Wise Decisions

Dear Mr. Partsch:
After talking with several candidates for Student Senate, in an effort to determine their views, I reached these conclusions:
(1) The several thousand students who live off campus cannot be said to be represented by the Student Senate. Only those students living on campus are actually represented.
(2) All students pay the same amount, through tuition, for student government, whether they are represented or not.
(3) The candidates sampled ranged from intelligent, well-informed, thoughtful, to ignorant, hysterical, confused.
(4) Lack of interest and lack of effective communication prevent the student body from knowing the real qualifications of the candidates. All the candidates contacted by the writer stated that no other person had called them to learn their views.

As a result of conclusions (3) and (4) one might also assume that the outcome of the election will not necessarily be related to the candidates' qualifications, and that the ignorant and hysterical will be just as likely to win as the intelligent and thoughtful.
The Student Senate is good, in that it will provide valuable experience for its members. But this experience should not be gained at the expense of the entire student body. Let the mistakes of the Student Senate be small mistakes that do no permanent damage.

Let us hope that the Board of Regents and the Nebraska Legislature will not allow themselves to be influenced very much by this non-representative Student Senate. Let us hope that those gentlemen, with wisdom gained from years of experience, will continue to make sound decisions for the University of Nebraska, and that we, too, after as many years of experience, will be able to make wise decisions for our children when they attend the University of Nebraska.

Open Letter

Dear editor,
It should be understood at once that I am writing my own answer to the "Open Letter to David F. Trask," and that the following opinions are strictly my own.
There are too many points of dissension in the letter to permit my covering all of them; I shall discuss the ones that seem most important and most needful of discussion.
To begin, I shall not even protest the statement that the government is "... every one of these concepts ..." of responsibility, right-and-wrong morality, etc.; I shall merely observe that it is an unproven and, I think, unprovable statement.

we judged each man for his actions regardless of the group with which we might think him associated. Now it is different: I agree that it is different now; how many Catholics, Jews, Negroes, "dirty foreign immigrants" were judged on the merits alone during the late 19th and early 20th centuries, that crowning period of unrestrained free enterprise? It is only now, as we accept responsibility as a society, that we are beginning to judge men blindly, labeling them without thought, as the Libertarian judges us.
The argument that we deny individual responsibility

ity by forcing everyone to save for his old age is true and less than true. By requiring (forcing) everyone to participate in the Social Security program, we provide those who cannot save for their old age a dignified, responsible means of doing so, keeping them from the irresponsibility of begging.
I thank the Libertarian for admitting our compassion, our pity, if you will; I merely ask him not to condemn qualities us for membership in the human race. Am I not my brother's keeper?
