A letter to the editor of the O'Collegian at Oklahoma State University protested the $5 fine slapped on the writer for not having a parking sticker.

The Daily Illini reports that a proposal to allow women to entertain men in their rooms after noon has been approved. At the same time, the annual "Mom's Day" weekend will soon take place. Over 7,000 University of Illinois mothers will visit the University to see how their offspring are living.

On Or Off?
The fraternities and sororities at Tulane are waiting. The Student Senate will meet soon to determine whether Greek houses should be considered on-campus or off-campus organizations.

State Daily found fault with the student body for their poor attendance at lectures. Following the idea that a college newspaper should serve and inform the student body, the Miami Hurricane is currently running a series on "The Draft and the College Man."

The Kansas University registrar's office was thrown into considerable confusion recently when it received word that Miss America, Debbie Bryant, planned to drop by and arrange for her housing at the University next year. Photographers arrived with cameras ready, but Miss Bryant did not show up.

Painter-Stripper Donates
The University of Minnesota may be the recipient of money donated by a Minneapolis stripper. The young lady has earned a considerable amount of money by disrobing to the waist, daubing herself with paint and then wrapping herself in a sheet of paper.

She offered to donate the money from the sale of her paintings to the Shriners' Hospital, but it was declined because it wasn't earned in a "respectable" fashion. Her charity may now go to the University's pediatrics research.

The Daily Kansan reports that a study is being made for the corner of 15th and Iowa streets. They want to install traffic signals to help alleviate the pedestrian traffic problem.

Draft Women
A proposal to draft women was made by a University of Kansas professor of entomology.

Students at Oklahoma State are presenting their retiring president, Oliver S. Willham, with a portrait of himself.

The Delta Delta Delta sorority at Colorado State has "adopted" a Marine Battalion in Vietnam. According to the Collegian of CSU, the Tri-Deltas said that this project would "be the best way to raise morale."

Shadow Cast
The Gemcock reports that over 100 ballots for the student body elections were lost. This has cast a shadow upon the election.

Modern jazz was used at a church service at the University of Iowa, according to the Daily Iowan.

Five Law Seniors Named To 'Order'

Five seniors in the University College of Law were named to the Order of the Coif Friday night at the College's awards banquet.

The Order of the Coif, a national law honorary society, is composed of those students who maintain academic averages in the upper 10 per cent of their class.

The new members are Harvey Perlman, Robert Lingo, Stephen Olson, Donald Burt and Thomas B. Allington.

The students were honored along with the Honorable Harvey M. Johnson, senior judge of the United States Court of Appeals, 8th district, at the banquet marking the 75th year of the founding of the University's College of Law.

Other awards made to students for article writing: Rocky Mountain Mineral Law Foundation Award, Robert C. Downs; Nathan Burkan Memorial Competition, Stanley D. Cohen; National Grange Competition, Robert S. Lingo.

Culture Exhibits On Display

The first in a series of exhibits depicting a variety of cultures around the world went on display at the University Nebraska State Museum Sunday.

The inaugural display of the Hall of Man, an exhibit of cultural material from New Guinea, was planned by the Museum staff under the supervision of Jane Holden Kelley, associate curator of anthropology.

The exhibit was designed by Nathan Mohler, staff artist and the cases were installed by Ivan Burr and Don Martin, preparators.

The major portion of the New Guinea material is a part of a collection donated to the Museum by the Rev. Albert Frerichs currently of Port Moresby, Papua, New Guinea. Rev. Frerichs, a Lutheran missionary in New Guinea since 1937, was born and raised in Talmage and during a sabbatical leave in 1963 studied anthropology at the University.

Two objects, a mask and carved wooden figure, were donated by Cedric Marks, a New York antiquarian and collector who has evidenced interest in assisting midwestern museums.

Mrs. Kelley explained that a dancing costume on loan to the Museum from David Eyde, assistant professor of anthropology at the University, also will be placed on display. The costume was obtained by Professor Eyde during ethnographic field work in the village of Aci in the southern part of Indonesian New Guinea.

An unusual object in the Frerichs collection, a model of an outrigger canoe, was obtained by the missionary while among the Pinhaven, Bukawa and Malalo peoples

Cereal Chemists Invite Sandstedt To Give Papers

European cereal chemists have invited a University scientist to present some of his research work at three of their large meetings during May.

