Direct from an around-the-world-tour, Lords will be seen at 8 p.m. July 14 in the Nebraska Union Ballroom.

The University combined orchestra and chorus concert will be presented at 8 p.m. July 21 in the Nebraska Union Ballroom.

At 8 p.m. on July 28, prize winning movie short subjects will be shown in the Nebraska Union Ballroom in response to demands for sophisticated cinema.

The films range from cartoons to "tongue in cheek" experimental films.

Under the summer cinema series, three areas of films will be presented to summer session participants.

Cinema '65 will include the best of the films of recent years. These presentations will be Mondays at 7 p.m. in the Nebraska Union Auditorium.

Cinema International will present the best foreign films of recent years. These films will be shown Thursdays at 7 p.m. This series alternates with the Classique II series.

The Classique II series will present the best films of the 1920's and 1930's.

All persons enrolled in the summer session and their families and friends are invited to participate in all special programs.

Photography Job Open Part-Time

A part-time job is open to a University student with experience in darkroom work.

The person would work as a lab assistant in an evening photography course taught Monday and Tuesday evenings. The job will involve six hours a week, and could be extended into the school year next September.

For information, see Richard Cote tonight at the School of Journalism or leave a message at the journalism office.

Summer Nebraskan: A Thinking Adventure

The Summer Nebraskan is a newspaper unto itself, entirely separate from the Daily Nebraskan, which is published during the regular school year.

This summer paper, which will be published for the eight weeks of summer session, is designed for adventure and experimentation.

The adventure arises from the use of new and different content materials, unlike those of the regular 'news' paper. The experimentation will be used in the page layout. New and different layouts will be used to 'see how they look' and their effect on the reading public.

This paper will be devoted more to the 'depth' approach of news, rather than the everyday reporting job usually characterizing the Nebraskan.

By depth is meant a story which is well-backgrounded and researched. Contrasted to the on-the-spot coverage story, the depth story presents a full view of a subject or situation.

The idea for a depth reporting class at the University was originated by R. Neale Cople, who will be an adviser to the paper this summer.

Editing the paper will be Priscilla Mullins, a senior majoring in journalism; and handling advertising and circulation will be Business Manager Holly Spence, a June graduate from the School of Journalism.

Your comments and criticisms are invited, for this is your newspaper. Suggestions for news areas overlooked will also be welcome.

It is the hope of the staff that this paper will serve a purpose for you, the reader. We hope to bring you pleasure in reading and thinking.
