

Agriculture Society Honors 48 At Scholarship Dinner

Forty-eight University students were honored for high scholarship Tuesday night by the Nebraska Chapter of Gamma Sigma Delta, the Honor Society of Agriculture.

The honored group consists of 21 juniors and 27 sophomores majoring in agriculture. They were introduced at the annual Gamma Sigma Delta scholarship recognition dinner by Phillip S. Sutton, chapter president.

Frederick Leistritz received the chapter's annual award for having been the top scholar among sophomores in the College of Agriculture and Home Economics for the 1964-65 school year.

Leistritz, now a junior,

compiled a grade average of 8.652 on the 9.0 scale.

Students honored by Gamma Sigma Delta were:

Juniors: Kenneth Beckstrom, Kenneth Beebe, Lauren Boeckenhauer, Dwayne Burmood, Stanley Daiberkow, Vaughn Domeier, Thomas Gilroy, Victor Lechtenberg, Frederick Leistritz, Wesley Muser, Richard Preston, and Ronald Prior.

Thomas Reimers, Brian Riddell, Ronald Shaffer, David Shoemaker, James Specht, Burton Thomsen, Gary Vleth, Gary Wahlgren, and Gene Wehrlein.

Sophomores: Bamidele Abogunrin, Jerry Andersen, Robert Burton, Robert Bove, Terrance Cacek, Bruce Carlson, Marvin Carlson, James Fairchild, Wayne Geyer, Marvin Hughes, Dwight Humphrey Duane Jewell, Charles Juricek, and Robert Kumm.

Verlyn Luebbe, William Lueck, Michael Nerud, Robert Paddleford, Marvin Paulsen, Lloyd Reeder, Richard Ronenkamp, Ronald Sanders, Bernhard Scholle, James Schepers, Kelly Stielke, Gordon Vavreck, and Kenneth Volkert, Humboldt.

The address, "Importance of Excellence and Scholarship in Agriculture," was given by Dr Dale W. Bohmton, international president of Gamma Sigma Delta.

nothing to rational considerations.

Abbott said Ginsberg is particularly interested in talking with university students.

"Beat society used to repudiate society, at the present time they seem to agree with the new student movements," Abbott said.

He said Ginsberg is presently on his way to New York and is traveling with a group of friends.

Alums Celebrate Charter Day

The University was 97 years old Tuesday and alumni throughout the nation will celebrate the milestone with a series of charter-day programs during the next two months.

There were no special observances at the University which was chartered by the Nebraska Legislature on Feb. 15, 1869.

Two and a half years later, on Sept. 7, 1871, the University opened its doors to 20 collegiate students and 116 pupils enrolled in the Latin School. Last fall the University recorded a new enrollment record of 15,179 students.

Abbott said he feels Ginsberg has "a very rational and perceptive approach to the Viet Nam situation," the subject of his talk at the regional meeting.

Why can't we just cool it and then we can figure out what's going on" in the war, Ginsberg said.

He contends, Abbott explained, that the pro and con debates about the war only exacerbate emotions and add to the controversy which our proposed evaluation book has aroused, we are more determined than ever to provide University students with the opportunity to evaluate their instructors."

"It is our firm belief that this very necessary project can be completed successfully only through the cooperation of every responsible student," the letter explains.

The letter states that despite the controversy which our proposed evaluation book has aroused, we are more determined than ever to provide University students with the opportunity to evaluate their instructors."

University officials have predicted that student population, now at 15,179, will surpass the 20,000 mark in 1968 or 1969 and that another dormitory complex comparable to the 1,900-student men's dormitory now in the planning stage will be needed.

Based on an unofficial analysis of current enrollment coupled with projected enrollment, additional housing will be needed for some 300 women and nearly 500 men next year.

Mrs. Reister, student activities adviser, explained to the sorority delegates that the program would probably be different in each house, depending on the faculty member who selected. She stated further that the program should be on a strictly voluntary basis. The program could include field trips with the faculty member and inviting the member to the individual sorority meetings.

