Constitution Gives New Election Rules

By Wayne Kreuscher
Junior Staff Writer

Student Council yesterday accepted procedures made by the Constitutional Convention for the Elections Committee in the 1965 general spring election for Student Association.

John Lydick, president of Student Council, explained that if the new Constitution is passed, the Elections Committee would follow these procedures made by the Constitution, but after this year the elections will be under the new Electoral Commission.

An amendment to the motion will allow the Election Committee this year and the Electoral Commission in further years to add anything additional to the election procedures provided that Student Council approves.

The new procedures for elections concern filing, publicity and campaigning, balloting procedures and counting procedures.

Filings for the spring general election will open the first Monday in April and close on Saturday noon of the same week. Applications will be filed in the office of the Dean of Student Affairs.

The total expenditures for any campaigning by one candidate shall not exceed $75 and the candidate shall present to the Electoral Commission an itemized report of his campaign expenditures.

Candidates will have the right to speak, publish and distribute printed material freely, subject only to the restraints of slander and libel.

No candidate will be deprived of his rights to assemble students in any public place, subject only to the restraints imposed by city and state law and by the by-laws of the Board of Regents of the University.

Elections will be held the Wednesday following the first Saturday in May and separate ballots shall be prepared for each college. The names

Education Association To Pick State Officers

State officers for the Student Education Association of Nebraska will be elected at the Association's convention Mar. 19-20.

Two University students have been slated for state offices. Carol Brantling is running for vice president and Carol Potter is slated for historian.

Students in Teachers College who are interested in attending the convention should contact Doug Thom, 488-9060, before Sunday.

A chartered bus will leave at 4 p.m. Mar. 19 and will return by 6 p.m. Mar. 20.

of all candidates for the presidency and vice-presidency and the names of all college candidates for Senate will be arranged in alphabetical order.

All parts of the election procedure will be subject to the Organic Act of the Senate.

Lydick said that these procedures were originally a part of the new Constitution, but were now part of the by-laws. He said that the Faculty Senate had suggested that they become part of the by-laws so that they could be changed when necessary easily.

The new Constitution will be voted on next Friday by the whole student body of the University.

The Council also passed a motion to fully support and encourage students to take part in Peace Corps Week March 14-20.

Jim Adams, who is a member of the Peace Corps, Washington, D.C. staff, spoke to the Council and described the large Peace Corps education program that will take place starting Monday.

He said that Peace Corps speakers would be available to speak in any living unit or class. He also pointed out that there would be a large Peace Corps information center in the Union and that Peace Corps information center in ed next Wednesday.

"We encourage everyone who is interested in the Peace Corps to come down and ask us questions and talk over the Peace Corps with us," Adams said.

John Kenagy, Senators Committee chairman, said that the potential dates for the Nebraska legislature's visit to the University are March 18, 22, 23 and 24.

He said the senators will take a tour of the campus on each day. The tours will begin at the Union and then go through the first floor of Administration, through Teachers College, in front of Love Library, through Social Sciences and then across the mall. The senators will observe class changes between Andrews and Burnett and then, if possible, visit some labs in Avery.

Six legislators are expected in each group.

"The senators' visits to the University," Kenagy said, "will help improve communication between the University and the Unicameral."

Peace Corps Visitors To Speak Next Week

A Peace Corps team from Washington, D.C., will visit Mar. 14-20.

Peace Corps staff members, including returned Volunteers, will be on hand to explain the purpose, programs and future plans of the Peace Corps and to accept applications from interested juniors, seniors and graduate students.

A Peace Corps Information Center will be set up at a central site on campus and manned by the Peace Corps team throughout the visit.

Non-competitive aptitude tests will be given several times daily to applicants. These tests require no previous knowledge of a foreign language, and are not the kind you study for. Applicants do not pass or fail them as they are used for placement purposes only. Optional Spanish and French language achievement tests will also be administered.

Peace Corps Questionnaires must be completed before taking the above tests. Those thinking of applying should immediately fill out a Questionnaire and submit it to one of the Peace Corps team members. Questionnaires are available at most Post Offices and may also be obtained in advance from Vice Chancellor G. Robert Ross.

If an organization, group or club wishes to have a Peace Corps representative speak and answer questions, arrangements should be made at once by calling Ross at 477-8711.

Nearly 10,000 Volunteers are either overseas or in the process of training for service in 46 countries in Africa, Asia or Latin America. Training programs begin in almost every month of the year but are especially concentrated during February and the summer months. Those who apply during the Peace Corps team visit will be informed of their eligibility within approximately two months.

'Heartbreak House' To Open March 25

A sharp, witty satire with a serious message, but many uproariously funny moments.

This is a description of Bernard Shaw's "most timely play" "Heartbreak House" which will begin at the University Theatre March 25.

The play, which is now approaching the technical stage of rehearsal, was written in 1913 just before World War I. It deals with the vices and futility of the people in England before the war.

For example, two of his characters depict a rich capitalist, Mangan (Dean Tschetter) and a girl who needs money to have a soul, Ellie Dunn (Bobbie Kierstead).

Shaw himself is supposed to have said that the play symbolizes England as a drifting ship with all passengers and crew failing to face up to the danger of rudderlessness.

Called his "most timely play," its message about the apathy, selfishness and worldliness of mankind that can lead to false values and purposes in life can still be applicable today.

Shaw would not allow the play to be produced during the war because he said one "can't make war on war and on your neighbors at the same time."

While having a definite message, the play like Shaw is also optimistic. Many scenes such as the one where Captain Shotover's (Andy Backer) daughter commonly accepts the fact that he is carrying dynamite around the house, are full of humor and wit.

This play, which has been done very few times by University students, has already taken two weeks of constant rehearsal by the actors. There are ten students in the cast.

