

—Skirting Other Campuses—

Hairy Problems Can Be 'Ironed Out' Or 'Canned'

Many coeds now spend Saturday afternoon at the ironing board. Ironing clothes? Perhaps, but more often ironing hair, says the Ball State News, Ball State of Muncie, Ind.

Swinging, straight, simple hair—if you haven't got it, get it. That's the attitude of many college women these days, and ironing their hair is one way they've found to get it.

Susie Campetti, Fort Wayne sophomore, decided to iron her hair "to go beat for finals. It's easy," she says, "just take a hot iron, unplug it, lay your hair on the ironing board and have someone iron it." But she warns that it should be ironed down rather than back and forth, and that it shouldn't be done too often because it can damage the hair.

Coeds with "too curly" hair have found another way to get that swinging, straight simple hair—they set it by wrapping it around beer cans, preferably empty. Cathy Stalker, Anderson freshman, says that six beer cans can do what 30 rollers used to. She considers them the best answer yet to really straighten hair, but the hair must be wet to use them effectively.

She admits that beer cans do have disadvantages. "I can't sleep on them and I don't dare go out in public. I get awfully funny looks when people see me."

Her name is Pamela. She shimies, she shakes and she crawls on her belly. She's a 4-foot, 9-inch boa constrictor. Steve Seabury, junior in chemical engineering, and Miller White, sophomore in wildlife management, wanted a snake for a pet. They ordered a Colombian boa constrictor from a supply house in Florida, according to the Maine Campus, University of Maine.

Their Tau Kappa Epsilon brothers hadn't heard of the plan until Pamela arrived, and White and Seabury were besieged by requests not to open the snake's box.

She has become a part of the house, however, but has to be kept under lock and key most of the time (to calm visitors' fears).

An 85-year-old Oakland real estate developer has cut a two-million-dollar endowment to the University of California from his will, says the Daily Californian.

Fred Reed said he was withdrawing the endowment until the authorities "have demonstrated they are running the University, rather than a bunch of children."

Reed said the bequest will stay cut until what he called "communist-infested instructors" are fired and the campus is rid of students who violate University rules.

It was the second time Reed has dropped the University from his will. He did it in 1961 until the University banned all Communist speakers.

Campus policemen at the City College of San Francisco are watching for malicious conduct in the schools parking lots from the roof of the Science Hall, says the Guardsman.

The police are equipped with binoculars and two-way radios.

The system has been implemented to combat car-theft ring operating in the area, and also to keep traffic running smoothly in the roads leading to the College.

Drawings Being Made For New Dent College

Working drawings are now being made for the new College of Dentistry Building to be constructed on East Campus. The call for bids probably will be made early this fall.

The new two-story masonry building, designed by Kensington, Durham and Richardson of Omaha, will be located at 40th and Holdrege, according to Carl Donaldson, University business manager.

The main entrance will be on the second level where offices and clinics will be located. The lower level will include classrooms, laboratories, a library, seminar rooms, research laboratories, and a studio for closed-circuit television.

When completed, the new building will permit an increase in enrollment, 56 first-year students instead of the present limit of 35, said Dr. Ralph Ireland, dean of the College of Dentistry. In addition, the building will house the dental hygiene program initiated last fall with the help of a grant from the W. K. Kellogg Foundation. Ten students are enrolled in the first-year class in dental hygiene and the new building will make it possible to accommodate 20 first-year students.

Increased space in the new building also will make possible greater flexibility in dental programs, Ireland said. Additional classrooms, laboratories and clinics will provide opportunities to experiment with new programs.

Students will be able to work in semi-privacy in dental stations or clinics similar to dental offices. There will be 84 stations large enough so that students can make use of auxiliary assistants as in their future practices.

Ireland feels that the use of closed-circuit television will provide an entirely new method of teaching dental procedures.

"Only a few students can crowd around to see certain techniques performed on a patient, but the television camera can come in close and provide a picture for all," he said.

After the move to the new building, the College of Dentistry will be self-contained. Laboratories will be included for teaching certain basic sciences which dental students now take with students from other colleges of the University will teach the courses, but they will be able to tailor the courses to meet the needs of dental students.

Contracts for the new building must be let by January 1, 1966, to qualify for the $2.5 million in federal funds approved by the U.S. Public Health Service last fall.

The 1963 Nebraska Legislature appropriated $1.7 million for the facility and $143,000 has been requested from the current Legislature to complete the funding.
