Nine Alumni To Participate In Masters Week Program

By Bruce Giles
Senior Staff Writer

Nine distinguished alumni of the University will return to the campus for the fourth Masters Program Monday.

The Masters are John H. Becker, Forrest E. Behm, Eugene Holland, Sen. Calista Cooper Hughes, Walter M. Judd, J. Martin Klotsche, Milton E. Mohr, Albert H. Moseman and Allen J. Sutherland. "Builders of Today, Heritage for Tomorrow" is the theme for the program, sponsored by the Student Senate and the Chancellor's office, according to Jim DeMars, chairman of the program committee.

The Masters will offer their experiences, not as formulas for success, but as guidelines for meeting the challenges which the future holds," commented DeMars.

The Masters will arrive in Lincoln Sunday and will begin a round of informal appearances at student living units and various student programs, including the Honors Convocation Tuesday morning.

Becker is the partner-in-charge of the Omaha office and supervising partner of the Lincoln office of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co. A member of the Board of Directors of the Omaha Chamber of Commerce and councillor for the Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben, Becker is past president of the Omaha Chamber of Commerce and former vice-president of the Nebraska Society of Certified Public Accountants.

He is also vice president of the Omaha Junior Achievement program and a member of the Board of Regents of Creighton University.

Behm is president and director of Corning Glass International, S.A., a subsidiary of Corning Glass Works. He was named manager of manufacturing for the Electrical Products Division in 1960 and elected vice president of Corning Glass Works in 1962.

Holland is a member of the Board of Directors of Gulf, Mobile and Ohio Railroad. An active worker for construction of Memorial Stadium, Holland is the past president of Masonite Corporation and former Gypsum and Lime Co. He is also a former president of the Chicago Alumni Club.

Sen. Hughes, the only woman in the Masters Program, was elected to the Legislature in 1964. Active in civic affairs in Humboldt, including the Hospital Fund and Heart Fund, she also taught French at Humboldt High School for one year. She has lived in 10 foreign countries from 1936-1961 with her husband, who was in the State Department.

Mrs. Hughes, a member of Mortar Board, is past president of Pi Beta Phi.

Judd is a former Congressman from Minnesota. He received a Distinguished Service Award from the University in 1945 and holds honorary doctorate degrees from more than 20 universities. He served in Congress from 1943 to 1963. In 1962 he was named one of the five most influential members of the House of Representatives.

Klotsche is chancellor of the University of Wisconsin. He is the former president of the Wisconsin Association of Presidents and Deans of Instructions of Higher Learning and has served as director of the Institute of World Affairs in Geneva, Paris, and Salisbury, Conn.

He is a member of the Governor's Committee on the United Nations, the Board of Directors of the National Conference of Christians and Jews and president of the Milwaukee Rotary Club.

Mohr is vice president of Bunker Ramo Corporation and past president of Thompson Ramo Wooldridge Corporation. He received an honorary doctorate degree in engineering from the University in 1959.

Moseman is the assistant administrator for Technical Cooperation and Research, Federal Agency for International Development (AID). He was director of Agricultural Sciences of the Rockefeller Foundation, New York City, from 1960 to 1965 and a consultant on research and education to the Secretary of Agriculture in 1963.

Ferguson To Leave With Hall

A former University journalism student and editor of the Daily Nebraskan has been appointed as instructor and assistant to director-designate William E. Hall of the Ohio State University School of Journalism.

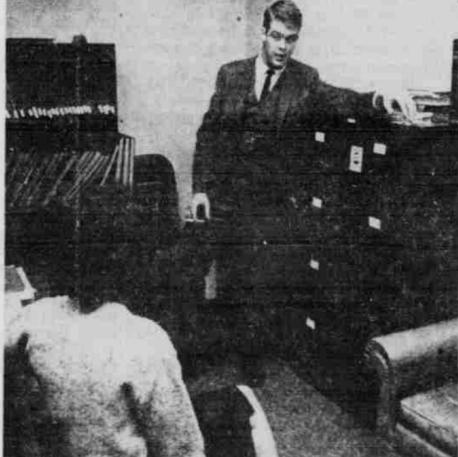

Donald L. Ferguson, who is now journalism advisor at Lincoln Southeast High School, will join Hall, present director of journalism at the University, at the Ohio school.

The announcement was made simultaneously in Columbus, Ohio, and Lincoln by Dean J. O. Fuller of the College of Arts and Sciences at Ohio State, and Hall.

