

THE CHANGE IN SELLECK . . . Jane Austin (left), and Mary Scanlan show the feminine influence of Selleck since the living unit has admitted girls.

Men Outnumbered In Changed Selleck

By Gloria Adams

Not only have women moved into Selleck, the previously all men's dormitory, but they outnumber the men approximately 560 to 300.

In the Residence Association for Men (RAM), women hold four out of nine executive positions, and 10 out of 17 council positions.

How do the girls like living in Selleck? The fact that "the dorm is definitely built for men," as Marilyn Forest said, is evident in the girls' main problem: lack of closet space.

"We store our sweaters under the beds and our winter coats in the store room," Nancy Goodshell and Phyllis Adams said.

Bring Clothes Racks
Some girls bring clothes racks, bookcases and chests of drawers to handle the clothes overflow, or they just don't bring as many clothes.

Mrs. Pearl Hathaway, Selleck house mother, feels the residency is a place for individual growth in intelligence. "Living in groups like the dorms helps girls to develop into more responsible citizens," she said.

The only trouble, she added, is that "Selleck isn't ready for us." Much work needs to be done on the rooms to make them more feminine. Mrs. Hathaway said, but "it's just going to take time."

"I like Selleck very much," Carol Bereuter said. "Things can be rearranged to make the rooms homey. A very important feature of Selleck is that it is close to everything."

"Everybody seems to get along pretty well," Barbara Brown said, "and everybody knows everybody." Likes "Warmness"
Cleo Warman likes best the "warmness of Selleck."

Off-Campus Women Plan Intramural Team

A women's intramural athletic team for off-campus independents, believed to be the first of its kind, is being organized by Jayne Snyder, a Lincoln student.

Miss Snyder said she is recruiting off-campus women to participate in the women's intramural Nebraska Ball tournament next Monday. The teams will be of a recreational nature and membership is open to all unaffiliated women living in Lincoln.

The intramurals are sponsored by the Women's Athletic Association. Teams compete in a variety of sports including bowling, swimming, softball and basketball.

At present, Miss Snyder said she has contacted a number of women who have expressed enthusiasm for the idea. Interested women may sign up for the teams on bulletin boards in the Coliseum, in Bancroft and in Nebraska Hall or contact Miss Snyder through the Women's Physical Education Department.

and the fact that "everyone is sincerely interested in you."

Linda Taylor, a floor president, feels the philosophy of Selleck is very liberal. "The girls are expected to behave but they are not policed," she said.

The way a living unit is built creates problems, according to Diana Stockland, a student assistant. Most of these problems are solved by the girls and "there is very little complaining," she said.

Future improvements for Selleck may include such things as TV sets in every building, study halls, shower curtains in the bathrooms, full length mirrors and bulletin boards, and more irons and ironing boards.

Improve Dress
Since the girls have moved in, Al Olsen, resident director of Selleck, has noticed improvement in the way the men dress. They have "less complaints" about such things as the food and maid service, Olsen said.

Olsen has also noticed more participation in activities. He described the men as becoming more polished socially.

No real problems have occurred since the girls came, according to Olsen, except that there is "a heck of a lot more switchboard activity, but this problem has been ironed out."

Selleck hasn't even had problems of boys sneaking into girls' rooms, according to Olsen.

There is some misunderstanding among people, especially parents, who think of Selleck as an all men's dorm he said. He said the parents are assured that everyone is well separated.

Selleck is definitely a better place to live," Olsen said, since it houses both men and women.

Scholars Receive Awards

Panhellenic has initiated a group of awards to emphasize high scholarship in the individual sorority houses.

Under the name Panhellenic Scholars the award is presented to the girl in each house who has achieved the highest grade average for the first semester. The trophies for the honor were presented for the first time at the Panhellenic Workshop this fall.

Ann Windle, Panhellenic scholarship chairman, said the awards were necessary because so much emphasis is placed on activity and little emphasis is placed on scholarship.

She pointed out that the honored girl may excel in both scholarship and activities, but this award gives an opportunity to recognize those who may concentrate their time on studies, and bring honor to their groups.

Miss Windle explained that the qualification to become a Panhellenic Scholar is not the highest cumulative average because one girl may continuously have the highest cumulative average and not the highest average every semester.

With the award given for the highest first semester average a different group of girls may receive the award and there is more competition for it, she said.

The Panhellenic Scholars represent Panhellenic's ideals on scholarship, and are its representatives in their houses for that year.

The Panhellenic Scholars for this year are: Judy Young, Alpha Chi Omega; Mary Kay Rakow, Alpha Delta Pi; Candy Sasso, Alpha Omicron Pi; Carol Van Steenberg, Alpha Phi.

