THE FLAMES WILL FLY 'TIL THE SOONERS DIE . . . Part of a crowd of over 2,000 at the third annual Sigma Alpha Mu Victory Bonfire watches as a Oklahoma effigy forecasts the fate of the Sooners Thursday.

SAM Fire Reflects Husker Enthusiasm

By Ruth Hagedorn
Junior Staff Writer

"Go Big Red! Go Big Red! Beat Oklahoma! Beat Oklahoma!" chanted an estimated 1,500 to 2,000 students who attended the Sigma Alpha Mu bonfire Monday night.

These chants, interspersed with "Hail to the Team" and other spirit songs accompanied by the pep band, continued until Coach Bob Devaney appeared amidst the cheering crowd.

Stewart Forbes, SAM president, welcomed the students to the fraternity's third annual victory bonfire and reminded them that "The flames will fly 'til the Sooners die!"

Forbes then introduced Devaney who laughingly said, "I hope this year you don't have to keep the fire going as long as you would have last year!" He assured everyone that both he and the team would "help put the fire out at about 3 p.m. Thursday afternoon."

Co-captains Frank Solich and Mike Kennedy were introduced by Devaney. Solich said, "We will certainly try to end the season like we started it—with a victory."

Kennedy added that he believes everyone remembers last year's defeat and, having had a year to think about it, that "nothing like that will happen again."

The crowd moved away from the fire pit amidst shouts of "Push 'em back, push 'em back, way back." Kennedy lit the fire as students enthusiastically sang "There Is No Place Like Nebraska" and yelled, "All the way to Miami." The flames leaped higher and higher, destroying the Sooner effigy.

Oranges were thrown and a three-man "tower" was raised though it quickly crumbled. The Sigma Chi used a foam rubber mattress to toss one of their members into the air. At the conclusion of the rally, it was added to fire.

Spirit signs displayed by living units bore slogans ranging from "Gobble up the Sooners" and "Light up to victory" to "It's too late for the Sooners" and "A Sooner loss shows who's boss."

One and one half hour shifts are being taken by SAM fraternity members around the clock in order to keep the fire going at a good steady rate. Enough wood for the 66-hour bonfire appeared to be the only problem.

Students To Experiment In International Living

By Beth Robbins
Junior Staff Writer

The Experiment of International Living gives students the opportunity to know a foreign country by living with its people.

William Maclay, field representative for the Experiment, and Miss Lenore Buford, French instructor at the University and group sponsor with the program for the past five years, explained the Experiment to Dr. Roberto Euenazi-Mayo, chairman of the department of romance languages, Monday.

The program is based on the idea that people learn to understand other people and their culture by living among them as a member of a family.

The Experiment, Maclay explained, consists of a two-month stay in one of 45 foreign countries in Africa, Asia, Europe, Latin America and the Middle East.

"Each participant is an individual experimenter at the same time as he is part of a group of ten," Maclay said.

A group of experimenters, usually ten, visits different families in a single community, becoming a "brother" or "sister" to them.

Many experimenters feel the hardest part of their trip is saying good-bye to their new found friends. The ties last many years, even a lifetime, Maclay said.

The Experiment is "sort of like the United Nations," Maclay said. A group gets together, but once they are in a foreign country, the foreign representative takes charge of them. Each country individually controls the program within their own borders.

Experimenters coming into the United States most often come in August, using the program as an orientation before attending college in America.

The Peace Corps has used the Experiment's facilities for training several of its groups. Maclay encouraged future Peace Corps members to join the program.

Anyone interested in joining the program must first submit a complete application to

What It's Like To Be . . . Sorority Housemother 'Enjoys Academic Life'

By Jan Ittku
Junior Staff Writer

Being a housemother entails nothing more than does being a mother in a real home, according to Mrs. Clarence Mahn, housemother for Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority.

"We simply maintain a home and plan the meals," she continued. "Aside from that, the only other responsibility we have is to Administration."

Mrs. Mahn, or (Mano) as she is called by her girls, has been with the Kappas for ten years. She explained that Mano was what her nieces and nephews called her and that a niece of hers was in the Kappa house the year she came there.

"The girls asked if they could call me Mano too," she said. "Of course I said yes, and they have ever since."

In the ten years she has been there, she said, little has changed except that there are more girls and is "more pressure."

"I thoroughly enjoy being a housemother," she said, "because I enjoy being connected with academic life. It's both stimulating and challenging."

Mrs. Mahn is a University graduate. "Students today are possibly more assertive with their ideas than when I was a student," she said. She cited broadened courses, travel and home training towards independence as reasons for the assertiveness.

Being a housemother, she said, is always exciting, but "as time goes by, you learn to take excitement as a matter of course."

A housemother must trust young people and like them, she said. "We want what's best for them and are interested in their development as students and as citizens in their adult life."

Mrs. Mahn chose Kappa Kappa Gamma as a housemother's busiest time because of the need to "have things run smoothly." She said that because freshman pledges live in the dorms their first year, it takes until the middle of a girl's sophomore year "to know and understand her."

The increasing numbers of students makes it a little harder to become close to the girls, Mrs. Mahn added. "It's partially the product of stepped-up classes and class scheduling" that the girls are not in the house more often.

Love Loses To 'Hysteria'
