Conference To Feature Agriculture

The fifth annual Professional Opportunities Conference will be held in the Activities Building on East campus Dec. 2.

Primarily on agricultural fields, the conference is "open to all University students, including those not in agriculture," according to Dr. C. H. Adams, associate professor of animal science.

The conference will open with a speech, "The World Food Problem" by Dr. A. William Jasper, assistant director, commodity division, American Farm Bureau Federation.

The general session will be followed by three sessions including presentations in 24 fields ranging from ag chemicals, farm management, food and drug administration, market news and farm press to the Peace Corps.

Dr. Adams said he expects about 450 students to attend the conference.

Agriculture classes will be dismissed on Dec. 2 from 1 to 6 p.m. This does not include home economics classes.

Sheets listing the various presentations and the students choice for each session will be passed out to students in agriculture classes today. Students are asked to turn them in by Wednesday.

'Sammy's' To Begin Vigil Over Traditional Bonfire

By Ruth Hagedorn
Junior Staff Writer

This is the week for wood. The Sigma Alpha Mu fraternity has had active and pledges looking for that precious material for at least a week, in order to have enough for their victory bonfire.

The bonfire will burn continuously from 8:50 tonight until game time Thursday. "The flames will fly 'till the Sooners die!", reports the fraternity.

This is the third year for the SAM bonfire which burns before the Nebraska - Oklahoma game. However, this year the bonfire may be something really special because of the probability of its appearance on national television.

Devaney To Speak
Coach Bob Devaney and captains Mike Kennedy and Frank Solich will speak at the bonfire rally tonight. All living units are urged to bring spirit signs. Freshmen women will have their hours extended to 9:30 p.m., or whenever the event is over, according to Dean Helen Snyder.

Tuesday at 8 p.m. Corn Cobs and Tassels will hold a bonfire rally. The parade which will kick off the event will start on the south side of the Nebraska Union, follow R Street to 16th, and proceed down 16th to Vine Street. The bonfire beginning at 8:15 p.m. will be held about a quarter block from the Nebraska Hall parking lot.

Co-captains Kennedy and Solich will take a torch from the SAM victory bonfire and touch it to a Sooner wagon, representing the Oklahoma team, which will start the rest of the fire.

Coach Devaney will introduce the entire Nebraska football team. Bob Zenner, sports caster for KLIN radio, will also be present. F.C. Green, yell king, will introduce a new cheer which will be used at Thursday's game as well as at the Orange Bowl.

Now Cheer Announced
The new cheer will be done when the band comes out on the field. The cheerleaders will begin the yell at one end of the field and plan for it to progress in volume until it reaches the other end of the field.

The yell is a long, drawn out, "co-rr-r-n Huskers," yelled twice, followed with the traditional "Go Big Red" cheer.

Green again asked that Nebraska fans support their undefeated team by wearing red to the Oklahoma game.

Corn Cobs request that all seats in the card section at the Oklahoma game be filled to assure a complete flash. There will be several flashes before the 12:45 p.m. kickoff, so everyone in the section is urged to be in his seat by 11:45 a.m.

The game will be nationally televised. Gary Wahlgren, Corn Cobs card section chairman, said, "Again I emphasize — fill every seat — in any way necessary."

Abel Constitution . . .

Hall Presidents Study Changes

By Steve Jordan
Junior Staff Writer

Abel Hall may be drafting a new constitution before Thanksgiving vacation, according to several Abel house presidents.

"A few of us had an informal meeting the night of the election (Wednesday) and worked out some compromises that both sides could agree upon," Dan Miller, fourth floor president, said.

Miller was one of the leaders of a group that opposed the adoption of the previous constitution, which was defeated by Abel residents last week.

"There is only one president who doesn't go along with the compromises we have worked out," Miller said.

Changes proposed by informal agreement of some of the presidents would be in the budget, powers and ratification sections.

"The general clause would be changed to read, 'the Executive Council shall exercise any other powers necessary for the general welfare of Abel Hall as a unit,'" Miller said.

The clause previously read, "for the general welfare of the Association's residents."

The budget section would be adjusted to stipulate that the floors would get at least half of the money allotted to the hall, and some of the "strong wording" in the powers of the Executive Council would be modified, Miller said.

"The ratification would also be easier," Bill Eddy, president of 13th floor, said.

