Husker miler Orlando Martinez will run his specialty at Drake Relays this weekend.

Sevigne Changes Relays For Drake

Coach Frank Sevigne is making a few changes in relay combinations this week as the Nebraska Cornhuskers prepare for the Drake Relays Friday and Saturday in Des Moines, Ia.

The Huskers have not failed to record at least one baton title on the Big 3 circuit—Texas, Kansas and Drake—since Sevigne's arrival at NU some 12 years ago. But to date the Huskers would be blanked, and Frank would like to change things just a bit this week.

"We'll shuffle the mile relay lineup, but I'm not sure who will be added or replaced," Frank said. "Tom Millsap is going back as the leadoff man in the 440 relay."

Last week at Kansas the Husker 440 team was out of the money after a bad Larry Liss-to-Dave Crook handoff on the initial leg. The NU sprint medley team of Lynn Headley, Charlie Greene, Dave Crook and Pete Scott was a close second to Oklahoma State and no shuffle is planned.

"We'll just try to run faster," Sevigne grinned.

The Drake Relays will also mark the debut of Charlie Greene, world 60-yard dash co-record holder, as a century sprinter. Greene will join Headley, who won the KU title in '09.6, as a twin Nebraska entry at the Drake games.

Other Nebraska entries: Shot put—Jim Beltzer; Discus—Denis Hagin; High jump—Steve Krebs; College Division (Not Open Division)—Orlando Martinez; High Hurdles—Dave Kudron, Ray Harvey; Intermediate Hurdles—Dave Kudron.

Husker bright spots at Kansas were: Headley's 100-yard dash victory; a 63-foot discus toss by newcomer Hagin; and some fine first-year sprinting by Clifton Forbes.

Forbes won the frosh cen-tile for the Husker frosh mile relay team that was just nipped at the tape by a great comeback leg from premier miler Jim Ryan of Kansas.

"It wasn't that we did so poorly, because we were up against some pretty darn good competition," Sevigne said. "However, we didn't do as well in some events as we'd like to do or should—so that's our aim at Drake this week," tury and logged a :47 quarter-

Wildcats' Spring Football Has 'Everybody-Both-Ways'

Take the long-term view, suggests Doug Weaver, and you can see big potential benefits in his policy of everybody-both-ways during spring football practice.

"True, we haven't been able to put in as much offense or polish as much on defense as we would have in platoon play, since we can't specialize as much," explains the Kansas State coach. "And there is the temptation to switch back to platoon play during this last part of the drills. But, all things considered, we feel we'll be in better shape for Army, if we stick to our original plan."

The Wildcats open the 1966 season against Army at West Point Sept. 17.

Weaver, at the beginning, thought the both-way drills might turn up six to a dozen both-way players, and still sees that as a possibility. "If we need them," he points out.

"It may be we'll be deep enough not to need two-way men, but if we need them, I can see up to a dozen men who will have benefited a great deal from their experience here in the spring workouts."

Counting off other points of progress in the workouts, the Wildcat coach said squad weight had been brought into line—that the "fat man" squad had been reduced from 14 to no more than five here in the third week of practice, and that surprising new help had shown at quarterback. Bill Nossek, 6-0, 170-pound freshman, and Mike Duncan, 6-0, 190-pound sophomore, are bidding against lettermen Vic Castillo and Mike White at quarterback.

OSU At Standstill

Rain put Oklahoma State's spring football workouts at a temporary standstill. The Pokes did not get any game-like scrimmage last week and at this writing had two weeks and two days to get in the last nine workouts.

Monday remarks from coach Phil Cutchin were, "Right now everything is set around the weather. We'd like to end it all with our spring game (May 7) but another rain, or two, might force us to work a day, or so, after the spring game. I'd like to get in five practices this week."

Cutchin says, "If we'd been able to scrimmage last weekend we'd know a lot more today. I'd like to point out David Dickerson, he's been outstanding this spring as has Tommy Boone (both are offensive halfbacks). We're getting some better interior line play from some of our veterans like Jimmy Goodwin, John Matlock and Kenny Blackburn. They've made a lot of progress and will enter into our plans next fall. Up to date Frank Sneed (defensive end) has had a good spring practice, too. That's about all I can say at the moment. Nothing has changed much since our last workout."

