

MISS MABEL FOSSLER . . . Wants a scarlet and cream hat, please.

Spirit Still Burns In Golden Years

University alums are often interested in their alma mater, but few display the spirit of two ladies from California.

In a letter to the Daily Nebraskan, Miss Mabel Fossler of Pasadena, (class of '07) requested a year's subscription to the paper for herself and her sister, Miss Anna Fossler (class of '95.)

But Miss Fossler wants to know more about the University. Her letter said in part:

"Write and tell me about that scarlet and cream hat. I want one—large size—I have head and hair to put into it. How much is it?"

"Also, I would like some NU postal cards, and for that I enclosed an extra $1.

"We are well for our ages, holding our own, and are interested in the University.

Sincerely,

Mabel"

The Daily Nebraskan thanks you, Mabel, for your interest. Your Daily Nebraskans are on the way—and we hope that you'll write us again on some of those NU post cards we're sending you.

Students Pleased, Disappointed With Decision To Discontinue Homecoming Display Award

By Wayne Kreuscher
Senior Staff Writer

What would the campus be like without Homecoming displays?

Is all the time, work and money really worth it?

Do the advantages outnumber the disadvantages or vice versa?

These are questions which many students and student organizations are now asking themselves.

The controversy has persisted for many years, but this year with the Innocents' announcement that it has withdrawn sponsorship of the Homecoming display award, these questions are especially pertinent.

Campus opinion seems to be mixed and almost an equal amount of people appear to stand on both sides of the controversy.

Helene Weinberg expressed the common complaint that the displays cost too much and take up too much study time.

"All this money and time can be used for better things," she said. "The time can be used studying and the money spent for community projects."

Another student who agrees with her is Nancy Baker. "It would be sad to abandon the whole Homecoming festival," she explained, "but the display effort should be turned toward something charitable."

Agreeing that the displays do take up a great deal of time and especially hurt freshmen who are studying for their first hour exams, Bob Schuchman put a different light on the question.

"I personally like the idea of the displays," he said, "but I found out when I was a freshman and worked on them for nearly two weeks that my studying got terrifically behind. Some sort of arrangement should be made with Administration so that work on the displays would not come at the same time as the first set of hour exams."

"I don't think it would be too bad an idea to get rid of the displays," said Nancy Babin. "So much money and time is put into them."

Not everyone agrees that the disadvantages of work, time and money out number the advantages of the displays.

"I like the displays," said Sudie Holman. "They are a good tradition and fun to do. They build spirit and I really don't think freshmen have to put too much work into them."

Dobie Olsen agreed with her and said, "I think we should continue having displays as they are a tradition which lots of people look forward to."

Jim Demars remarked, "Although they take a lot of effort, money and time they wouldn't hurt studying as much if instructors didn't make it a point to give tests then."

Tranda Schultz stressed the fact that they are good tradition and a "good time to get to know the people in your house."

"They are definitely one of the most outstanding things done on campus all year," said Dan Doud, "and it would be too bad to see them just disappear."

John King pointed out that they were a good tradition, but that they shouldn't be done in the fall so close to Kosmet Klub.

"Work on both Kosmet Klub and the Homecoming displays is just too much, but if they were separated more it wouldn't hurt anyone's studying," he said.

Kathy Gates said she thought "all the work and time and money is part of the tradition and fun."

"We'd lack a lot of spirit without them," said Susie Lincoln, "and it's a great time when the school can have fun and the freshmen can show enthusiasm for their new school."

One freshman had his own views on the whole controversy. "I'm only a freshman," said Mike Naden, "and I haven't had to work on them yet, but I can't help but think a great tradition that has been here so long shouldn't be just completely forgotten."

"Studying is the first and most important thing, but a little work on a display maybe late one night and a few afternoons shouldn't hurt one's grades, but make him feel a part of the school and its great tradition."

Two-week Tour Benefits Students

By Jane Palmer

"I benefited more from this one month than from a whole semester at school" remarked Larry Engelkemier, a University Agriculture Economics major.

Larry was speaking of the Danforth award, which allowed him and Janice Luebke to travel to St. Louis for two weeks of tours and to a camp in Stony Lake, Mich. for two weeks.

"Our busy schedule for the two weeks in St. Louis included first-hand observation of modern business activities in home economics and related areas," said Janice, who is now student teaching at North High in Omaha.

Larry toured a bank, the grain exchange, and McDonald Air Craft, where the Gemini Capsules are assembled. He said that these tours were beneficial because they "gave you an idea of where you were going in the business world with agriculture."

DRIZZLE . . . Puts damper on Thursday's atmosphere; what will Saturday bring?

Weatherman Forecasts Good Playing Condition

Cornhusker football fans needn't worry about getting wet at the Nebraska opener against Texas Christian University Saturday. The airport weather bureau is forecasting partly cloudy skies, temperatures around 52 with no chance of rain for the 2 p.m. game time.

Other Big Eight contests will be played under similar conditions.

Iowa State will meet Drake at Des Moines under cloudy skies with temperature about 50. Bloomington, Ind., the site of the Kansas State-Indiana battle, will be wet with temperatures in the 60's.

Colorado and Wisconsin play at Madison where skies will be cloudy and temperatures in the 40's.

The Kentucky-Missouri game at Columbia should have partly cloudy skies and temperatures in the mid 50's. Kansas will meet Texas Tech at Lubbock, where cloudy skies and temperatures in the 50's should prevail.

The Oklahoma State-Arkansas game at Fayetteville should also be played under partly cloudy skies. Temperatures are expected to be in the upper 70's.