Ferguson, who will be 26 Saturday, grew up at North Platte. He holds a Bachelor's Degree in journalism from the University and a Master's Degree in journalism from Northwestern University.

When at Nebraska, Ferguson was "Outstanding Nebraskan," president of Young Democrats, president of the Interfraternity Council and a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity.

He has taught the past two years at Lincoln Southeast while serving summers on the University's All-State journalism staff.

DAVE HOPCRAFT, . . . managing editor of the Ohio State Lantern, discusses the controversy about Dr. Hall with Jo Stohlman, editor of the Daily Nebraskan.

Hall: Misinterpreted?

The managing editor of the Ohio State Lantern "is not here to dig up dirt about Dr. (William E.) Hall," resigning director of the University's School of Journalism.

"I am here in Lincoln strictly for a story; I've been taught to go to the source of my story, and here I am," emphasized Dave Hopcraft.

Hopcraft, a 22-year-old senior in journalism at Ohio State University, has spent the last two days interviewing Administration officials, students, and faculty members of the School of Journalism.

During a news conference held in the Nebraska Union Thursday, the collegian said that although he hadn't had adequate time to confer with Hall, the conflict between Hall and OSU journalism faculty members may have originated from a "failure of communications."

"At this point I would say that Hall may have been misinterpreted or misquoted in the Ohio press," stated Hopcraft.

"From what I've seen and heard in Lincoln so far, I would say that Hall does not intend to turn the Lantern into an Administration house organ, nor become an Administration 'yes-man,'" he said.

To Hopcraft, the difficulty at Ohio State arose from the manner in which Hall was picked to head the OSU School.

of Journalism. "The question isn't Hall; it's the way he was chosen, said Hopcraft. "Hall was picked by the Board of Trustees over the vote of nine out of 15 faculty members."

Last week the OSU Student Senate voted to oppose Hall's appointment to the School. Four days later they reversed their decision. Hopcraft said he did not know the reason for the reversal.

"I'll be better able to evaluate Hall and his previous statements to the press after I've had another chance to talk with him," Hopcraft said.

Executive Candidates Meet In Heated Debate Thursday

By Julie Morris
Senior Staff Writer

The three ASUN presidential candidates took potshots at parties, platforms and personalities in a debate Thursday afternoon.

Approximately 150 students crowded into the Nebraska Union main lounge to hear the candidates, Dave Snyder, Terry Schaaf and Steve Abbott.

Discussion of a student bill of rights dominated the debate. All three candidates indicated they favored a bill of rights.

Snyder declared he is "not in favor of forcing through" a bill of rights "written by a small committee."

Schaaf stated he is for a bill of rights only as a specific proposal. He urged that rules and regulations be studied to see what the rules are before a bill of rights is formulated.

"I think it's going to be easier to get the Board of Regents to agree with us if we enumerate the rules we object to," Schaaf said.

Abbott is running on the Campus Freedom Democratic Party ticket, which is using a prepared bill of rights as the party's platform.

Schaaf insisted that a bill of rights, if formulated, must be "third" in the order of business, to come after rules and regulations have been "determined and evaluated."

"First things first," Abbott retorted, "you have to start with a firm clarification of what student rights and privileges are." A bill of rights, he maintained is designed to set forth "general principles of government."

"Simply saying you have these privileges is not going to get them for you," Schaaf said. "The end result is going to be the same; I'm looking at it from the practical standpoint."

OSU Group To Protest Hiring Hall

The Free Student Federation (FSF) at Ohio State University planned a picket for Friday to protest the hiring of Dr. William Hall as director of the School of Journalism.

Hall, who is presently director of journalism at the University, was hired last week to take the Ohio post as of July 1.

Robert Queisser, chairman of the group's coordinating committee, said the OSU administration building will be picketed by the group Friday and a rally will be held on the campus oval that afternoon.

The FSF decision followed a discussion of the issue before more than 500 students Wednesday afternoon at a forum on the oval.

The Federation called Hall's appointment "an administration violation of academic freedom, faculty autonomy and student rights."

Ira B. Harkey Jr., an OSU journalism instructor and Pulitzer Prize winner, said at the forum the new director will turn the campus daily newspaper, the Ohio State Lantern, into a "house organ for the administration."

"The Lantern is the issue" and the issue is "symbolized and personalized in Paul Barton," he said. Barton has been acting director of the school since the death last year of George Kienzle.

Chemistry Expert Speaks At NU

A nationally known chemist, Dr. Charles H. DePuy of the University of Colorado, spoke at the 355th meeting of the Nebraska Section of the American Chemical Society at the University April 14.