Erma Winterer, future president of Panhellenic, announced that she and the future vice president and secretary will attend the Big Eight Interfraternity Conference to be held this Friday in Stillwater, Okla. The conference is mainly a discussion of common problems encountered in Panhellenic and Inter-fraternity groups.

Larsen also said that interviews will be held Feb. 20 for IFC affairs committee. Applications may be picked up at the IFC office.

TKE To Hold Rush Smoker

'Beat' Poet On Campus Monday

The "father" of the beat generation, Allen Ginsberg, will appear at the Nebraska Union at 1:30 p.m., Friday.

Ginsberg, who will present a program of his original poetry, will be here by arrangement of Scrip, the campus literary magazine.

Ginsberg first came to national attention when he published his book "Howls and Other Poems" in 1956. The book's publisher was involved in a long court battle over the alleged obscenity of this book.

The opening lines of "Howls" read, "I saw the best minds of my generation destroyed by nakedness, starry hysterical madness."

Steve Abbott, editor of Scrip, said that Ginsberg is "probably one of the most controversial poets in the world."

Ginsberg became the leader of a group of "beat" people living in San Francisco in the late 1950's who dubbed themselves Beatniks.

Beatniks were known as "worshippers of booze, dope, sex and despair," as one national magazine put it.

Ginsberg is presently traveling around the country, as he has for the past few years, Abbott said. He spoke at the regional Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) meeting in Lawrence, Kan., last weekend.

Abbott said he feels Ginsberg has "a very rational and perceptive approach to the Viet Nam situation," the subject of his talk at the regional meeting.

He contends, Abbott explained, that the pro and con debates about the war only exacerbate emotions and add

Brother Team Produces Play, Author To Return

By Bruce Giles
Senior Staff Writer

A former University student, Larry Dobbins, will return to Lincoln Feb. 25, for the production of his play "La Gloria De La Manana."

The play will be presented as a "New Faces" production, featuring students who have never appeared in previous University Theatre productions.

Dobbins' brother, Mike, will direct the play.

Dobbins researched the play while spending a summer in the slums of Mexico City.

He was the first person to do a playwriting thesis at the University. The play, entitled "The Darkness Preceding," won a Dallas Award (the University Theatre's equivalent of an Oscar) for Larry Hill, Jo Flaugher, Bill Lacey, Ric Marsh, Craig Stuckey, Bill Robart, Rod Hernandez and Dean Schlesler.

The play is set in Mexico and concerns a young American who adjusts to Mexican families and customs as he tries to determine the worth of his own future.

Richard Mansby, president of the Nebraska Chapter of National Collegiate Players (Nebraska Masquers), the group which is sponsoring the production, said that the "New Faces" production had been discontinued for the past several years, but that it was revived in an effort to afford opportunity for all University students to participate.

An admission charge of 50 cents will be charged at the door.

Few Agriculture College Students Go Into Farming Upon Graduation

Approximately sixteen percent of the University graduates in agriculture actually go into farming, according to Dr. F. E. Eldridge, director of resident instruction on the East Campus. This is due to the difficulty a college graduate has going directly into farming.

The profit expectations of farmers seem to be rising. Because of this, more and more students are looking for farming after graduation. But a downswing in expected profits would tend to scare them off," Eldridge said.

Nearly thirty per cent of the agriculture graduates go on to graduate school for more advanced work. Businesses related to agriculture draw about fourteen per cent of the graduates. The biggest area of this demand is in the chemical business, which is attributed to the vast and varied amounts of chemicals used by the modern farmer.

"Business" demand for agriculture graduates exceeds the number of students graduating by two to four times," Eldridge said. "We are very short of meeting the demand."

According to Eldridge, the student who is really set on farming, will not be swayed from it. But often the problems and difficulties tend to scare the students off.

In order to be successful, the beginning farmer must have assets of between $70,000 to $80,000. The student who graduates, but does not go into farming, can make about the same net income as the farmer, without the need of the enormous assets.

The profit expectations of farmers seem to be rising. Because of this, more and more students are looking for farming after graduation. But a downswing in expected profits would tend to scare them off," Eldridge said.

"We feel that students entering agriculture are more widely distributed than from other colleges, such as business or engineering," Eldridge emphasized.
