

NIA To Sell Book Of Foreign Recipes

By Beth Robbins
Junior Staff Writer

An international cookbook with recipes gathered largely from foreign students at the University will be on sale at the Nebraska International Association annual buffet next Sunday.

The buffet will be held at the First Christian Church, 15th and K Streets at 5:30 p.m.

The meal will include foreign dishes from all over the world. Dolma, which is a Turkish dish of grape leaves stuffed with ground beef and rice, will accompany fried rice from China and a nut and honey desert, baklava, from Iraq. Names like chicken korma, bomia and Lebkuchen will also be on the menu.

Mrs. Gardy Epp, buffet chairman, is also responsible for collecting the 277 recipes in the international cookbook. The idea came three or four buffets ago, Mrs. Epp said. "Everyone enjoyed the food and asked us how to make it."

In choosing recipes Mrs. Epp studied foreign cookbooks and collected favorites from international students. Many of them were submitted to family approval before being included in the book.

Some made it, some didn't, Mrs. Epp said. She had problems with others before they reached the table. One list of ingredients was submitted written partially in Japanese, German and English. But it's in the cookbook, Mrs. Epp said.

In choosing recipes, she paid special attention to the availability of ingredients. "Except for three included for curiosity's sake, everything else has ingredients that can be obtained here in Lincoln," she said.

Some of the recipes are a bit difficult, some very easy, Mrs. Epp cited an example of a Dutch dessert that whips up in five minutes for unexpected guests. It inevitably brings compliments, she said. "This cookbook is for everybody who likes something different," she added.

Fifty two European, Asian, African and South American countries are represented in the book. Recipes come from Argentina, Yugoslavia and everywhere in between. "I tried to use recipes that are representative of the country," Mrs. Epp said.

This sometimes leads to unusual results, like the pizza recipe from Switzerland. But this, Mrs. Epp explained, is an authentic representation of the Italian part of the country.

The last chapter of the book is "like an annex" she said. The subject is coffee-cinnamon coffee from Holland, coffee with ice cream and whipped cream from Germany and whiskey from Ireland. There are also pages on varieties of tea and foreign drinks.

Mrs. Epp suggested the cookbook be kept in mind for Christmas gifts if people want "something different that will last a whole year. It will make both the giver and the receiver happy," she added.

Cookbooks may be purchased for $2.50 either at the buffet or from the foreign student office, 207 Administration Building. Tickets for the buffet may also be obtained at the foreign student office or by calling Mrs. Epp at 477-1474.

Editor Heads For Florida

Miss Marilyn Hoegemeyer, editor of the Daily Nebraskan, will be viewing the Gemini 7 launching at Cocoa Beach, Fla., this weekend.

Chosen of Life magazine as one of 20 college newspaper editors to view the flight and talk to Gemini officials, Miss Hoegemeyer left on her all expense paid trip by plane this morning.

"I plan to be back Sunday night, but if anything stalls the launching I might not make it until Tuesday," she said.

Miss Hoegemeyer described her trip schedule as a round of interviews with flight officials, tours of the launching headquarters and informal dinners and meetings with the other college editors.

The college editors participating in the trip are from Michigan State, Harvard, Iowa State, Stanford and Brigham Young.

The universities of Missouri, Washington, Colorado, Texas, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, California, North Carolina and Indiana will also send college editors.
