Roger Doerr and Terry Schauf were undefeated, and, in conjunction with Mer Schlachter and John Peck, who lost one debate, were awarded first place among B division debaters. This section of the tournament was open only to freshmen and sophomores.

University Offers 'Sporting Chance'

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is another in a series of articles presenting opportunities for students in departments and organizations dealing with subjects other than their major fields of study. This article concerns opportunities for students in athletics and intramural sports.

By Jim Korshoj
Junior Staff Writer

Whether a "jock" or not, any athletic-minded student at the University has several opportunities to exhibit his athletic prowess.

Most widely followed and publicized of the University athletic programs are its intercollegiate sports.

Any male student of the University is eligible to go out for a varsity sport. Although a large majority of the athletes on the varsity teams receive athletic scholarships, some members of the teams gain varsity berths without having been recruited or given a scholarship.

Currently the University competes with other schools in football, basketball, track, baseball, wrestling, swimming, gymnastics, cross-country, golf, tennis and riflery.

Intramurals furnish the source of athletic competition for the majority of the students of the University. A year-round program is held for both boys and girls in a variety of sports.

Competition is held in 14 different sports for girls through their intramural program. These sports are volleyball, soccer baseball, basketball, archery, tennis, badminton, softball, table tennis, swimming, one-hole golf, riflery, and co-recreational volleyball (both boys and girls on each team).

For the boys, intramurals involve even a greater number of sports. They compete in flag football, golf, tennis, horseshoes, free throw shooting, weightlifting, basketball, handball, swimming and field, indoor track and field, paddleball, volleyball, badminton, softball, water basketball, wrestling, deck tennis and outdoor relays and field events.

Competition for girls is organized primarily on a living unit basis, but girls are able to organize their own teams to compete if they wish.

The boys' competition is divided into three leagues for each sport. There is a fraternity league, a dormitory league, and an independent league. The first two have their team membership determined by living units. The independent league is for students who do not reside in an organized living unit or who wish to organize their own teams for the competition.

Physical education classes further aid students in developing their athletic skills and knowledge.

PE courses are available for boys in the fields of archery, bait and fly casting, body conditioning and weightlifting, bowling, golf, handball and squash, recreational sports, swimming and lifesaving, tennis and badminton and fencing.

Girls at the University are required to take two years of physical education courses. Three of these courses are taught for eight weeks each and are required of the girls. They are body mechanics, swimming and a group activity (dancing or a team sport).

The elective PE courses which girls may choose from include swimming, archery, bowling, golf, tennis, badminton, canoeing and lacrosse.

In addition to these organized activities, several other facilities are available for the use of University students.

An open schedule is attempted to be kept for the basketball courts in the Physical Education Building, at the Coliseum and at the Ag Union. Lighted tennis courts are available from 4 to 9 p.m. each day.

Also available are the handball and paddleball courts in the Coliseum, and, in season, the volleyball and badminton courts in the PE Building and the Ag Union.

All equipment for activities in the PE Building and the Ag Union can be checked out for use at these buildings.

ing Leake to register before they challenged his registration, had not followed state statutes.

Hasselbalch said he has no plans to appeal the ruling at present.

'Black Like Me' Author Here Today

John Howard Griffin, author of the best-selling book "Black Like Me," will speak in the Student Union Ballroom today at 3:30 p.m.

Griffin's book describes his personal experiences while living as a Negro in the South. He underwent special skin treatments to disguise himself as a Negro and then spent several weeks in the South.

There will be no admission charge for his talk this afternoon.