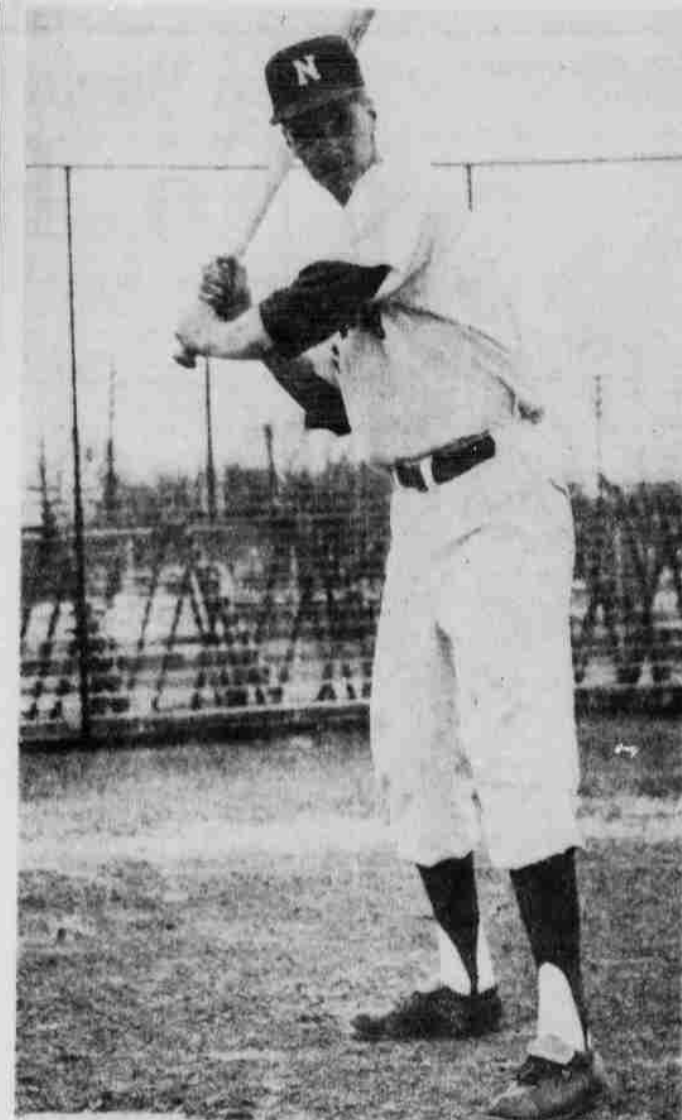

CU Freshmen Excel

Four relatively unsung members of Dal Ward's last Colorado freshman crop, in 1958, were a runty fullback named Romig, a skinny halfback named Schweninger, an undistinguished guard named out of Montana's 8-man ranks named Weidner.

It took some shuffling, but all four emerged as major stars who were prime leaders in the Buffaloes' 1961 Big Eight championship. Ward, of course, got the biggest shuffle of all as he was dealt out of the head job within six months.

Now, eight years later, Ward will finally have all four of these men on the field on the same time,—as well as several other members of that 1958 frosh crew as the CU Alumni begin to grid for the May 7 clash against the Varsity.

Joe Romig, of course, catapulted into instant-fame as a 3-time All-Big 8 and 2-time All-American guard. Gale Weidner moved right into an All-Big 8 quarterback role as a rookie in 1959. Ted Woods' blazing speed, discovered originally by Track Coach Frank Potts during a winter workout and leading to an ultimate 1960 Olympic berth, moved him into a top halfback job.

Centerfielder Alex Walter leads Nebraska hitters with a .341 average.

Lineup Remains Same For Weekend Baseball

NU baseball coach Tony Sharpe said Tuesday that he doesn't contemplate making any big lineup changes when his team meets Missouri this weekend in a three game series.

That means Sharpe will use pretty much the same boys who lost two of three games to Oklahoma State over the weekend.

Missouri has a 2-4 conference record which puts them in sixth place in the Big Eight. The Huskers are in fourth place with a 5-4 mark.

Whether or not Nebraska is successful against Missouri will have a lot to do with the Husker's bid for a conference championship this year.

"We know Missouri is a good ball club," said Sharpe. rader (1-2) have been tabbed to start in Saturday's double-

All of Nebraska's injured should be ready for the encounter with the Tigers. First baseman Bob Brand is expected to play, but a back injury is still giving him trouble when he swings a bat.

Shortstop John Roux is still being bothered by a hamstring pull, and centerfielder Alex Walter with a knee injury suffered against Oklahoma State, but both are expected to be ready.

Sharpe said that the sudden rash of injuries got his team down. "We're trying to get them relaxed so they'll fight back," said Sharpe.

The Husker coach plans to open the game with the same three pitchers against Missouri that drew starting bids against Oklahoma State.

Gary Neibauer (2-1) is expected to start in Friday's nine inning game. Bob Stickers (3-1) and Bob Hergenheider. Both of Saturday's games will be seven inning affairs.
