With the collapse of Oklahoma State's pass defense, Nebraska has taken over the leadership in all six of the team statistical categories, according to figures from the Big Eight.

Nebraska put the clamps on Missouri's good passing game, holding it to 57 yards to drop its average to only 67.7 per game. Oklahoma State tumbled all the way to last in the division. Colorado took second, just under a yard-a-game behind the Cornhuskers.

Nebraska also strengthened its hold on the rushing defense and total defense—the spot where the Nebraskans led the nation last week—in its head-to-head meeting with its closest defensive challenger, Missouri. The Tigers are still second in both areas, however. Nebraska has given up 68.9 rushing, compared with Missouri's 133.1. In total defense, it is the Cornhuskers, 136.3 to 220.0.

Kansas continued to pull closer to Nebraska in rushing offense, ranking only 16 yards-behind the Cornhuskers' leading 241.7 average. Coach Bob Devaney's outfit stretched its passing lead to 12 a game, 117.8 to 105.8 over Oklahoma State, and maintained a 359.5 to 292.3 lead over Oklahoma in total offense.

In statistics reflecting Conference games only, Nebraska owns leads in four of the six categories, with the other two—rushing and total offense—belonging to Kansas. Going into Saturday's battle of the unbeaten, team statistics of Conference games only show the Kansans are averaging 298 on the ground, while the Cornhuskers have driven for 224.2 to rank third, with Oklahoma (289.0) second. Overall, the Jayhawkers hold a 321.5 to 318 edge. Nebraska has the passing lead, 95.8 to 72.5.

Defensively, however, it is a different story, with the Nebraskans holding commanding leads in all phases, giving up but 257 ground and 137 air yards. Kansas, during the same four-game span, has allowed 485 and 491. In scoring, it is Nebraska, with a fine 2.5 allowed average, and Kansas, with an 8.3 mark.

Kent McCloughan Feels 'Lucky'

"Sure, I like to score like everyone else, I guess, but there's something else a whole lot more important—winning!"

That's the way Nebraska halfback Kent McCloughan, who is making a strong bid for Big 8 and All America honors as the No. 1 scorer in the nation, sums up his precarious position.

McCloughan is a quiet veteran of three winning seasons under Coach Bob Devaney and he's not given to brashness about his newfound fame.

"We've got a lot of good backs," Kent said. "Any of them could be doing the scoring. I've just been lucky."

"I'm an explosive type runner like Gale Sayers of Kansas, for example," he says. "Since I've got some speed (he's a .09.6 sprinter and won the Big 8 gold medal with a .21.3 time in the 220), I can run okay when there's daylight, but a lot of other backs are better in a crowd."

Chances are McCloughan has a stranglehold on the "most deflected passes caught for touchdowns."

Against Minnesota he won the game, 26-21, in the final minutes by taking an 18-yard pass from Quarterback Fred Duda—after it had gone through the hands of a Gopher defender, then bounced sideways off the Gopher's helmet—and plunging across the goal line.

Against Colorado, a Buff defender almost intercepted a Bobby Churchich pass but bobbled it. McCloughan grabbed the ball as it headed ground-ward, turned and sprinted on for a 47-yard TD to put Nebraska ahead to stay, 7-3.

McCloughan's individual statistics, other than scoring, aren't such that the All America voters will start kicking up their heels. He's netted 290 yards and a 4.1 average, and he's caught six passes for 290 yards (25.8 average) and 4 TDs.

"A lot of guys get to play and we are winning," he says. "That's the main thing every time we go on the field. Off hand, I can't think of anything worse than scoring a lot of points or piling up a lot of statistics—and losing."