Leeta Hurich, Alpha Xi Delta; Julie Rogers, Chi Omega; Nancy Baker, Delta Delta Delta; Pam Wood, Delta Gamma; Vicky Dowling, Gamma Phi Beta;

Kris Bitner, Kappa Alpha Theta; Kathy Oberle, Kappa Delta; Susan Hime, Kappa Kappa Gamma; Susanna Goodwin, Phi Mu;

Mary Lou Farmer, Pi Beta Phi; Trudy Lieberman, Sigma Delta Tau; Sherry Shadbolt, Sigma Kappa; and Marcia Lagerstrom, Zeta Tau Alpha.

Newspapers Focus On African Youth; Minnesota Professor Attacks Christia

College newspapers around the country this last week have focused their attention on such things as African nature calls, the perfect man and the perfect student government.

Hugging skirts, tight sweaters and jeans, peeking petticoats and high heeled shoes are really bugging African boys who call for their women to go "back to nature."

The O'Collegian at Oklahoma University in Stillwater reported that African youths in the Malawi capital, Zomba, have taken the law into their own hands recently and have begun scouring the city for sexily dressed girls.

Tight fitting dresses have been ripped off and lipsticks smeared mouths scrubbed with sandpaper by these African boys.

A speech which said "man is perfectable and can even become God," by Dr. Karl Potter, chairman of the Minnesota philosophy department, was covered by the Minnesota Daily.

The Minnesota college paper noted that he said Christianity takes "a gloomy outlook on human nature" by postulating that man is inherently bad and placing limitations on human capabilities.

He said that Christianity has often meddled in the lives of other people, and many times has found itself disproved by science and forced into a conservative stance because its doctrine was too specific.

The Tulane Hullabaloo at Tulane University in New Orleans explained in a recent issue that its student council is trying to become more than just an office for "busy work" by setting up a number of new committees.

These new committees at Tulane are to investigate cross-registration problems, the bookstore, health service, the library, food service and the poor conduct at free movies.

The Tulane paper also reported that Volunteers in Service to America (VISTA), a domestic peace corps, is visiting its campus to discuss opportunities for students to join the war on poverty. The program sends volunteers to help the poor combat poverty in their own neighborhoods.

A 10-watt FM radio station will soon go into operation on the Wayne State campus, according to the Wayne Stater. Equipment for the station is being purchased from a $7,000.

"Anything that doesn't encompass science as a basis for its works is destined for the backwaters of our civilization," James Van Allen, head of physics and astronomy at the University of Iowa, was quoted as saying by the Daily Iowan.

Allen, who was speaking at a religious conference, said that although science is one of the basic human activities, it is not all powerful. He said it is impoverished by such feelings as love, trust and fidelity.

The University Daily Kansan reported that the local Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) chapter has adopted a Vietnamese child.

The paper also pointed out that "student unrest on campus" will be discussed at a current events forum this week. The forum will include a vice chancellor of the University, a philosophy professor, a political science professor and the local SDS president.

New Sheldon Exhibits Feature Henri, Geske

By Bruce Giles Junior Staff Writer

New exhibits at the Sheldon Art Gallery include an assembly of paintings by Robert Henri and a suite of color photographs by Eliot Porter.

Robert Geske, director of the Gallery, said the Henri exhibit "has been assembled to commemorate the centennial of Robert Henri's birth."

Henri lived in Cozad from 1873 to 1882. He attended the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts from 1886 to 1888 and from there went to Paris and Italy. In 1899 he opened his own art school.

"Almost all of the museum-owned pictures are of a kind, usually characterized by a mood of cheerful, sometimes even joyful optimism," Geske said. They include portraits of children — Spanish, Irish, Indian and Chinese, simple people, workmen and peasants.

"The rather flashy works of his original success are being joined by pictures of another kind, which seem to relate more closely to the direct and personal experiences of the artist," he said.

Geske termed Henri's portraits of his family as "impressive."

"There is an opportunity, perhaps for the first time, to show Henri as a graphic artist in a series of drawings and oil and water color sketches added.

Porter says of himself: "Photography became my preoccupation at eleven and it started with birds. "In an environment of the sea and a brisk northern climate, of a ragged rocky shore that rose abruptly out of the cold, blue Atlantic, of white gravel beaches, and of dark spruce forests, birds became an integral, inescapable part of my life."

From his first points of photography of the birds, "It is not surprising that I developed a similar interest in other realms of nature," Porter added.

Speaking of his collection now on display, Porter says, "These photographs are an attempt to show, better than any reproductions can possibly do, this expansion of a point of view towards the use of color to interpret the world more freely."

Both exhibitions continue through Sunday.
