In the unpredictable world of college football, Nebraska tops the UPI college coaches ranking for the third consecutive week. The AP sports writers and broadcasters didn't treat the Huskers so kindly, as they gave the Scarlet a third place ranking, behind Arkansas and Michigan State.

The Huskers slipped to the third place rating this week, trailing the leading Razorbacks by 78 points. The rating is not much of a credit to the Huskers, who were a mere three points behind top-ranked Texas last week and the Husker 41-point stomping of Kansas State. Saturday's scoring rampage put the Huskers at the top college scorers, with a 183 point total.

The Big Eight statistics were released today, and it was a pleasant surprise to see four Huskers in the League's top five scorers. What is surprising is Nebraska's Charlie Winters, who is tied for the scoring lead with Colorado's Frank Rogers at 30 points. Winters is the Huskers' third-string sophomore fullback whose hard, brilliant running has proved to be a ground gainer and a crowd pleaser so far this season.

Rogers is Colorado's kicking ace; he has kept the Golden Buffs games and himself in the scoring lead with his talented toe. His longest field goal tally of his seven season successes, was from 48-yards out.

Nebraska entertains Colorado at Memorial Stadium Saturday, meeting the Buffs in the Huskers' homecoming. This will be the second homecoming game in a row for the Buffs. They didn't fare too well in their homecoming game, having to play Iowa State to a 10-10 fourth quarter tie.

A possibility is that Colorado might have been looking ahead to this week's game and let the Cyclones surprised them with the tie. However, Colorado is still undefeated for the season, with a record of 3-0-2. Both of the Buff's ties have come against a common foe, Wisconsin 0-0 in their opener and Saturday's Iowa State game. Their 36-0 win over Kansas State compared with Nebraska's 41-0 victory.

Nebraska blanked Wisconsin 37-0 and rolled over Iowa State and are picked as winners over the young Buffs.

In interviews with Wildcat players Saturday, the Kansas players noted that both Colorado and Nebraska have a fast backfield, but pick the Huskers to top the Buffs. Nebraska's game, the Wildcat players agreed, would be Missouri, with either team capable of winning. The players declined to say which team they thought would have an advantage but said that the winner would be whoever got the "breaks."

In Saturday's contest the Wildcats cut down considerably on their mistakes compared to previous game performances; the miscues they made, however, proved costly. A short punt, a fumble and an intercepted pass were all converted to touchdowns by the Huskers.

Although the typical Wildcat fan tried to change the subject to basketball, he was quick to point out that the Wildcats do have a good defensive unit, final score being no indicator.

"The defensive unit is probably one of the nation's best," the fan exclaimed. "It actually plays two games, one in the first half and one in the second half, because the offensive unit isn't ever able to get a drive going."

Whether the fan knew it or not, his guess held true Saturday as the Husker offense dominated play throughout the game against the tired but determined Wildcat defense.

Huskers Dominate Individual Statistics

An abundance of talent at their positions has helped push Colorado's Frank Rogers and Nebraska's Charlie Winters into a tie for the scoring lead in the Big Eight Conference at the halfway point of the season.

Nebraska's "Choo-Choo" has stormed across the goal line five times while gaining 118 yards in 29 carries—this means a six-pointer every sixth time he is handed the ball.

In a head-to-head meeting, McCall outdid Iowa State's Tim Van Galder by 71 yards, 142-71, to take over the total offense leadership. This is his second stand at the top for the year as the lead rotates among Van Galder, Kansas State's Vic Castillo, who again holds the passing top, and himself.

Nebraska Leads Five Team Areas

The expected is near. Nebraska has five of the team statistical leads in the Big Eight Conference and has taken dead aim on the sixth as it attempts to become the first to sweep all six in a season.

Just missing the grand sweep by one last year, Nebraska now has to catch only Kansas in pass defense to put the Cornhuskers atop all six. Since the start of the season the Jayhawkers have been best in pass defense, this week showing an 80-yard allowance. Nebraska is second at 98.8, and the margin is shrinking.

In fact, a general tightening of the Nebraska defense in the last three weeks has seen the Cornhuskers drop their average almost 25 yards in rushing, 54 in passing, and 70 overall.

This move by the Nebraska Black Shirts is not only shown by the lead in rushing and total defense and the second spot in pass allowance, but also in the scoring column. In the last three games no points have gone on the opponent's side of the ledger.

Offensively, the Nebraskans now have a 424.4 average in total offense to become the first team in the Conference to rack up over 2,000 yards and score over 150 points—183 to be exact—let alone 100 points. Both of these totals, however, are still off the record pace set by the 1965 Oklahoma team, which scored 466 points and gained 4,817 yards.

Also apparently out of the Cornhuskers' reach is the seasonal rushing record of 3,910 by the same Oklahoma unit. The Nebraskans are going along with a lofty 293 mark.

The lead for the Nebraskans in pass offense—this is the first time this year they have been atop this area—came after a firsthand battle with Kansas State, last week's leader. The bulge for the Lincoln is the slimmest of their collection, 131.4 to 130 for the Wildcats.

In the other two offensive categories, Missouri is second best with a 261 rushing average and 321 total mark. Defensively, the most pressure being put on the Huskers is supplied by Colorado, which shows a 75.2 rushing defensive standard and 182.8 total overall.

John Lauritzen wanted further knowledge

He's finding it at Western Electric

When the University of Nevada awarded John Lauritzen his B.S.E.E. in 1961, it was only the first big step in the learning program he envisions for himself. This led him to Western Electric. For WE agrees that ever-increasing knowledge is essential to the development of its engineers—and is helping John in furthering his education.

John attended one of Western Electric's three Graduate Engineering Training Centers and graduated with honors. Now, through the Company-paid Tuition Refund Plan, John is working toward his Master's in Industrial Management at Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute. He is currently a planning engineer developing test equipment for the Bell System's revolutionary electronic telephone switching system.

If you set the highest standards for yourself, both educationally and professionally, we should talk. Western Electric's vast communications job as manufacturing unit of the Bell System provides many opportunities for fast-moving careers for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers, as well as for physical science, liberal arts and business majors. Get your copy of the Western Electric Career Opportunities booklet from your Placement Officer. And be sure to arrange for an interview when the Bell System recruiting team visits your campus.
