Presidents Support Drinking Statement

The issue of student drinking and the University's interest and enforcement of alcoholic laws has recently become a live and relevant issue on the University campus.

One fraternity alumni club describes, in a letter to parents, the University administration's present attitude as one of "increased activity and pressure on the part of the administration concerning the use of alcoholic beverages by students—and particularly those students associated with organized houses on campus—

The letter continues, "Through our alumni and active members who are in association with the administration of the University of Nebraska, we are becoming increasingly aware of the possibilities of severe sanctions being imposed upon students and organizations involved in the use of alcoholic beverages."

"Such sanctions can, and very likely will, include the lifting of a fraternity's charter and the closing of the house on this campus," it said.

The Interfraternity Council will vote Wednesday night on an amendment to the by-laws of the council concerning drinking. The amendment says:

Section 1. No alcoholic beverage whatsoever shall be present in the charter house on the property of any fraternity.

Section 2. No funds or accounts controlled by the chapter shall be used for the purchase, directly or indirectly, of any alcoholic beverage.

Section 3. The fraternity organization shall not be used in any manner for the formation of house functions involving alcoholic beverages.

A statement to the IFC from the IFC executive committee regarding drinking said, "Responsible fraternity leaders find little difficulty in accepting the reasonableness of the University's concern yet they are hampered as elected officers by the attitude of their members stemming from illegal and irresponsible high school drinking, alumni indifference and example, and the traditional attitude that no adult social function can be satisfying without alcoholic beverages."

The statement points out that "every fraternity member should recognize that their attitude and action in this area contain the elements for improvement or for destruction of the fraternity system."

Under "alcoholic beverages" the campus handbook says, "The purchase, possession, or consumption of alcoholic beverages by minors, or the possession of alcoholic beverages on State property is a violation of law and the University code. The possession or consumption of alcoholic beverages in student residences and at all social functions of University organizations or groups is a violation of the University code."

Interviews with fraternity leaders seemed to indicate that most fraternities were in agreement with the amendment and resolution concerning drinking but that others questioned the effectiveness of the proposals.

Buzz Madsen, president of the IFC, said that "drinking as a public image of fraternities is a problem and the measures will accomplish something to correct the error."

"We have spent much time discussing the matter with Administration and the Board of Control and have read policy statements from several national fraternities. Then we came to our decision," Madsen explained.

"As far as the proposals state," he explained, "fraternities cannot be the organs to buy alcoholic beverages or organize a party involving them. We are simply trying to deal with this problem realistically."

One fraternity president expressed surprise that the matter was brought up at all. "I thought that it was taken care of in the IFC constitution," he said.

John Baldwin, president of Alpha Tau Omega, said, "The Administration has no choice but to enforce the existing laws of Nebraska. In the past, enforcement has been rather lax and things got out of hand. Now a crackdown is taking place."

"Just thinking and talking about it has already accomplished something. Things have been going very well in the past two months," he commented.

"The IFC resolution is an example of the fraternities' tackling the matter by themselves by stating that the house cannot be used as a medium where liquor is concerned," he said.

Stan Miller, president of Beta Sigma Psi and vice president of IFC described the purpose of the proposals as "one of trying to educate the individual as to the effects and causes of the drink-

'Policies Fashioned By Many'

By Wayne Kreuscher

Ten or maybe a thousand people, the building across the street from the Union, the deans of the colleges, maybe even the museum and library directors—all of these might be included in the ambiguous term "administration."

Newspapers, teachers, students and the Nebraska public either compliment or criticize the University administration, but most don't know just what they are criticizing.

No Descriptive Meaning
G. Robert Ross, vice chancellor and dean of student affairs, said that he personally never uses the word "administration" because it has no descriptive meaning.

"I never know what office people are referring to when they say 'administration,'" he explained.

Some of the confusion is caused because people don't really understand who makes the University policy. "It is not made necessarily by the administrators," he said.

Ross explained that University policy is made by the "Board of Regents, the Faculty Senate and the Student Senate" and that the administrators include a great group of people who carry out these decisions.

"The term 'administration' might mean anyone with administrative functions such as the director of the library, the museum director or the art gallery director," he said.

The easiest definition seems to be "people who administer" but here again there are many people "who administer" who usually are not included in this description when it means praise or blame.

Handbook Definition
The term, according to the campus handbook under "Administration Functions," includes the Board of Regents, the chancellor, the vice chancellors, the deans of men and women, the business manager, the deans of colleges and the heads of schools.

Included in these categories are the heads of such business offices as accounting, auditing, data processing, purchasing, buildings and grounds, planning and construction and personnel.

Under the deans of students the heads of housing, the Nebraska Union, the placement service, the exam service, scholarships and financial aid, student health, admissions, the junior division and registration and records, all could be included under "administration."

The term would also apply to the directors of public relations, the alumni association, institutional research, the University Foundation, the research council, the medical center, the agriculture and home extension services and stations, the library, the museum, ROTC and general extension.

