

Dairy Store Supplies East Campus Products

By Toni Victor

From dormitory desserts to gift packages of cheese to as many as four hundred ice cream cones daily, the Dairy Store on East Campus is an efficient and prosperous organization.

The Dairy Store is part of the Dairy Science Industries and makes practical application of modern dairy handling skills taught at the school.

Within a single building the Dairy Store has complete facilities for processing, packaging and storing all kinds of dairy products. This includes homogenizing, pasteurizing and vacuum treating all raw milk.

The milk is then converted to eight varieties of cheese and twenty flavors of ice cream as well as skim milk and butter.

Approximately 7,200 gallons of milk is taken in and processed in one week. This milk comes mainly from the herd animals on East Campus and from the Nebraska-Iowa Milk Association.

K. M. Nilson, manager of the dairy plant, said that the moving of animals off-campus would not hurt the Dairy Store's production in the least. "It will probably help production, as the herds will be larger," he explained.

Experimental work is also carried on within the plant. A recently completed project involved water-soluble vitamins in cheese.

The result of this mass-production of dairy goods is easily seen. All campus dormitories, both student unions, Student Health, the University High School and the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education receive dairy products solely from the Dairy Store.

A further testimonial to the quality of the products at the store is the gift boxes of cheese sold at Christmas. These boxes are sent to every state in the union and several foreign countries.

Former Mortar Board Speaks To AWS Group

The woman of 1965 has opportunities to do more than ever before, but along with these opportunities comes the responsibility to make decisions, according to Mrs. Carl Swanson, past president of National Mortar Board.

Mrs. Swanson spoke Monday evening at an all-women convocation on "The Woman Today and Her Place in Society" to begin AWS Standards Week activities. She said that today's college women are a special group who must make decisions or "they'll never be what they might have been."

Decisiveness Needed Along with decisiveness, she added, today's woman should be gentle and kind. She cited the historical concern of women in the past with volunteer work for hospitals, charities and other groups.

Mrs. Swanson requested a return to some of the Victorian virtues.

"We've been sold a bill of goods that Victorian virtues are obsolete," she said. "Some of the things Victorian wives and mothers had could make our homes a little bit happier." Modern women, she continued, have lost many of the things their predecessors had.

"They did things," she commented, "because their mothers and grandmothers did. We must do things because we think about them." While thinking of these things, she continued, today's women may rediscover the answers their mothers had that today's women are now missing. Mrs. Swanson also urged the modern woman to speak up about her problems and to express her ideas.

"There is nothing wrong with being wrong," she emphasized. "What is wrong is having no opinion at all." She urged women to express themselves concerning public issues like Aid to Dependent Children, the inheritance tax, the minimum wage, divorce and social security laws.

"We must call the errors in these policies to the attention of our policy makers," she continued. "We must show respect for ourselves."

Today's woman, she commented, should be an individual in search of truth. One collects pieces of the truth as one grows older, she said, but the truth is not complete until these pieces are put together.

Finding the truth, she maintained, consists partially of two main points: Respecting other people's opinions and maintaining a willingness to change one's own opinion.

Mrs. Swanson added that just as times change so should opinions, and that questioning opinions, both one's own and others, is a badge of intelligence.

"Mirror, mirror on the wall," she concluded, "show us to be women who are subservient only to our search for truth."

Greeks Work For Charity

A sale of goods made at a settlement school in Tennessee, candy selling and a charity basketball tournament are some of the activities undertaken by Greeks this fall.

Products made by students at the Pi Beta Phi settlement school in Gatlinburg, Tenn., are being sold today and Thursday in the basement of the Nebraska Union, 9:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m.

The proceeds from the sale of jewelry, wood carvings, hand-woven products and decorative brooms will help pay for the school's teachers and the maintenance of a health center there.

Several fraternities raised money for the Community Chest by selling Halloween candy door to door. Each fraternity sold in a section of the city given them by Community Chest officials.

The Interfraternity Council will consider tonight a project for raising money for the March of Dimes with a fraternity-sorority basketball tournament.

Gary Larsen, who is in charge of organizing the basketball tournament, said that if IFC approves the project, the tournament will be held Dec. 4 at the Coliseum.

Builders Offer Opportunity To Select Ideal Professor

Builders is again offering students a chance to select an ideal professor through its Student Professorship Program.

The program is designed to help students encourage top level professors to remain at the University and to attract additional outstanding instructors. This is the second year Builders has sponsored the program.

Last year's recipient of the Student Professorship award, Dr. Robert Manley of the history department, was presented with a plaque and $500 at the honors convocation.

Ballots to nominate professors for the honor will be distributed to living units and Lincoln independents. Donation cards are also being sent to living units and organizations.

Contributors to the award program will be recognized and represented on the advisory board which will review nominations and make the final selection, according to Jim Kinyoun, chairman of the Builders Campus Promotion committee.

The advisory board will include the dean of each college and a student senator from each college. After the $500 award is met, all additional donations will be invested in the Nebraska Foundation.

It is hoped that a total of $10,000 will be invested within the next few years so that the annual interest of $500 may be used as the award for the Student Professorship.
