Love Library Workers Enjoy Meeting People

Junior Staff Writer

Behind a desk on the second floor of Love Library sits a boy or girl who checks briefcases and books to see that library books have been checked out and keeps count of the approximately 3,000 people who use the library daily.

Janice Rowe, who sits behind the desk about four hours a week, describes it as "a relaxing and enjoyable job where you get to know a lot of people.

Miss Rowe is a senior majoring in sociology who has worked in the library for two vears. She said her duties include looking for misplaced books, checking books in, helping people find books they are looking for and working the control desk.

Control Desk

Working the control desk, she explained, consists of counting the people who come up the steps between first and second floor, checking to see that library books leaving the and sorting cards.
