

APR Sorority Official Outlines ARCHIVES Greek System's Future

By Wayne Kreuscher
Junior Staff Writer

"Let X equal all that a fraternity can mean to us, all the values we can gain from it."

This was the formula that Mrs. George King, past first vice president of Alpha Xi Delta and a delegate to National Panhellenic, gave to over 600 fraternity and sorority members at a Greek Week Convocation in the Union Monday night.

Mrs. King said that there were many problems facing the Greek system today, but that she felt the fraternities and sororities could meet the problems and continue to contribute to their members and campuses.

"The college fraternity," she said, "is exposed to a delicate position because of the new trends on University campuses."

She pointed out that inevitably some of our fraternity chapters will perish as campuses change, but that at the same time many other Universities that have no fraternities are seeking a Greek system for their campuses.

"Statistics show," she said, "that 71% of fraternity members graduate. Fifty per cent of non-members complete college years."

She also explained that fraternities and sororities are continuing to build new and larger houses all the time.

Mrs. King, who is from Alliance, Ohio, stressed the fact that "these are changing times we now are living in" and that these changes will also require many changes and re-emphasis of the basic principles of fraternities and sororities.

"If enough of the fraternity people care and are aware of the basis of the college system today, fraternities will endure," she said.

MRS. GEORGE KING... addressed over 600 fraternity and sorority members in a special Greek Week program Monday night. She said the future of the Greek system depends on the ability of the system to conform with the trends in education.

Protest Continues Tuition Raise Threat Inspires Plans For Letter-Writing Drive

The second point of a two-pronged student protest against a tuition raise went into effect Monday night following a meeting of campus leaders with representatives of the administration and the Legislature.

The group, incorporating the Student Council Senators Program into its action, urged all students to write to their senators and to their parents recommending a flood of letters to the legislature supporting bond sales for University construction rather than getting the money from a tuition raise.

The group, which included the presidents of Student Council, Interfraternity Council, the Residence Association for Men, the Innocents Society and the editor of the Daily Nebraskan, Monday started a petition drive aimed at drawing 10,000 student signatures protesting the raise.

Senators program Chairman John Kenagy Monday released the names, districts and addresses of all state senators and urged all living unit governments to cooperate in the letter campaign.

A spokesman for the group said after Monday's meeting "Our aim is to find the means of protest that will have the most powerful and favorable effect upon our senators. We feel that (Sen. Terry) Carpenter's proposed march would create more resentment than it would do good, and we feel that the petition drive in itself lacks the depth we need in a protest of this magnitude."

Late yesterday it was estimated that some 3,000 students had signed the petition. Many of the copies had not yet been turned into the Student Council at that time.

Other developments on the tuition raise scene:

—Sen. Calista Cooper Hughes has offered to yield the floor to the student group when it wishes to present its petitions and signatures to the legislature.

—Carpenter told a group of students at Pound Hall Monday night that "you have to act to get results." He said he saw no point in a petition drive and again offered to lead a student march on the Capitol. "You're not going to get anything unless you ask for it," the Senator said.

—Another petition, rumored to carry some 1,000 signatures; will be discussed in today's Student Council meeting. The petition urges that Council endorse—and Administration back—a calling off of classes Friday to allow a march.

The letter-writing program, deemed by several senators as the most effective means of getting action in the legislature, was introduced to living units Monday night by Kenagy, working with living unit officers. Kenagy said it was hoped that each interested student would persuade his parents to write to their senator, as well as writing a letter himself.

The petition and the letter campaign are parts of the same program, according to the spokesman for the group, which first met Sunday.

The senators, their districts, and the counties represented therein are:

Mathews' Talks Examine Women, Religion, Campus

By Keith Sior and Steve Jordan
Junior Staff Writers

"There is but one everlasting, eternal, sustaining word, and that is that we are approved," pervaded a series of four lectures presented by Rev. Joseph Mathews at the University this week.