Professor Steven Cole, who is spending his first year at Nebraska, is director of the play. Charles Howard is the set designer and technical director.

"Heartbreak House" is the third of four plays and one opera which the University Theatre is giving this year. The next production will be "Anthony and Cleopatra" in May.

More Students Seek Psychiatric Treatment

By Rich Meier
Junior Staff Writer

Increasing numbers of students are seeking psychiatric help across the nation, according to Dr. Clay Gerken, head of University Counseling Service.

"Most land grant, or state colleges, have a vocationally oriented environmental press," said Gerken. "But a college such as Swarthmore doesn't care much about this sort of thing, they are more intellectually inclined. There also are colleges whose primary concern is to train the student in the special way of becoming a social animal."

The specific pressure on the campus may be oriented in many different directions.

Parental pressures play a big role in forming what the environmental pressure of the campus is to be.

In the conservative Midwest the student is cautioned to be a moral animal or at least not to get caught. Parents feel very strongly that their offspring should not become involved with dissenting groups.

For example, when Dick Gregory was here, he told of parents refusing to post bail for their own sons because they had forbidden them to get involved with the Civil Rights movement.

Connected with this is the pressure to get good grades. Students are to study hard, get good grades, not necessarily to learn, but to get good grades, and therefore get a good job. If the student gets too involved with something else, then his grades will suffer. The student must understand this conflict in order to cope with it.

Take, for example the student who did well in science and math in high school, and decides about 10th grade he is going to be an engineer. He comes to the University and gets satisfactory grades his first year.

He is doing okay, but he feels uneasy. He is not sure of himself, but all his friends know he is going to be an engineer, likewise his parents, girlfriend, aunt and uncle. He thinks he is expected to become an engineer, but feels uneasy about it.

The counseling service can help him to ask new questions of himself.

In order to help, the University counselling service is dedicated to the idea that college should be satisfying, productive and rewarding. The normal college student is helped to understand, and not stand, the pressures he encounters.

"The Counseling psychologist has a professional obligation to function as an applied behavioral scientist on the campus, in deliberation with others who control the variables that facilitate or retard student growth," said Gerken.

The behavioral scientist can investigate the college community in the same way the behavioral scientist has investigated the south sea islander. "He looks upon it as a chunk of real estate, from the outside. In other words, he uses the 'man from Mars approach'," pointed out Gerken.

"One can discover a lot about the college community through this approach and a lot of research is being done in the area now," he said. "There is much investigation to find out what the variables are that make a difference in the lives of the students. Why does the student change, or fail to change?"

The student will change. Many more change their major before they graduate, than those who remain consistent.

The University Counseling Service helps any student who is having problems with change, pressures, realization of his own goal, and even trying to define his own goal.

Students come to the Counseling service simply because they have questions to ask.

"The college years are commonly a time when a person wonders about himself, about what he is doing and why, about what kind of person he is and is becoming, about what his relationships are with other people, and how others see those relationships, about his field of study and future occupation and about lifetime goals," says the counseling service's bulletin.

"Fundamentally, we help the student to ask of himself the appropriate questions," said Gerken.

"These are troubled times for students," he said. "If we can help him to understand—not stand—these pressures, then he will be able to cope a little better."

IFC Asks Speakers To Visit

The possibility of having a Peace Corps representative visit all interested fraternity houses was discussed last night at the Interfraternity Council meeting.

The Council passed a motion by Andy Taube that the IFC go on record as encouraging and supporting participation of the fraternity system in the official Peace Corps Week, March 14-20.

Jim Adams, a member of the advance team for the Peace Corps talked to the group about plans to contact fraternity men next week. It was decided that all interested house representatives would sign a sheet and those houses would be contacted by the Peace Corps team.

Buzz Madson, president, told the Council that he is considering setting up a Health and Recreation Survey Committee, to be made up of house representatives.

The group would be concerned with looking into house health problems and coordinating with house health officers, as well as looking into the possibilities for recreation facilities for the University.

Entry blanks for participation in Greek Week are due at the IFC office by March 19, according to Affairs Chairman Gary Larson. An entry fee of $10 will be charged.

Scholarship Committee Chairman John Cosier announced that an IFC scholarship of $132 will be given at the awards banquet at the end of Greek Week.

Each house may have two applicants for the scholarship, and applications are due in the IFC office March 24. Interview times will then be set up, and 10 finalists will be selected. The winner will be selected by the committee and IFC advisors on the basis of the applications and the interviews.

New Group Encourages Coed Travel

A new organization to revolutionize coed student travel has been launched from New York City. It is Trans-Atlantic Student Association with offices at 387 Park Avenue South.

The Trans-Atlantic Student Association (TRASA) was formed by a group of recent college graduates to remove the frustrations of student travel and to bring overseas travel within the budget of every student in the United States.

Special features of the TRASA plan include financing for vacations, air transport arrangements, group tours and accommodation in major European cities for TRASA members. In addition, the organization will operate a student nightclub in New York City and will provide students with a wide variety of travel services, advice and publications.

It has reciprocal club facilities in major European cities where its members can meet European students and take part in genuine European student life. In this way, TRASA's organizers believe a European visit will become more worthwhile.

The organization will publish twelve travel guides this summer and plans to arrange travel for some twenty thousand students to Europe, the Caribbean and Israel between June and August this year.

A representative of TRASA described its functions this way: "More and more, travel is an integral part of the college curriculum and a student who does not venture abroad finds himself not only having missed the pleasure and excitement of a vacation overseas, but also is at a decided disadvantage in his studies."

The spokesman went on to explain that TRASA would be able to achieve uniquely low prices because of its large membership and comprehensive approach to the problems of students when traveling.