Ross explained that in an institution as large as the University with so many administrators and offices, people just do not know exactly who is responsible for what and that the term "administration" is often the easy way out when speaking about the University.

Devaney Escorts Little Fan To Game

By Lorrie Loomis

Not many seven-year-old boys are escorted to Nebraska's football games by head coach Bob Devaney — but one youngster had this experience at the Homecoming game Saturday.

Mike Lawrence, whose aunt, Geri, is a junior at the University, was to go to the game with Geri's parents. Problem: he had no ticket.

Mike

When Geri heard that Mike had no ticket, she called Pat Devaney, the coach's daughter and a University senior. Pat could not be reached, however, so Geri talked to Coach Devaney.

Upon hearing that the little fan had no ticket, the coach offered to take Mike to the game with him. The lad was so excited the morning of the game that he woke up Geri's parents at 5 a.m.—with a "let's get going!" request.

Just before the game, Carl took Mike to the bus behind the stadium to meet Coach Devaney. The Husker mentor escorted Mike through the locker room with the team, and into the stadium.

Mike was almost speechless with excitement. When asked what he thought of Coach Devaney, he beamed, "He's great!"

Lt. Governor To Talk To Young Democrats

Lt. Governor Philip Sorenson will speak at a meeting of the Young Democrats Tuesday night at 7:30 in the Nebraska Union.

Sorenson, a graduate of the University's Law School, was elected lieutenant governor two years ago. He is considered by some to be a possible Democratic nominee for Governor in 1966.

During the game, Mike stood on the bleachers clapping his hands — and guessing the plays.

The youngster had been in Lincoln two weeks before, and the coach at that time had autographed his program: "Hope to see you at NU playing football someday. Best wishes, Coach Devaney."

The Lawrences plan to bring Mike to Lincoln again for the Thanksgiving day game with Oklahoma — and Mike will probably be one of the Cornhusker's most enthusiastic rooters.

The folk-singing group has appeared in Lincoln the past two years.

All seats for the 8:30 performance are reserved. Tickets are available at the auditorium for $2, $2.75 and $3.50.

Colorado Men Outshoot Cornhuskers In Coeducational Rifle Team Contest

Two Big Eight Conference teams, Nebraska and Colorado, met for a varsity contest Saturday morning. The occasion, a rifle marksmanship match, didn't receive quite the attention of the football game, but it had one feature the football game lacked — female participants.

Two girls were part of the eight-member Nebraska team that competed with the all-male Colorado team.

When the smoke cleared after the match, Colorado was declared the winner by a 20 point margin.

Cheryl Chapman's score was 196, "about the lowest she has ever shot," according to Cpt. Wesley Woolworth, faculty adviser for the University Rifle Club.

Woolworth described Miss Chapman as "the fifth highest shooter we have." This means that she outranks ap-

Pacifist Sentiment Misses Nebraska

Nebraska is apparently not feeling some of the effects of a rash of pacifist sentiment which has been crossing the nation within recent weeks. The state draft board reported that there has been no noticeable increase in the number of men claiming status as conscientious objectors.

The office also noted that there had been no reports made of men deliberately destroying their draft cards. Students in some areas of the country have destroyed their cards as a protest to the war in Viet Nam. Such destruction can bring legal action which could include a fine up to $10,000.

Deadline For Tickets Extended To Tuesday

Tuesday at 4:00 p.m. is the deadline for picking up student Missouri tickets. All remaining tickets will be sold to the general public.

proximately 40 male members of the club in shooting ability.

Fifteen Girls Belong
Miss Chapman is not the sole female member of the rifle team, however. Fifteen girls belong to the club.

This is the second year that the club has had coeds in the group. Woolworth said, "We didn't try to attract girls, but last year several came to us and wanted to join."

Barbara Thomas, club treasurer, said, "I just meandered down to the basement of the Military and Naval Science Building one afternoon and told someone that I wanted to join a rifle club."

Girls Team Forming

The rifle club is forming a girls team which will compete with other girls' teams in this area. Woolworth mentioned six different schools with such teams including Creighton University in Omaha, Kansas State and Oklahoma State.

"There is a big trend for girls to shoot," he noted. "A lot of the schools in the Big Eight have girls that shoot, but they don't have enough for a girls team."

"The National Rifle Association is anxious to have girls teams compete," Woolworth said. He said the girls in the Nebraska club, "have a lot of incentive when it comes to shooting."

Nancy Wolf, a club member, said that she joined because "I think a person ought to be in something that he is interested in. I'm interested in archery and shooting follows from that."

Miss Wolf, who won the Miss Teenage Nebraska contest in 1962, said she was planning to spend more time practicing in the next two weeks so that she could go to the shooting match with Oklahoma State in November.

The male members of the Rifle Club don't seem displeased that the coeds have decided to join their ranks. They are proud of the way the girls perform and note that the girls team last year defeated the previously unbeaten Oklahoma State girls' team.

Sgt. Robert Wilson coaches the rifle team.
