

Lemon's Book Nominated For Pulitzer Competition

By Bruce Giles
Junior Staff Writer
Oxford Publishing Company

has selected the book, "The Partial Critics", written by Dr. Lee Lemon, associate professor of English at the University, to represent the publishing company in the 1965 Pulitzer Prize competitions.

Lemon, who said his selection was "a complete surprise", was informed of his success in a letter from the publisher.

"The letter said my book had been turned over to the Pulitzer selection committee," he noted.

Lemon, who is married and has four children, said of his wife jokingly, "It's the first time I've managed to surprise her."

The book, which was officially released today, but which he said had been on book stands before, was begun in 1957. At that time, Lemon was teaching at the University of Illinois at Chicago.

During my classes then, Lemon noted, "I got questions from students on 'What good is literature?' and 'What can it do?'"

The answers which were offered to these questions often seemed beside the point, he recalled.

The book itself is a "survey of modern literary theory as it applies to poetry," said Lemon. "The chief question in the book is how modern critics have judged poems," he said. What assumptions the critics use, what their techniques are and the implications of these techniques are other questions answered in the book.

Lemon has been at the University since 1961 and has spent that portion of his time devoted to his book in "getting it down to publishable size."

The Pulitzer Prizes, for which Lemon's book has been nominated, were begun when Joseph Pulitzer endowed $250,000 to a Pulitzer Scholarship Fund.

Prizes are awarded in accordance with Pulitzer's provisions for outstanding work in journalism, general literature, music and art.

Lemon, who is on a leave of absence from the University until the end of the current semester, is currently working on another book.

"I've just been sitting at the typewriter and throwing pages away," he said.

When asked if he would complete the new book before the end of the semester, he said, "I hope to, but don't expect to."

Meanwhile, awaiting further word of the Pulitzer committee decision, Lemon added calmly, "I wish to sit down and let happen what will happen."

NU Enrollment

The official fall enrollment figure for the University is 15,125. This represents an increase of 2,224 over last year's enrollment and exceeds by about 800 the enrollment predicted by the University.

Dr. Floyd Hoover, registrar, said the increase in students is the equivalent of adding two medium-sized liberal arts colleges to the University. Chancellor Clifford Hardin said the increase may be the largest the University will experience in a single year for some time to come.

This marks the seventh straight fall term that University enrollments have advanced, and represents a gain of 6,308 students since the fall of 1960.

The man-woman ratio on campus remains at last year's mark of 2-1.

Hardin thanked faculty members for "the extraordinary effort so many of you have made during these past several weeks that we might disappoint as few students as possible." Lee Chatfield, associate dean of Student Affairs said he wished to express "deep appreciation for the patience of students and faculty in working through this (registration)!"

Registration closed Monday but late registrations are being accepted and should increase the total enrollment slightly.

Viet Protest Receives World-Wide Attention

Plans of the University of California-based Viet Nam Day Committee (VDC) for International Days of Protest on Oct. 15 and 16 have gained world-wide attention and support.

According to a release sent out by the VDC office at Berkeley, demonstrations against the war in Viet Nam will be held in Europe, North and South America and Asia on these days.

The VDC release noted that colleges and universities will be the principal rallying grounds for the anti-war action. The release read in part: "In at least 30 American cities, coast to coast, U.S. citizens will raise their voices to condemn the war horrors being committed in their name."

The national organization, Students for a Democratic Society is lending its support to the VDC cause.

The VDC list eighteen U.S. cities where demonstrations against the war in Viet Nam will be held during the days of protest. Among them are Atlanta, Boston, Madison, St. Paul, Seattle and Portland.