Rev. Mathews is director of the Ecumenical Institute of Chicago, Illinois. He is a Methodist minister who has traveled throughout Africa, the Far East, Europe and the United States, lecturing on and studying the renewal of the Christian Church through its laity.

The YWCA and UCCF sponsored the lecture series which began with a panel discussion Sunday night.

Mathews was the featured speaker on the panel led by Dr. Alan Pickering, Dr. David Trask of the University history department, and Rev. Alvin Peterson were the other two members of the four-man panel.

"The Role of Religion on Campus" was the subject of the controversial discussion.

Mathews said that "the university is an institution grappling to find what the role of a university is in forming the person." He described the church as the "group in the no longer but not yet."

Mathews emphasized the need of today's people to become a gadfly to all they meet.

Dr. Trask supported Mathews' assumptions and exposed the plight of the modern church. He said that "Churches are generally unsuccessful with people of college age."

Trask attributed this to two major causes: first, "the failure of churches to understand young people in colleges," and second, "They have not made adjustment to the conditions of the modern age."

Trask expressed doubt as "the norm for young people of college age." He went on to say that churches tend to run "rough-shod" over doubt. Trask described the theology presented to young people today as "erroneous of unacceptable," and said that churches must "update thinking and conception of their social role."

"Man was always a-seekin', a-yearnin' after a hunk of goals; and if he didn't find it on this earth, he made another one. This image of man was yanked out of existence forever and forever and forever and forever (have I said it enough?) and forever by the scientific, urban and religious revolution of the 17th century."

Rev. Joseph Mathews made this statement at a speech Monday afternoon in the Small Auditorium of the Nebraska

Union. The topic was "The World Revolution in the 20th century."

"We are living in a mutation in humanness," Mathews said. "The 20th century is the scientific revolution come of age."

The change from the medieval model of the universe to the present model today began with Newton in the 17th century, Mathews said.

The view of man as a victim of external forces, environment and early conditioning is gone along with this view, Mathews said. Today, Einstein is the symbol of the revolution come of age, just as Newton was the symbol of the revolution's beginning.

"I've never had any more life than I have right now, and I never will have any more life than I have right now," Mathews said. "The sense of identity comes from the dynamic, not the static; I'm not the same today as I was yesterday."

"The heart of the scientific revolution is statistical causation: men organize clues of the world and build a model by which he determines the civilizing process," he said.

"We live in a world in which we have to build models," Mathews said. "The new image of man is that of the predictor, who is responsible for who he is, and responsible for deciding for all men what history should be."

"The choice for man is no longer between good and evil," Mathews said, "but between being a human or a slob. I'm not a victim of the world; I have the capacity to use myself as I want."

"You have been given cosmic permission to choose," Mathews said, "between embracing life or rejecting life and building an illusion. I have the capacity to use myself as I want."

"In response to the question 'What does life mean?,' Mathews said, 'If you know, send me a postcard. Our sense of reality has altered; it doesn't stand still, it's a process. The glory and misery of being a human being is to decide how you're going to go around the clock.'"

At 7:30 Monday night, Mathews lectured on "The Image of Woman."

"Women frighten me," he said. "I am a man; I can never penetrate the universe of a woman."

The problem of modern woman, he said, is "to be a woman without losing the rights of being a competitor with men."

"The old image of a woman has collapsed," Mathews said, "and the new image has not yet formed. Women are no longer magnolia blossoms or French poodle."

"The female decided that she won't accept the sow image that man has forged for her," Mathews said, "or the pig-pen image of the home for the sow."

"Woman has entered into the arena of the world and said 'No more!' The price she paid was that she overdeveloped the masculine image in her."

Man in turn is sick because his role is being taken; he has degenerated into a cour-

Protege Program Selects Students

How does a senior come into contact with leaders in his field of study, both socially and on a "big brother" basis?

