

Esquenazi, Copple Receive Nominations ...Deadline Extended

Four more letters have been received nominating persons for the Outstanding Nebraskan Award. Two instructors, Dr. Roberto Esquenazi-Mayo and R. Neale Copple were nominated, as well as Joan Skinner and Suzi Walburn.

Nebraskan Editor Frank Partsch has extended the deadline for nominations to 4 p.m. tomorrow due to the "small number of nominations which have been received." Partsch said "We feel that there are more possibilities for this award.

and we want to make sure that there is ample time for their friends to nominate them."

Esquenazi

Dr. Roberto Esquenazi-

Mayo, chairman of the Romance Language Department had been nominated for the Outstanding Nebraskan award.

The letter nominating Esquenazi cited him as "a faculty member who has contributed more to the University of Nebraska in his four years of residence than many of his colleagues."

"He has not only been active in his field of Romance Languages through expanding the curriculum but also has been responsible for several new programs in the area of Latin American studies.

"Dr. Esquenazi played an important part in the initiation of the exchange program between the University and El Colegio de Mexico under which superior students in Spanish are eligible to spend their junior year studying in Mexico City under a State Department grant.

"He has also established the field of Latin American Studies at the University and serves as the director. Under this new program students are eligible to concentrate their study in Latin American history, politics, geography and the study of the language.

"This past semester Dr. Esquenazi served as faculty advisor for the All University Fund."

"However, perhaps the main reason that he should be selected to receive the Outstanding Nebraskan award, is that he is truly outstanding in his field and in his profession as a teacher.

"Dr. Esquenazi is always willing to console students and take time from his busy schedule to help them. He is known as a "hard" teacher and he is. Students who have taken a course under him can testify to the fact that they have indeed learned something.

"I feel the Daily Nebraskan would do well to add the name of Dr. Roberto-Esquenazi-Mayo to the list of Outstanding Nebraskans," the letter concluded.

better journalists for the work, and they are much happier when they have accomplished the desired results."

Copple has served as advisor to the Daily Nebraskan, but "has enough respect for the ability of the staff to allow them to make the major decisions for the paper. He realizes that only through taking responsibility will students learn to stand on their own feet."

"A major figure at the School of Journalism, Mr. Copple stands as a man who knows his business and has the ability to impart this knowledge to his students," according to the letter.

He is the author of a book on the history of Lincoln, which he compiled for the Lincoln Centennial in 1959. "This work—no small job, demonstrates the effort Mr. Copple puts into any job he begins," the letter said.

The letter concluded that Copple "deserves such an award, as any of his students will testify."

Miss Skinner

In the letter nominating Joanie Skinner for Outstanding Nebraskan, she was cited as having "outstanding ability to organize and lead groups, unequalled loyalty to her campus and her state and devotion to the interests of others."

"Joanie combines scholarship and leadership in activities with a true understanding of people and campus, local and national problems and is a true friend to anyone who comes in contact with her.

"Joanie has served the campus as vice-president of AWS, president of Ag Union, vice-president of Alpha Chi Omega and president of Mortar Board. Her honors include Miss Sadie Hawkins, Varsity Dairy Princess, Homecoming Attendant and finalist for Ideal Nebraska Coed.

"She has been active in 4-H work for ten years and was paid the highest national honor that can go to a 4-H club member from the American Institute of Cooperation. She served as chairman of the youth program at the 36th annual AIC meeting at Michigan State.

"Joanie is truly an outstanding Nebraskan, for she

Copple

The letter nominating Copple referred to him as "an intelligent man and a man who helped the University School of Journalism become one of the better schools in the country today."

The letter said that Copple's idea for starting the Depth Reporting class has "brought distinction to the University, since this idea is being utilized in other schools throughout the country."

"Mr. Copple is an instructor who demands near-perfection from his students, and usually manages to get it," according to the letter. "He makes students work—and work hard, but as a result they learn, they become

Year's Final Theater Play To Be Given

The University of Nebraska Theater's final production of the year, Shakespeare's "Antony and Cleopatra," will be staged Thursday through Sunday at Howell Memorial Theater.

Curtain time each evening is 8 p.m.

Dr. William Morgan, associate professor of speech and dramatic art, and director of the play, said the production will give a Nebraska audience an opportunity to see this famous, tragic love story as it was depicted by the greatest playwright in the English language.

Clarence Croft, a graduate student majoring in speech and dramatic art, will play the lead role of Antony.