R. M. Sandstedt, emeritus professor of biochemistry and nutrition, left April 28 to present papers at Stockholm, Sweden; Detmold, Germany, and Vienna, Austria.

The Scandinavian Cereal Chemists Association meeting May 12-14 at Stockholm draws cereal chemists from Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Finland. Sandstedt will present a paper on the effects of certain recessive genes in maize on the properties of the starch.

He will present a similar paper to cereal chemists from all over Europe during Cereal Chemists Days May 15-17 at Detmold, Germany.

At the International Cereal and Brand Congress at Vienna May 22-27 he will present a paper on a method for measuring starch damage in cereal flours.

GI's May Obtain Summer Benefits

Veterans may receive educational benefits under the new GI Bill beginning with the summer school session.

The earliest date for courses under the Veterans Administration payment has been set by law as June 1, with payment to be made the month following each month's study.

Charles J. Chubb, manager of the VA Regional office in Lincoln, said that veterans who expected to enter the summer session could still apply for benefits under the GI Bill before June 1.

Application blanks are available at the VA Regional Office, 220 S. 17th St., and at all County Veterans Service Offices and at major educational institutions.

Information pamphlets and personal assistance in filling out the applications can be obtained at these offices, Chubb said.

The post-Korean War educational program is open to all veterans with more than 181 days active duty service, any part of which occurred on or after Feb. 1, 1955.

The veteran must have received a discharge that is other than dishonorable, or if less than 181 days, he must have been discharged or released for a service-connected disability.

The veterans are eligible for one month of education for each month or fraction of a month that they were on active duty.

Courses may be taken at approved colleges and universities, vocational schools, correspondence schools and at the high school level.

The VA will pay $100 a month to those veterans with no dependents who take full-time courses. Veterans with one dependent will receive $125 a month while those with more than one dependent will receive $150 a month.

Proportionate rates will be paid to veterans taking part-time courses. Earned income of the veteran will not affect his monthly VA payments.

TV Station To Preserve Programs

The University television station is trying to raise funds to preserve films in the Nebraska Heritage Television Library, according to Ron Hull, program manager.

The programs feature persons famous in the history of Nebraska such as Mari Sandoz, General Gruenther, John G. Neihardt and Elsie Cather.

Among the programs now temporarily stored on videotape are presentations based on photographs, letters and diaries of Nebraska pioneers.

The tapes represent 10 per cent of the tape stock owned by the University television station and must be used frequently.

Hull said that replacement of the tapes for preserving the programs on film is important so that they will not be destroyed by use.

Cost of replacement of the programs is $115 for half-hour programs and $210 for one-hour programs.

Contributions for preserving the programs may be sent to the Nebraska Heritage Television Library, University Foundation.

Legislature May See NU Budget

The University's financial problems may be discussed during a special session of the Nebraska Legislature this summer, according to statements from Gov. Morrison and the Board of Regents.

Last Tuesday, the governor disclosed he may summon lawmakers back in June or July to review the subject of intangible property taxation. Morrison then indicated he would include the University's budget headache on the call agenda if the Regents request such action.

Clarence E. Swanson, president of the Board of Regents, has said that if the governor calls a special session of the Legislature this summer, the University's financial troubles should be an agenda item.

A Lincoln Journal reporter, Dick Herman, wrote in a story last week that while Morrison's statement about the possibility of a special session was qualified, there is considerable feeling in state government circles that the session will definitely be called and could run at least a month.

When the Regents last week determined upon an operating budget for the coming fiscal year, they included an anticipated income of $569,612 from a deficit appropriation.

It was presumed that the supplementary sum would have to be appropriated by the 1967 Legislature during the first weeks of the meeting, or else University administrators would face the issue of actually closing down programs and firing some employees.

Herman noted in his story that a legislative decision this summer about financing would give University executives a clearer idea of what may be fully programed until July of next year.

Weeks ago, both Gov. Morrison and senators on the Legislature's budget committee counseled Regents against a special legislative session exclusively to examine University financial woes.

The University ran into its money problems because enrollment has gone higher than anticipated and thus was not fully covered by the 1965-67 appropriations.