One way is through the Innocents Protege Program, sponsored by the Innocents Society each spring. A prospective lawyer, pharmacist or senior man from any other field of study at the University is placed in touch with one of Lincoln's outstanding men in the same field.

From the "Kick-off" banquet through to the end of the semester, the sponsor tries to introduce his protege into the line of work in which he specializes.

The program, co-sponsored by Doug Thom and Denny Swanstrom, will try to "familiarize and bring closer to the students the actual work connected with their field of study. The sponsor will orient the protege in his business and social life as much as possible."

The program also aims at giving these professional men a better view of some of the outstanding students and leaders of the University, and giving the students direct contact for future employment.

Students selected on the basis of their leadership scholarship and activities are

Seats Going Fast For KK's 'Molly'

There are no more $3.00 seats left for the Saturday night Kosmet Klub show, according to Buzz Brashear, ticket chairman.

"We still have seats for the Saturday show, as half of our $2.50 seats are sold," he said.

Tickets are still available in all price ranges for the Friday performance.

There will be room for anyone who wants to get in, on either of the nights, but the better seats "are going fast," he said.

Brashear emphasized there will be "no changing of sections even if there are available seats."

According to Brashear, this year's production is the biggest, best, and largest the Kosmet Klub has ever put on.

"The show has a $14,000 budget, and this makes it the biggest amateur production in Nebraska, and one of the largest in the nation," asserted Brashear.

"We are practicing at Pershing now, and all technical work is completed. The sets have been moved, and everything is going along nicely."

"I would like to say that we had of Kosmet Klub are gratified with the response we have had from the students, the people of Lincoln, and surrounding communities. This is our first attempt in many years to produce the show for two nights, and the response is really encouraging."

There will be 2,000 seated in the $2.50 section, and 1,500 in the $3.00 section each night, and any number of general admission seats are available," he said.

Tickets may be purchased in the lobby of the Student Union or the Pershing Auditorium box office.

"Come early, as the show starts promptly at eight o'clock," Brashear pointed out.

Eleven Top Alums Return For 'Masters'

The University will host the third Masters Program May 24 when 11 nationally known alumni will return to visit with students.

William Coufal is chairman of the Student Council committee in charge of the Masters Program which is sponsored jointly by the Student Council and the chancellor's office.

Returning alumni include:

Harold Andersen of Omaha, vice president and a director of the World Publishing Co.

Dr. Paul Bare of Wilmington, Del., director of patents and licensing, international department, DuPont de Nemours & Co.

Arthur Weaver, of Lincoln, president of Weaver-Minier Co. Ltd., an insurance firm.

Paul Babson of Boston, Mass., president of United Business Service Co.

Judge John Brown of Houston, Tex., judge in the U.S. Court of Appeals, Fifth District.

Herbert Brownell, Jr., of New York, N.Y. former attorney general and president of the New York Bar Association.

Harold Corey of Austin, Minn., chairman of the board, George A. Hormel Co.

Dr. James Jensen of Corvallis, Ore., president of Oregon State University.

William McCleery of Princeton, N.J., editor of the Princeton University magazine "University."

Eugene Robb of Albany, N.Y., publisher of the Times-Union and Knickerbocker News and president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Mrs. Harold Stebbins of Lincoln, director of women's activities for Station KFOP.

Senate Filings Open

Applications for candidates in this year's Associated Students of the University of Nebraska Student Senate elections have been available since Apr. 1 in the Student Affairs Office of the Administration Building.

The applications may be filed today through Apr. 13.

To be eligible, according to the new constitution, an applicant must be "a regularly enrolled member of the college he proposes to represent and must agree in writing to resign if he should terminate his enrollment in that college during the term of office for which he seeks election."

Also, applicants must be full-time undergraduate or graduate students.

The applicant must "meet University regulations for participation in extra-curricular activities."

Each candidate must be photographed. The photograph and filing information will be publicized in a manner specified by the Student Council.
