

Political Party Unveiled

A new political party appeared on the campus scene Thursday evening. It is the Campus Freedom Democratic Party (CFDP).

The party was unveiled by Carl Davidson. He stated that at the moment, the party has no structure or platform, but a meeting will be held next week to organize a convention to decide the platform and structure and also to pick candidates to support for the ASUN elections.

Announcement

The public disclosure of the party took place at a panel discussion sponsored by the ASUN Associates. The subject was "The Student—His Rights and Responsibilities."

Participating in the discussion were Kent Neumeister, president of ASUN, Carl Davidson, Russell Brown, administrative assistant to Dean Ross, dean of student affairs, and Dr. David Trask, associate professor of history.

Davidson, stated the five principles behind the party's formation. The first is that the student in a university belongs to a community engaged in revolution. The next is that the student is an adult in a community of scholars.

The third principle expressed by Davidson was that the primary purpose of the university is to search for solutions to human problems growing out of human needs. Another basic principle of the party is that freedom and democracy are not student privileges, but rather student rights.

The final principle outlined was that students have the right to decide and formulate all rules outside those of the classroom.

"The existing structure of student government must be changed. The decision making is all at the top; the government is top-heavy. This decision making must be moved down to the grass roots of the student body," said Davidson.

Critical Situation

"The situation is too critical to change slowly. Change must come about rapidly. The student government must formulate all rules outside of the classroom. Those within the classroom should be decided upon by the faculty."

Neumeister stated that the essential element in the university is the students and the faculty, not the administration.

"The corporation approach to university organization must be modified. The students should take a part in the creation of the rules and regulations and it is the responsibility of the students to follow the rules set up. The role of the administration is secondary," declared Neumeister.

Representing the administration in the discussion was Russell Brown. Dean Ross had planned to attend the discussion, but due to a change in the time, was unable to attend because of a previous commitment.

"Based on reason, dissent, confrontation, and continuous dialogue between all areas of the University, an effort to re-evaluate the procedures of all aspects of the university should be pursued," said Brown.

"The responsibility for the procedures of these aspects of the university should be shared. They should not involve a guerrilla warfare where one aspect tries to wrest power from the other."

Later, in the questioning period, Brown stated that the stage of shared responsibility which could be obtained has not yet been reached.

Principles

Trask stated that the university should apply three general principles to its actions.

"The first principle is to keep the regulation of students at a minimum. This minimum being the safeguards of the student's health, welfare, and safety," stated Trask. "To go beyond this minimum is to limit the student's freedom."

"The next principle is that the university must have safeguards against manipulation, coercion, and humiliation of Hardin Says . . .

'Supplemental Funds' May Solve Problems

By Bruce Giles
Senior Staff Writer

While not guaranteeing that tuition will not be raised, Chancellor Clifford M. Hardin says "hoping that a supplemental appropriation from the 1967 Legislature will be the solution," to budgeting problems.

Hardin told the Daily Nebraskan that the University may have to resort to other alternatives including a tuition increase, cutting back on non-teaching functions or a special session of the Legislature.

Gov. Morrison said Wednesday that expenditures exceeding the present appropriation could best be handled by a supplemental appropriation.

'Supplemental Spending'

Vice Chancellor Joseph Sosnik stressed the important difference between a deficit spending and supplemental spending.

He said that in January, when University officials would go before the Legislature, the University would not have spent money that it did not have, but would ask for additional appropriations or it would be forced into deficit spending or one of the other alternatives.

April 15 has been tentatively set as the date for a meeting between the Legislative Budget Study Committee, University administrative officials and Board of Regents.

Due to an increased enrollment not provided for in the original appropriation, the University now faces a $500,000 or more deficit.

Closed Meeting

Hardin also announced that at a closed meeting with the University registrar and deans Thursday, the working enrollment was set at 17,200.

"I made it extra clear on certain points with respect to budgeting," Hardin said of the meeting. "I did assure them that we would follow a general pattern for budgeting laid down by the Legislature last year."

"We are not considering the curtailment of any phase of any major project from existing programs," he said.

He said that allocation would be made in the line of authorizing money for the most critical areas of need.

"I think we have allocated sufficient money for teaching positions to handle, if it should materialize, an enrollment of 17,200," Hardin said.

'Working Figure'

Hardin stressed that this figure is not an enrollment prediction but a "working figure for budgeting purposes only."

He said the 17,200 figure would "undoubtedly be revised as we go along," but is a reasonable place for planning purposes.

When asked about enrollment possibilities reaching 18,000, he said, "This is a possibility, but at this point I don't believe the information is solid enough that we want to predict a number that large."

Dean A. C. Breckenridge said that once more University applications are received, the University will "know more than it now knows."

Sosnik noted that the commitment of resources for an enrollment of 18,000 "once made, is irrevocable."

Resources Commitment

Sosnik said that if the enrollment did not reach 18,000 and commitment of resources was made of for 18,000, the "institution would be charged with irresponsibility in using resources."

Sosnik cited years when legislators made statements against what they termed "obvious padding" by the University after the estimates made in previous years had not been realized.

