Historical Society To Restore Home

The State Historical Society, in cooperation with the Nebraska Centennial Commission, is in the process of restoring the Thomas Kennard home so that it may be the Nebraska Statehood Memorial.

Kennard, who was Nebraska's first secretary of state, was instrumental in locating the capital in Lincoln. His house at 1629 H Street is one of the oldest residences in the capital city, according to Mr. Marvin Kivett, director of the Historical Society.

"Tangible Symbol" "It remains as a tangible symbol of the confidence in Nebraska demonstrated by the early founders of the State. It is, therefore, an appropriate structure to commemorate the State's Centennial," said Kivett.

The Society received $59,000 from the state legislature, which, in appropriating the money, had to override Governor Morrison's veto of the bill. This money will be used to restore both the interior and exterior of the house as well as the surrounding grounds so that it may look just as it did in 1869 when it was first built.

This building, located just southeast of the capitol is significant also because it is an outstanding example of the Tuscan style of Victorian architecture which is rapidly disappearing from the American scene, according to Kivett.

The interior of the restored house will be refurbished with authentic furniture of the period and other materials which relate to the establishment and subsequent development of the Nebraska State Government.

Museum Area There will also be a museum area with exhibits interpreting the story of our state history and government.

The Historical Society is also working on a pictorial history of Nebraska in conjunction with the Centennial Commission. The hardback book of about 300-400 pages "will attempt to tell Nebraska's history, with emphasis on its statehood, through pictures and narration," explained Kivett. "It will be the most comprehensive history that has been published."

The history book, which will include both color and black and white pictures will be distributed for sale by the University of Nebraska press, its publishers. The books will be available during 1967, the centennial year, at almost any book store in the state for about six dollars, according to Kivett.

The Historical Society is in charge of the research and manuscript for the book with the Centennial Commission providing some funds.

For Statehood "A good many states publish such books for their centennials, and since we didn't do anything for the territorial centennial, we thought it a good idea to do it for our statehood," said Kivett. The State Historical Society also provides traveling exhibits which will tour the state and will possibly go to other states to advertise Nebraska's centennial.

These exhibits will deal with Nebraska's history, science and industry, art, and culture. They will visit a city in every county, plus the state fair, and possibly some county fairs.

Kivett explained, "we want to make these displays available primarily to school children but also to the bulk of the state's population."

"We're not sure just yet how they will travel," said Kivett. "They may go by train as they did for our territorial centennial in 1954, or they may be transported by truck or trailer."

The exhibits, on which work will begin next fall, will be made especially for the project and will utilize collections of the State Historical Society.

Abel Passes Constitution

Abel Hall passed its constitution Thursday with an 81.7 per cent majority. A total of 461 of Abel's 1,000-plus residents cast ballots. Over 700 students voted in the previous election which defeated the constitution.

Abel Hall's constitution efforts were delayed earlier this fall when a two-thirds majority required for ratification of the first constitution draft was not obtained.

Another convention added several amendments, including the requirement of a simple majority to approve the document.

The first constitution met stiff "campaigning" from those for and against the document, including posters, information sheets and speeches. There was little vocal opposition this week to the new document, and posters urged residents only to vote.

"We would sincerely like to thank the persons who worked with it," Roger Doerr, chairman of the conventions, said. "It was at times a frustrating experience."

The small vote turnout was explained in part by confusion as to whether the election was a new one and not continuation of the other, according to Phil Boardman, eleventh floor counselor.

Now that Abel has a constitution, residents can file for dorm offices, said Doerr. Filings can be given to election chairman Edward Hilz until Christmas vacation. Campaigns will begin the week after Christmas, with elections probably held in the Monday of Dead Week, just before semester break.

Schach To Head Honorary

Dr. Paul Schach, chairman of the department of Germanic languages at the University, has been elected National president of Delta Phi Alpha, German honorary fraternity.

The organization is made up of students and professors who have excelled in the research and study of Germanic literature and languages.

Dr. Schach, a native of Pennsylvania, has been with the University since 1951 and became department chairman in 1963. He is an authority on the linguistics and literature of Iceland and has written extensively on the folk lore of that country.

One of Dr. Schach's most important works, completed in 1959, was the translation of the old Iceland family sagas, entitled "Eyrbyggja Saga," famous for its wealth of material on the beliefs, folkways and traditions of the Norsemen of the 10th and 11th centuries.

The book is the only edition of the complete saga in modern English.

Actors Plan To Dramatize War, Peace

The University's Readers Theatre, "Words and Voices" will present "Sorry About That" Monday at 8 p.m. in the Howell Theatre.

The program will consist of short sketches about war and peace by writers including Stephen Crane, Ernest Hemingway, Dos Passos, Brecht and Aristophanes. Material for the production, which will include songs and black outs, was gathered by Robert Devereaux and Richard Maulsby.

No admission will be charged for the production. However, coffee will be sold at intermission with the proceeds from the sale going to UNICEF.

In explaining the title, "Sorry About That," Devereaux and Maulsby pointed out that during World War I the catchall phrase of the GI's was "where do we go from here." Today in Viet Nam, they said, the soldiers phrase is "Sorry about that."

Devereaux, who is directing the production, stressed that he didn't want the program to be "a lot of violins, decaying flowers, and sorrowful tears about how bad war is. It should, instead, be a realization that you are going to have war until you say stop, and do it. This is why we're doing the program," he said.

"Words and Voices" is sponsored by the Nebraska chapter of National Collegiate Players (Nebraska Masquers).

Phi Beta Kappa Names Seventeen

Seventeen University students were named last night as new members of Phi Beta Kappa, a scholastic honorary limited to the highest ranking students in the liberal arts.

Five seniors were honored for especially high academic achievement having been elected to membership during the senior year. While attending the University, the five seniors have participated in the Career Scholars program which is aimed at developing college teachers.

They are: J. Lee Armstrong, Donald Bellows, Jr., Vicki Dowling, Stephen Bronn and Ann Kotouc.

Graduates at the June or August, 1965, commencement who were named to membership include: Robert Anderson, Mary Davis, William Eichner, Judith Gerlack, Raymond Kelton, Jr., Pamela Millnitz, Perry Moore, Betsy Nore, Sally Schneider, Mary Elizabeth Scholdt, John Shadle and Thomas Hallinan.

Dr. Wallace Peterson, chairman of the department of economics who returned this fall after a year of study and teaching abroad, addressed new members of Phi Beta Kappa, at last night's banquet in the Nebraska Union.