The proposed changes, he said, would allow for the floor to ratify the document separately, with a majority in eight floors necessary for ratification.

"This change would be mainly to appease those who favored the other constitution," Roger Doerr, president of the previous convention, said.

The former delegates are planning a meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday to try to revise the old constitution.

Christmas Vacation To Remain Unchanged

There will be no change in the Christmas vacation schedule regardless of the Orange Bowl, according to Vice Chancellor G. Robert Ross.

Ross said that classes will resume after Christmas vacation as scheduled, on Monday, Jan. 3. This will impose a choice of skipping classes on Jan. 3 or risking hazardous driving for those students driving back from the Bowl.

Only one day separates the New Year's night game to be played by the Cornhuskers and Monday morning classes.

Tassels Contest Senate Action

By Wayne Kreuscher
Senior Staff Writer

Student Court will announce its decision Tuesday concerning the arguments presented Saturday morning before the court by legal counsel for Linda Muff, as president of Tassels, and the Student Senate attorney general.

The arguments, which were presented in Student Court's first hearing by Eric Eisenhart, a University law student representing Muff, and ASUN Attorney General Lee Kovarik, concerned the Senate's role in setting up a new interviewing board for Homecoming queen finalists Oct. 25.

Eisenhart, using several lines of argument, asked the court to decide that Senate was acting unconstitutionally when it amended or changed Tassel's constitution which had given Tassels the authority over the selection of Homecoming finalists "for at least 25 years." He asked the court to return Tassels power of "selection."

Kovarik Argues
Kovarik argued that Senate did not amend or change Tassel's constitution, but rather carried out the power of Article IV, Sec. 1 (C) of the ASUN constitution which gives Senate the specific power to "schedule and - or conduct" any election of general University interest.

Furthermore Kovarik stressed that Student Senate is worthless unless the powers in its constitution are considered superior to those in constitutions of subordinate organizations.

Eisenhart established several lines of reasoning in Tassels favor. He stressed that student government had approved Tassel's constitution and had given it the right many years ago to supervise selection and election of the Homecoming queen. He pointed out that an organization's constitution is meaningless unless student government respects an organization's constitution which it has approved.

Eisenhart Explains

Eisenhart also explained that the power granted to Student Senate concerning elections gives the Senate only the specific power to "schedule and-or conduct." He said that "schedule and - or conduct" means that Senate has the power to make sure elections are run fairly and that everyone has a chance to vote, but that it does not give Senate any power concerning selection.

On the other hand, Eisenhart noted that the Tassels organization does have the specific power to select.

Kovarik argued that Senate's power to "schedule and-or conduct" gives it the right to supervise the whole election. He said that the power to "schedule and-or conduct" as defined by Eisenhart would do nothing but make Senate a subordinate, servant organization to Tassels and that student government must have the power to supervise the whole election and not just "small routine voting tasks."

The attorney general explained that Senate changed the Homecoming finalists' selection because of requests from the students. He said that a petition signed by 1,100 students was presented to the Senate requesting more representation on the interviewing board for finalists.

Kovarik stressed that the students had asked their most representative student organization to straighten things out for them and that this is what the Senate did.

He stated that before student government entertained the students' request and made the selection of Homecoming finalists more representative, that the complete affair was in one big "turmoil" with no one knowing what Tassels was going to do with the election.

Band Prepares Opera Marches

"Marches from Grand Opera" will entertain the nationwide audience during the half-time of the Oklahoma game Thursday.

"We're looking for a new 'quarterback' in case Jim won't be able to appear at the game," Snider said.

Plans for the Orange Bowl trip are still tentative. The band is going, but details have not been worked out yet, Snider said.

Students Sponsor Dystrophy Drive

A group of University students are sponsoring a contest to support the Muscular Dystrophy Drive in Lincoln. The drive has as its slogan "Help the Huskers Campaign for National Champions."

Beginning today, the students may purchase red and white MD buttons at Magee's for 50 cents. The living unit that buys the most buttons will receive a trophy. The size of the living unit makes no difference in the contest.

Five hundred buttons have been set aside for students to purchase. The contest runs until the Thanksgiving football game. Buttons may be ordered by writing Champions, 4410 Van Dorn.

Lincoln businessmen are also participating in the muscular dystrophy drive.
