

Sam's Salvos . . .

Missouri Tickets Sold

By Bob Samuelson

Do you have your Missouri Tickets? If so, you're among the few university students who are so fortunate. The following conversation took place last Monday after I wormed my way into a "closed coliseum ticket office."

"When do the Missouri tickets go on sale to students?" I asked naively.

"Oh, Missouri's not a University approved migration," said the secretary.

"Migration? Who said anything about a migration? We all know such a thing doesn't exist." (Exchange of mutual winks.) "All I want to know is when the Missouri tickets go on sale to the students."

"The Missouri game now has many more orders than we can fill, and has had for some time," she said with the strained politeness of some one who has said the same thing many times. "It's not an official migration," she added as an after thought.

"I know. Tell me, since I am a University student, 21 years old and a senior, what are my chances of pre-empting a person who has ordered tickets who never had an affiliation with the University in any way?" (I was getting desperate about this time.)

"No chance whatever," she said.

"Do you mean that a Canadian papyrus picker who ordered last fall would get precedence over me?" I asked incredulously.

"As a matter of fact, the first order WAS from a papyrus picker," she said.

"Canadian?"

"No. Polynesian."

"Oh," I said as I walked dejectedly from the office.

"And remember," she called after me, "This isn't a University sponsored migration."

"What isn't," I said as I made plans to listen to the best game of the year over the radio.

The only way for the vast majority of University students to get to see the Missouri game will be to dole out a not-so-small sum of money to one of those train tours or bus tours which have grabbed up the tickets in carloads. . . simply because they ordered them first.

If you think this is an unfair way of distributing tickets, mention it to your student senate representative or drop a card to the Senate office in the Union.

NEBRASKAN WANT ADS

These low-cost rates apply to all classified advertising in the Daily Nebraskan: standard rate of 3¢ per word and minimum charge of 50¢ per classified insertion.

Payment for these ads will fall into two categories: (1) ads running less than one week in succession must be paid for before insertion; (2) ads running for more than one week will be paid weekly.

Rood Awakening

By Mick Rood

It's that time of year again. The far-away experts have put Nebraska football on a pedestal again. . . a lofty one at that.

This national ranking is getting habitual, but so is something else. Nebraska sportswriters gnashing their teeth, exchanging incredulous glances and pleading that some Husker weaknesses won't allow all that success.

It reminds one of other annual conditioned responses—conservatives bemoaning federal spending, Southerners opposing civil rights legislation and fiscal "experts" fearing the climbing federal debt. These people can't recognize good when it is embracing them. . . neither can the Nebraska area sports writers.

Please guys, let us accept a rare privilege. The privilege of watching and writing about a championship team. One claims Nebraska's pass defense is as yet "untested" and the offensive line may never measure up. The same veteran observer begs off with hopes that Bob Devaney's team can escape the season with two losses.

Par For Course?

Another sets an 8-2 win-loss record as "par" for the course. Which tells me he must carry a high golf handicap and wants to shove it off on Scarlet football fortunes. What optimism!

That same writer claims Nebraska will inevitably lose one of the last three games, leaving the team 9-1. Thanks much. . . he's so charitable.

Now, shall we part with the local caution and accept the fact that Nebraska has as good a chance as Texas, Arkansas, or Southern Cal to achieve the mythical national championship.

Missouri Scare

Also, shall we treat the Missouri Scare more objectively. Most of the fear of losing to Missouri comes from tradition. Let us remember participants from futile Tiger games are all gone. We have a team that should beat Devaney at Columbia on the strength of 1) the most diversified offense in the Devaney period 2) the deepest and strongest defense in the Devaney period 3) high team morale versed in Devaney football strategy of game-by-game winning football.

If we lose. . . sure everyone will shed a tear, but please gentleman of the sporting press, let's give the best team we have had in years a chance.

It isn't going to hurt team morale to predict a perfect season. They deserve it. If big press bothers them, that is their major weakness. If anything, the big build-up should bolster a well-deserved pride, nothing more. I think Bob Devaney's teams are all business on the field; they enjoy the press after the game.

Causes Of Defeat

Here are some possible causes of defeat, a remote possibility: 1) Reluctance to use passing when the running game breaks down early. That hesitancy might have cost the Oklahoma game last year. 2) Failure of the offensive line to produce. 3) Failure to have a diversified running game to compliment what should be wide-open passing.

I expect to see a noticeably more varied offense this year, and a team with an even chance for number one. Hope you do too.

Intramurals Organize; Schedule Announced

A meeting of all intramural managers will be held tonight at 7:00 p.m. in the Men's Physical Education building, according to Joe Meier, supervisor of the University Intramural Sports Program.

All fraternity, dormitory and independent teams interested in participating in any of the fall intramural events should have a representative present.

Scheduling and rules for fall intramurals will be discussed tonight. The meeting will also discuss the formation of a referee clinic which will meet once a week. The first referee clinic is scheduled for 7:00 p.m. Thursday, at the Men's PE Building.

Football is not the only fall intramural sport. Along with horseshoes are scheduled as individual competitor sports.

Registration for football A and B teams and golf must be completed by Friday. Team managers must submit their football team rosters while golfers will sign up individually.

Students interested in tennis and horseshoes will also sign up individually. According to Meier, registration for these sports are due Tuesday.
