Preps Attend Meet

More than 53 Nebraska high schools were represented at the 9th annual conference on Science in Agriculture last weekend on the University's East Campus.

The Lincoln session was the first of three such conferences being sponsored this month by the College of Agriculture and Home Economics for outstanding high school juniors and seniors.

It was restricted to boys, because high school girls from eastern Nebraska will attend Hospitality Day at the College April 2.

Science in Agriculture Conferences at Scottsbluff March 25 and North Platte March 26 will be open to both boys and girls. All students must be in the upper quarter of their class.

"The conferences are aimed at giving high school students an insight into the scientific nature of modern agriculture," according to Dr. F. E. Eldridge, director of resident instruction at the College.

A demonstration of how a chromosome is transferred from one variety of wheat to another was only one of 15 which showed how science is used to solve agricultural problems.

Other demonstrations by NU researchers included such varied subjects as The Inner Workings of an Insect, The Protective Shield of Nature, Doing Something About the Weather, and Computers in Agriculture.

The visiting youths in Lincoln were guests of the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce at a luncheon on the campus. The speaker was Dean Louis N. Wise of the School of Agriculture, Mississippi State University.

the House of Representatives. Nancy Goodsell and Joan Bredthauer were elected as the House of Representative members on the committee. They will join AWS Board members Barbara Beckmann, Candy May and Jan Kaufmann and the three students at large to be chosen Friday to form the committee.

Miss Hedgecock explained that the committee would first be involved in the planning stages with writing other schools, contacting locksmiths and deciding whether the system should be operated with keys or by an electronic system.

Other duties of the committee would be planning the orientation for seniors before they received their keys and administering the distribution of the keys.

"There is also a possibility the senior members of the committee could act as a court to judge infringements against the system," Miss Hedgecock added.

In other business, AWS Board member Anr. Windle explained to the representatives how they were to evaluate the demerit system.

"Go down the list of infringements as listed in this year's Campus Handbook and criticize and comment on them according to the opinions of the women in your living units," she said.

Miss Windle added that the reports should also list any reasons the women had for suggesting any possible changes. The reports are due at next week's meeting.

The representatives were also reminded that there is no late date night this weekend and that when a woman is campused, she is restricted to her room and not just her living unit.

age of room, Jan Connell of Chi Omega, said she thinks seniors should not be allowed to move into apartments as they "are needed in the house."

"With the new key system, there should be no reason to move out," she added.

Karyl Bartolain, vice president of Delta Delta Delta, said that whether housing all activities is a problem depends on whether they build an addition, a new house or whether they do not build at all. However, she did say she thought it a good idea that 21 year-old seniors be allowed to move out of the house if they want.

Pam Wood of Delta Gamma, said they did not anticipate any problems in housing the new sophomores. She said that if housing becomes a problem across the campus allowing seniors to live in apartments may have to be done as fraternities now do.

Some types of supervision by an older person was advocated by Mayor Kulish, treasurer of Gamma Phi Beta, if girls were allowed to move into apartments.

Kathy Armstrong, pledge trainer for Kappa Alpha Theta, said that her house has about 10 girls that will not be able to live in the house next fall. She said the house should have seniors to run the house.

If seniors move into apartments, it would hurt the house unity, said Carolyn Freeman, president of Kappa Kappa Gamma.

The quotas had to be raised because there were so many girls going through Rush Week," she said. "But I think they are working to correct this problem by bringing in more houses."

Freshmen Discuss English, Exams At Principal-Student Conferences

By Dan Pillar Junior Staff Writer

More emphasis on final exams is needed for University preparation, a University freshman said Thursday.

He was one of over 3,000 freshmen who met with their former principals and counselors in the twelfth annual Principal-Student conference.

Some of the comments obtained at a session involving former Lincoln High students were: "College chemistry is exactly like what we had in our senior year" and "students who get good grades in high school foreign language shouldn't have any trouble here."

Freshman English received much discussion. "The senior theme we had to write last year was worthless as far as English was concerned," commented one student. "More preparation for essay exams should be made," remarked another.

A special morning seminar conducted by University faculty members gave the visiting principals a chance to discuss various areas of study and their relationship to University freshmen with the faculty.

Representatives from 212 Nebraska high schools met with their former principals, according to John E. Aronson, Director of admissions and coordinator of the conference.

Due to a shortage of available rooms on campus for the conferences, several campus religious centers allowed their facilities to be used.

Students participating in the conference were asked to fill out a questionnaire evaluating their high school preparation and satisfaction with their University work. The students then handed the questionnaires in to their former principals.

"This is our chance to see how much our University preparation is doing for our students," said Mrs. Martha Cline, guidance counselor at Lincoln High School. "We can use this information to help improve our programs back at our school."

YR's Ask Candidates' Opinions On Taxation

A spectrum of opinions on the problem of taxes was presented last night.

The forum for these opinions was the Young Republicans meeting. Four candidates for the Republican nomination for Lieutenant-Governor presented their ideas. The speakers were Mrs. Fern Orme, Edwin Hart, Ken Bowen, and John E. Everroad.

The program called for each candidate to make an introductory speech. After these, the floor was open for questions.

Mrs. Orme

Mrs. Orme a state senator from Lincoln received the feminine honor of going first. She stated that she was a co-sponsor of a broadened tax bill in the last session and also co-sponsored the income tax bill. "In addition I voted for the sales tax"

"I feel that the fairest tax is one that doesn't take from one party what should be shared by all of us."

"I favor an income tax which would be used to pay the cost of state government," she commented. "I also favor a sales tax, the receipts of which could go for state aid to education."

Mrs. Orme also spoke on the tuition problem at the University. "I didn't like the last year's definitely needs more money to handle the enrollment problem, but it should not come from a tuition increase."

Edwin Hart

The second speaker was Edwin Hart, a Lincoln businessman. He stated that our forefathers found paths through the mountains a century ago. They gave us a road for the future which we are replacing with "paths of selfishness."

"We tend to let government do for us what we should be doing for ourselves," he stated.

Mr. Hart said that he saw the decline of the Legislature's belief in quantity not quality in their bills and the passing of laws without enforcement measures."

"His laws passed for a special interest. I want to know what the advantages of a broadened tax base are, whether they are a more equal taxation or more revenue."

"Another factor is the fault of the public to exercise their right to vote. And finally the public's apparent disregard of law."

"What I want to know is when are we going to get back on the paths of our forefathers. God gave us men to match the mountains of challenge and opportunity."

Ken Bowen

State Senator Ken Bowen from Red Cloud, speaker of the last legislative session spoke next. Mr. Bowen stated that he felt Nebraska's tax system was outdated.

"We are trying to compete with surrounding states for industry and people with the same tax system we had one hundred years ago. We must increase our economy in order to teach our students for the future and to attract new jobs for these students."

"Too often the attitude of the tax-payer is 'The only fair tax is one I don't have to pay'. This attitude is hard to remedy but it obviously won't solve our present problem."

"I feel that the next legislature is going to face very important problems. A resulting factor may be that, in haste, we will adopt a tax plan which is worse than the one now in use"

John E. Everroad

The last of the candidates to speak was John E. Everroad. Mr. Everroad is a Omaha businessman. He said that Nebraska has a definite financial problem.

"We are living in a deficit state. This is so because young people seek employment in states other than Nebraska. This has resulted from the inability of the businessman to provide jobs."

"The only positive side in view is for the state to bring new industry to Nebraska. The Lt. Governor should lead the battle to get the job done. He must be the sales manager of the state."

"I am opposed to a broadened tax base. I feel that the required money could be obtained if we would practice economy in state finances. We don't need additional revenue."