If the enrollment did exceed 17,200, Hardin said, "Every department has some people it can call on in an emergency situation."

"But we are not suggesting that we won't have 18,000," Sosnik added.

Housing Problem

If enrollment does increase beyond the 450 persons that can be housed in the new Marie Sandoz Hall to be opened next fall, there will be many others who will have to find housing elsewhere, Hardin said.

Hardin denied reports that the meeting also included discussion on who should determine sizes of class sections.

"No!" Hardin said when asked if this had been discussed. "We are guessing an average class size no greater than this year."

"We expect the deans to give recommendations but not more so than in the past," Hardin said.

Alpha Phi Omega Aids Boy Scout Goodwill Project

Members of Alpha Phi Omega, national Boy Scout service fraternity, spent last Sunday afternoon helping with the 10th annual Boy Scout Good Turn for Goodwill.

The University chapter unloaded and slacked Goodwill bags filled with used items.

Cubs and Scouts from the Cornhusker Council, Boy Scouts of America, had distributed the Goodwill bags to Lincoln residents the week before.

Alpha Phi Omega is a service fraternity, composed of college men who have been in Scouting.

Bowers Speaks To Czech Club

Speaking on his experiences in Czechoslovakia, Col. William H. Bowers, professor of aerospace studies at the University, addressed the Tuesday meeting of the Czechoslovakian Club.

Bowers, formerly a military attaché stationed in Prague for three years, showed slides and gave a commentary on the political and economic conditions of Czechoslovakia.

The club also discussed plans for holding a Czechoslovakian spring festival in May.

The last piece of privately owned property on campus will be saved, Nebraska State Historical Society officials have voted to accept the Constance C. Syford home, 709 N. 16 St.

Home, Terms Of Will Accepted By Society

The Board of Trustees of the Nebraska State Historical Society has voted to accept the Constance M. Syford home, plus the accompanying terms of the will.

The Syford home, located at 709 North 16th, was the residence of Constance Syford, a former University English instructor.

Miss Syford died May 20, 1965, at New Haven, Conn., where she was engaged in literary research at Yale University.

Along with the home, the Historical Society receives $15,000 for the upkeep of the home, and another $15,000 which is to be used for restoration of the house.

Miss Syford's will covered 14 legal-sized pages and contained certain stipulations for the University to follow.

The east half of Miss Syford's property is to be offered to the University with the intent of becoming part of the campus. The sale must be made for a price not less than $50,000, and if made, would be subject to the condition that the building would not be made a parking lot.

The $50,000, if paid, would be returned to the University for the building of some type of student activities building, providing the Board of Regents accepts the condition within one year of the reading of the will.

According to Marvin Kivett, director of the Historical Society, the exact age of the house has not been determined.

"Preliminary research suggests that the home may have been owned as early as 1885 by Rev. E. M. Lewis, a Civil War veteran and a pioneer minister," he said.

"We will have to do more research before we can determine how old the house is," Kivett added.

Union Expansion 'Possible'

The Nebraska Union has submitted a program statement to the Administration which could result in an expansion of Nebraska Union facilities by January 1968, according to Allan Bennett, director of the Nebraska Union.

He explained that a program statement was a statement of the Union's present facilities and what facilities will be needed in the future.

"The Nebraska Union was called upon to prepare and submit a program statement he said, "including an analysis of needs as we see them in all areas."

Needs Assessed

An attempt was then made, he continued, to assess the need for space in terms of square footage and to present it with proper priority.

"Our statement is under consideration at the present time and we will consult with the Administration in the next two weeks," Bennett added.

In compiling such a report, he noted, student enrollment projections, the existing space and how it is utilized, a projection of need facilities and "other factors" are taken into consideration.

An example of an "other factor" is the use of the Union cafeteria in relation to the growth of dormitories.

$1.3 Million

Approximately $1.3 million has been set aside for the Union expansion "on the basis of available student fees and the recent bond issue."

"With very careful usage of these funds we could expand by about 45,000 square feet," Bennett added.

He continued that the expansion would be made to the existing Union building. The building could be expanded to the west, north and east to envelop the patios and another floor could be added to the new part of the building.

The architect, Leo A. Daly and Sons, of Omaha, did the plans for the expansion in the 1950's.

"The man in charge of this project has a personal interest in the University and will help all he can," Bennett said.

Fall Construction

Although the projected schedule is not firm, he continued, the architects' drawings would be ready for contractor's bids by July 1 and construction would begin in early fall.

"Obviously there will be disruptions to the existing facilities as the building progresses through the year," he noted. "Although the disruptions will be quite painful, they are quite essential."

He added that almost every existing Union facility except the games area would have some work done during the construction although the work would be done at different times.

He cited examples of the expansion as being enlarged cafeteria and Crib, other rooms the size of the main lounge and large and small meeting rooms.

"The cost is being held down because the kitchen and air conditioning is ample," he added. "Also the heavy construction is already done."

"We are simply completing the originally planned addition of several years ago," Bennett said.