An authority on the mechanism of his elimination reactions in chemistry, he spoke on "Rearrangement of Cyclopropanol and Its Derivatives."

Graduate Enrollment To Double By '70

Graduate school enrollment at the University has increased from 1,305 in 1960 to 2,334 in 1965.

Furthermore, said Graduate Dean Mark Hobson, the enrollment is expected to reach 4,623 by 1970.

Hobson said these figures represent enrollment in graduate work including the advanced professional program in Teachers College, but does not include that part known as graduate education in the areas of medicine, law, pharmacy and dentistry.

Nationally, according to an article by Time magazine, the graduate student enrollment has increased from 314,000 in 1960 to 510,000 in 1965. It was also estimated that by 1970, there would be 800,000 graduate students in the nation.

"Selective"

Hobson said the University last year received about 9,000 requests for information about graduate work. He said there were over 3,000 persons who actually applied and that there were about 750 who were ultimately accepted.

Hobson noted that the graduate program is not "wide-open," and that it is quite selective in its admissions program.

The dean said graduate student enrollment "more than keeps up with the undergraduate enrollment" and that there is a "direct relationship between the two. We would expect the graduate school enrollment to go up because of the greater number of undergraduates."

He said the opportunities for graduate study are even greater now than in the past due to an increased amount of fellowships that are available.

"A big factor is federal involvement in providing money for fellowships," Hobson said. Noting that the increased number of financial grants in the science area has been criticized in some circles, he said the distribution of graduate students in the science area has remained about the same—55 per cent.

Draft, GI Bill

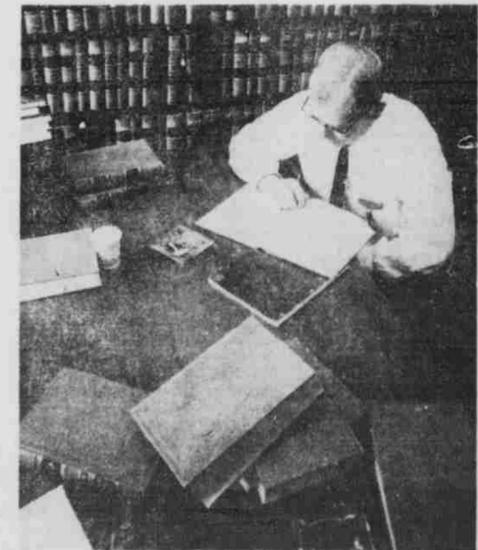

Hobson said it is hard to tell the effect of the draft and GI Bill on the number of graduate students.

About two-thirds of the graduate students at the University come from schools outside the University, according to Hobson. He said about 20 per cent of all students getting their baccalaureate degrees go on to get their masters degrees and about 2.5 per cent get their doctors degrees.

He said some areas of graduate study have about their maximum capacity right now, but noted that the determination of the number of graduate students is decided primarily by the departments.

Hobson said the graduate work is designed for the student with a B average or better. He said in about two-thirds of the cases, the applicants are referred to the department, and the graduate committee makes a recommendation whether to accept the student.

He said that in most cases, the graduate committee's recommendations are followed, but that the graduate dean's office can go back and discuss any person in question.

LAW LIBRARY . . . is one of the main places that the ever increasing number of graduate students spend time on campus.

NU Students Will Present 'Death' Play

A wild, vicious and jazz-filled comedy of death in New Orleans is the subject of a three-act experimental play at the University Monday and Tuesday.

Written by Andy Backer of Scottsbluff, a graduate student in speech and dramatic art, the play entitled "Didn't He Ramble?" will be shown at 8 p.m. in Howell Memorial Theater both evenings. Admission is 50 cents.

Backer, who was recently seen as George in the University Theater Production of "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" has been writing plays for eight years, some of which have been presented at the University.

He is the recipient of a $2,500 Shubert Playwriting Fellowship and has been active in the University Theater as an actor, director and playwright since 1956.

"We promise a full evening of fast, furious, funny and frightening entertainment," Backer said. A live band will provide a musical prologue of New Orleans jazz beginning at 7:45 p.m.

Experimental plays such as this provide an opportunity for talented University students to see their plays performed under live audience conditions.

ACM May Form Chapter At NU

A meeting for students interested in forming a University chapter of the Association for Computing Machinery (ACM) will be held Thursday at 3:30 p.m.

Dr. Mario Juncosa from ACM will speak at the meeting which will be held in Room 232 of Nebraska Hall.
