

Drive-Way Dribblers Learning Techniques

Drive-way dribbling has found its way onto the University basketball courts for an "on-the-court learning experience."

It may look like a summer league midget basketball program; but in actuality it's an on-the-court learning process.

Some 300 Nebraska boys from 11 years-old through 11th grade are doing some very serious basketball playing on the Husker courts this summer.

All the boys are participating in the three one-week sessions of the Cornhusker Basketball School sponsored by the University of Nebraska basketball coaching staff.

This summer's Basketball School has been expanded to the three one-week sessions due to the increased interest in the program by Nebraska boys and their parents during last year's one week Basketball School. Coach Joe Cipriano said. The initial program last year brought some 200 boys to the University campus for a basketball instruction period.

Developing Basketball "We are extremely interested in developing better basketball in the State of Nebraska, but we are also anxious to help as many boys as possible develop their athletic abilities, physical fitness and mental alertness," Coach Cipriano said.

Cipriano will be assisted in his instruction duties at the Basketball School by assistant basketball coaches, Glenn Potter and Ed Stevens; and head trainer Paul Schneider as well as members of the 1966 national ranking Husker cage team.

Cipriano's staff will give personal instruction on individual techniques and fundamentals of basketball during the daily sessions of the school. Evening sessions, from 7 to 9:30, will emphasize team play with inter-squad teams.

Unique Sport Cipriano theorizes that "basketball is a unique sport and it takes hours of practice to become a good player. Besides practice, personal attention by qualified instructors at an early age is just as important, if not more so."

During their Cornhusker Basketball School visit, the boys will experience the campus life of a college athlete. They will headquarter at Seleck Quadrangle Dormitory and take their meals at the Dorm Complex. All campus sporting facilities will be available to the boys, including the tennis courts and the swimming pool.

They will practice their basketball techniques on the courts at the University Coliseum, the Men's Physical Education Building and University High School.

Campus Living The boys will have the opportunity to live with Husker cage players who will be counseling the dorm rooms. Both on the court and off the court the boys will be learning about the life and skills of a basketball player.

"This year the Husker team gained national ranking and became a regional and national power because our players developed confidence, self-discipline and competitive drive—all aims of the Cornhusker Basketball School," Cipriano summarized.

"All of us on the staff feel strongly that the Cornhusker Basketball School can make a valuable contribution to each boy's life by exposing him to the important lessons of determination, honesty, team-fair play—and providing him with a great opportunity for summer fun and meeting new friends."

The aims of the basketball school have been designed to transform the dreams of the drive-way dribbler into a reality which some day may come into the form of a red-and-white Husker cage uniform.

From Spacecrafts To Ballets, ETV Viewers Will See Variety

Nebraska Educational Television Network viewers will get a rare behind-the-scenes look at current U.S. space projects Friday, June 17 at 6 p.m. in the first program of a new "Science Reporter" series.

"The First Soft Step," a report on testing of the Surveyor spacecraft, is the first of the 13-program series which National Educational Television will present each week on KUON-TV, Channel 12.

Viewers will accompany host John Fitch of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology on visits to Hughes Aircraft Company and the Jet Propulsion Laboratory to learn about the Surveyor, the spacecraft scientists hope will collect data on the moon paving the way for a manned landing in the 1970's.

Lincoln Recreation Promotes Action

Summer session students will have an opportunity to participate in a variety of recreational facilities offered by the Lincoln Recreation Department according to Robert M. Dula, Superintendent of Recreation.

Leisure time can be spent either in participating in one of the many sports activities offered by the Recreation Department or in being a spectator.

This summer the Recreation Department has added a Show Wagon to its program. The Show Wagon was contributed to the Department by the Lincoln Journal-Star Printing Co. and will host shows on Tuesday and Wednesday nights on the playgrounds of the Lincoln Public Schools.

Both adults and youth are qualified to audition for the several performances. Talents from all of Lincoln will be featured by the Show Wagon.

Sailboating and canoeing instructions, tennis instructions, and golf lessons are being offered for Lincoln residents along with swimming and diving lessons. Chess games will also be open to visitors at the Bennett Martin Library on Fridays at 7:30 p.m.

Baseball and softball fans will be able to continue supporting their favorite league teams as the six city ball organizations wind up for play. Men's softball teams will play evenings on diamonds at University Place, Cooper Park, Ballard Field in Havelock, and Muni Park. Slow pitch leagues are also being formed for the first time this year.

Women's softball leagues will also play ball at Cooper and Muni Fields. A Tot Lot is available for supervision of children during both the men and women's softball games.

Women's swim A recreational swim period for women students and faculty members will be conducted by the Department of Physical Education for women beginning today and continuing daily at 2:30 throughout the summer session.

A fee of 10c will be charged to cover the expense of suit and towel service. Each swimmer will be required to provide her own cap.

Summer Nebraskan Editor: Conde Sharpe Business Mgr.: Jerry Wolfe Information for publication may be turned in to 319 Nebraska Hall or called in at 437-5711, ext. 2424 or 2432. The SUMMER NEBRASKAN is published each Tuesday during the Summer Sessions.
