

Army ROTC Film Describes Training

A film outlining the new Army ROTC training program for college sophomores will be shown next Wednesday and Thursday at the Military and Naval Science Building.

Maj. Warren Lawson, assistant professor of military science, said the 15-minute summer training session in its entirety and will be shown in room 206.

Under the new two-year college program, initiated last summer by the Army, college sophomores who have not taken the basic military science courses can qualify for the advanced course, if they can meet mental and physical requirements.

If the applicant passes the qualifying tests, he is interviewed by a board of officers, who will evaluate his officer potential. A successful applicant takes a six-week basic summer course, in lieu of the first two-years of University classwork.

Lawson noted that three University students completed the training session last year and there are already over 20 applications for this summer's camp.

"I would encourage any interested sophomore to view the film to realize what the ROTC program offers for his future," explained Major Lawson.

IFC Committee Reports . . .

University Housing Complex Could Benefit Fraternities

A report compiled by the Interfraternity Council (IFC) expansion committee states that "there is absolutely no reason why the system of University-owned fraternity housing facilities cannot be of great and equal benefit to the University and fraternity system."

The report does stipulate that before this housing can be successful, "sufficient broad, but specific, limitations and guarantees" must be mutually agreed upon during the contract negotiations. The report lists six suggestions which "if incorporated, should create a system of University built and owned fraternity housing facilities which are not just satisfactory, but truly beneficial to all chapters involved as well as the University."

Separate Units

The provisions point out that the University-owned fraternity housing units should be separate and occupied solely by the members of a single fraternity. Each unit should have a warm-up kitchen since it is economically and legally impossible for each house to have a fully-equipped kitchen, the report states.

The report also stipulates that each house should hold a long term contract with specific provisions for renewal, termination, and repair and maintenance arrangements during summer months.

In addition, financial arrangements should be paid to the University in a fixed fee regardless of size and each house should provide for its furnishings. Parking spaces should be allotted to each house, and the architect should confer with representatives of each fraternity about interior and exterior design.

The committee contacted deans of men and presidents of interfraternity councils at universities where fraternity

University-housing is in effect to compile the report.

It was found that two universities have ten chapters living in separate sections of a dormitory and the other twelve, totaling 118 chapters, have individual living units.

In six of the 14 schools, the university negotiated directly with the students on financial arrangements, and at the other eight, leases between the university and the chapter were arranged.

Chapters Satisfied

The majority of the schools reported that the chapters seem to be satisfied. However, several reasons for dissatisfaction listed by five of the schools were: "Financial arrangements, repair and maintenance and too much university control."

Non-complex chapters mention university domination during the rushing period as a point against those chapters in the complex. Twelve of the 14 schools felt that conditions are satisfactory from the administration's point of view. The other two believe that private housing is more desirable.

Questionnaires were also sent to the executive secretaries of fraternities on this campus. Of the 18 fraternities responding, ten have a total of 40 chapters living in complexes and all but five are owned by the parent institution.

Six chapters said they had no problem, but other mentioned some difficulties. The problems mentioned included, "Undergraduates are not happy and lack the pride of ownership; alumni object strongly; finances are more difficult, and exterior and interior decor is either not functional, unattractive or too standardized."

These chapters advised that individuality must be maintained and that financial and administrative responsibilities must be worked out in advance to the agreement of both university and fraternity.

Answers to other questions brought out that close relationship should be maintained when financing, construction plans and contract terms during the planning of the complex are made. Individual undergraduate leadership must be maintained by individual chapters.

The point most repeatedly stressed was the fact that finances, administration and chapter management should be left to the leadership of the individual chapter.

Mike Gottschalk is the chairman of the expansion committee. Other members are Bill Hayes, Dwight Bletscher, Steve Gold and Ron Langhoff.

Debate Meet Opens Today

The University is hosting 120 debate teams from fifty colleges and universities in 11 different states Thursday, Friday and Saturday in the annual Intercollegiate Debate Conference.

Dr. Donald Olson, director of debate, and Dr. John Pe-telle, assistant professor of speech, are directing the invitational debate tournament. Besides the debate teams, the program includes 48 entries in oratory, 63 in extemporaneous speaking and 56 in interpretative reading.

Each school is required to provide a competent critic for every two debate teams it enters. Nebraska judges will be used only during the debate semi-finals and finals, Olson said.

A sweepstakes award will be presented to the school with the most overall points and a trophy will be awarded to the winner of the championship debate in junior and senior divisions. Certificates will be given to superior participants in all events.

The debate question is: "Resolved: That law enforcement agencies should be given greater freedom in the investigation and prosecution of crime."

Debate teams are divided into junior and senior sections; people with less than two years of intercollegiate debate comprise the junior division.

Teams have two members. Constructive speeches are 10 minutes in length, and rebuttals are five minutes. Rounds will be divided into preliminaries, quarter-finals, semi-finals and finals.

Original oratory entries are written by the students during this school year.

General subjects for extemporaneous speaking are current, national and international affairs.

African Program Scheduled

The first of a four-meeting series on contemporary problems in Africa is scheduled this weekend.

The program, sponsored by the University YMCA will begin Sunday at 2 p.m. Emphasis at the first meeting will be on South Africa, according to Dave Kittams, chairman of the YMCA public issues committee.

A film made by the South African government and possibly another film from a different source will be shown. Kittams said. He said the group is attempting to show both sides of the picture in the country and is not trying to "sell" any particular story.

A discussion after the film will be led by African foreign students. Kittams said later meetings will deal with Rhodesia and the African Portuguese colonies.