The part of Cleopatra will be played by Kazma Ibsen, a senior in the College of Arts and Sciences. Miss Ibsen was the winner of the "Dallas" award in 1964 for her performance in "Long Day's Journey Into Night." The award is presented to the best student actress of the year.

Other major roles: Janice Woelfle Clema as Octavia; Thomas Crawley as Octavius Caesar; Jerry Mayer as Enobarbus; and John Guinty as Lepidus.

LABOR LEADER ATTACKS PAST GOP LEGISLATION

By STEVE JONDON
Junior Staff Writer

The most detrimental legislation against the AFL-CIO has been introduced by the Republican party, according to state AFL-CIO president Richard Nisley.

At the final meeting of the Young Republicans, club members and visitors, such as the speaker of the Nebraska Legislature and a representative from the National Farmers Organization, listened to Nisley speak on the political side of the labor union.

The non-partisan political arm of the AFL-CIO is the National Committee on Political Education (COPE), Nisley said, and it recommends candidates to union members.

Organized to encourage voting and citizenship among union members, COPE bases its choices on records and platforms of the candidates, he said.

"Candidates for president and vice president are recommended by the General Board of AFL-CIO," Nisley said. "COPE recommends on the local and state level."

"COPE is not a political party," he said. "It supports candidates regardless of political affiliation. COPE provides union members with facts about issues."

COPE is supported by voluntary contributions, Nisley said.

Its aim is to "maintain prosperity, security and better education," Nisley said, and it "works with other citizens who share a concern for programs affecting the national welfare."

Speaking directly to Republicans, Nisley said, "We have not divorced the Republican party; they divorced us."

"We ought to have a broader outlook in the Republican party," he said. "You are losing the support of farmers and labor, who used to be your friends."

Nisley cited instances of how union representatives have been refused an opportunity to speak and set down labor's views.

"We have common ground with the Republican party," Nisley said, "but two of the most detrimental bills to labor's aims have been introduced by the Republican party."

Nisley said later. "I've seen cases of to Work" law guarantees no rights whatsoever, and is a "tool used by management."

"In the 19 right to work states," he said, "wages are the lowest."

In response to questions, Nisley gave some of the union's policies.

"The AFL-CIO supports the poverty program and aid to education," Nisley said. "It's better to have government planning than to have poverty, illiteracy and unemployment."

"When you have these unhealthy elements," he said, "communism can move in."

On the subject of teachers in labor unions, Nisley asked, "Is it right that the teacher has nothing to say about hours and wages?"

There are only 16 teachers in unions in Nebraska, he said, but teaching unions are successful in selected areas.

"You've got slave labor in Nebraska," Nisley said later. "I've seen cases of 12-13 hours a day at 60-70 cents per hour, and the legislature is reluctant to look at it."

The state also needs a broader income tax, Nisley said.

"The most aggressive tax is a sales tax," he said, because it taxes regardless of income.

Alumni Round-Up Selects Chairman

William Rolfsmeyer of Lincoln has been named chairman of the 1965 Alumni Round Up activities June 11-13 at the University.

A 1949 graduate of the University, Rolfsmeyer is a salesman for the Nebraska Farmer Printing Co. His assistant will be Dr. Richard Wieland, a Lincoln dentist, who was graduated from the University in 1956.

The annual Alumni Round-Up luncheon will be held at 12:15 p.m., Saturday, June 12, at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education. Chancellor Clifford Hardin will be the main speaker.

New Summer Class To Meet In Canyon

An unusual plan for summer study at the University and the University of Denver will include the pocked cliffs of Frijoles Canyon in New Mexico as classrooms.

Courses on ethnology of the Southwest, geography of Colorado, and the Rocky Mountain area and aerospace education for teachers will be held during July and August at the Universities.

The name of the summer plan is the Rocky Mountain Campus for University Directed Studies. It was developed by the National Education Association, state affiliated educational associations, the two Universities and Frontier Airlines.

Students, all teachers, will spend part of their time in regular classrooms, but most of the time will be spent on travel through Indian mines, ruins, uranium and potash mines, industrial plants, national parks, desert flatlands, aerospace laboratories and military installations.

Costs range from $703.38 for the geography course at Denver to $450.68 for the aerospace study at Nebraska.

The prices include air transportation, meals and accommodation during classes and field trips.

Phi Beta Kappa Holds Initiation Ceremonies

Members of Phi Beta Kappa, liberal arts and sciences honorary at the University of Nebraska, held initiation ceremonies Sunday for 50 students elected to the honorary this year.

The annual ceremony was at 3 p.m. in the Nebraska Union, room 232. Dr. Ross Garner, professor of English, was guest speaker.
