CFDP Proposes Rights, Powers

All students have the "final power and authority to formulate, legislate and adjudicate all rules and regulations pertaining to student life" outside the classroom according to the preamble of the proposed Campus Freedom Democratic Party (CFDP) Constitution.

The constitution, which is now being studied by members of the party under the chairmanship of Randy Prier, will be the first official constitution of a political party to be submitted to the ASUN committee on constitutions for approval.

The preamble further notes that these rules and regulations must be consistent with local, state and federal laws and the United States Constitution.

CFDP members, who are the main backers of a University Student Bill of Rights, met Tuesday night to discuss and change parts of the proposed constitution.

In the discussion Wednesday night Student Senator Dick Schultz suggested that the phrase "final" be removed from the preamble where it states "final power and authority." He also asked that the words "student life (on campus) outside the classroom" in the phrase "all regulations pertaining to student life (on campus) outside the classroom" be changed to say "students and student organizations."

Schultz said that students did not have the "final" authority to regulate laws according to law and indicated he wasn't sure they should have this right.

His motion was defeated and the words "final" and "student life (on campus) outside the classroom" remained in the constitution's preamble.

The constitution describes the purpose of the party as an organization to encourage increased participation by the students of the University in activities of the ASUN, to plan and operate a program throughout the school year for the establishment and maintenance of the principles in the preamble and to issue clear and studied opinions on major University issues.

Other parts of the constitution concern membership, officers, organizational structure and committees.

The membership section of the document as changed Tuesday night states that any student who subscribes to the principles, beliefs and purposes of CFDP and meets the University extra-curricular activities requirements shall be considered a member.

The organizational structure of the party's constitution calls for a president, vice president, secretary and treasurer along with a group of special standing committees.

The standing committees according to the originally proposed constitution provide for an ASUN officers committee, a research committee, a bill of rights committee, a po-committee, an off-campus independents committee and other traditional organizational committees.

The ASUN officers committee will consist of those CFDP members who are ASUN executive officers or senators. This committee will inform the party of the activities and operations of the ASUN governing body and plan, along with the executive committee, the strategy and operations of CFDP within the ASUN governmental structure.

The bill of rights committee shall be responsible for formulating and maintaining the integrity of a meaningful Student Bill of Rights based on the needs and desires of the students at the University.

The political liaison and campaign committee shall inform the party of the activities of other campus political groups and of such other activities or events which would have a bearing on the operation of CFDP. It will direct the campaigns of CFDP candidates during ASUN elections.

Chancellor To Brief Senators On Budget

Chancellor Clifford Hardin and Vice Chancellor Joseph Soshnik will present the University budget proposal to the Student Senate Wednesday, according to ASUN Vice President Roger Doerr.

"The primary purpose of their coming to the meeting will be to brief the Senate on the University budget request," Doerr explained. "While they are doing this, there will be an opportunity for them to express the role which administration sees for the student in actively supporting the proposal."

Doerr felt that the administration is "anxious for students to become involved in backing the budget. They primarily see the actions of the students as being able to shed a different point of view upon request."

The key factor in the students' support of the budget, as seen by Doerr, is the ASUN Legislative Liaison Committee. "They'll be contacting students as to their problems. In turn, the committee will relate the student's problems to the legislature in the form of a report, rather than a dollars and cents picture."

Terry Schaaf, ASUN president, believes that Hardin and Soshnik "realize the important part that the students will play in getting the budget approved. In order to sell the budget, the students must know about it."

"They are presenting the whole budget to the Senate so that we may evaluate it in our minds," Schaaf said "and then sell the students, who can in turn convince their parents to support the budget."

In other Senate action on Wednesday, Doerr stated that the three Secretaries of Organizations will be approved. The secretaries serve on the Constitutional Committee, which reviews the constitutions of student organizations, one will represent honoraries and professionals, another regulatory organizations, and the third will represent all other organizations.

"I would like to see them become more active in the field of communications between the Senate and the campus organizations," Doerr said. "For instance, if some group should want to present a proposal on the Senate floor, they would first contact their secretary whose job it would be to handle the legislation within the Senate."

Schaaf is expected to present his reasons for vetoing the motion dealing with the closing of the night of Oct. 29 to all campus organizations' activities except the AUF dance.

Doerr stated that he believes Schaaf will request that no action be taken on the veto, but rather will request a whole new motion be made concerning the problem.

The Student Opinion Committee will report to the Senate and outline their role as a service committee to the rest of the ASUN committee structure.

Friday Final Day To Drop Classes

The last day for dropping a class is Friday, Oct. 7, at 4 p.m.

Drop slips are available at window two of the Administration Building. They must be signed by the adviser, or, in the case of the College of Business Administration, the Dean of the college.

Students dropping classes must then go to 111 Administration to get drop cards. Next they must go to the cashier and pay the $2.50 charge for dropping.

Finally, the forms and cards should be taken to window two to complete the drop.

ASUN Court Rules 4-2 In Support Of Senseney

In a four to two decision, the Student Court, Tuesday enjoined Bill Tooley from taking "a Senate seat apportionment to the graduate college."

When questioned as to his plans for future action, Tooley stated that he wasn't sure what they would be but, he would consider, with his lawyer, an appeal.

In the majority opinion, read by associate Justice Klein, it stated that the plaintiff, David Senseney, filed a petition alleging Bill Tooley, a member of the ASUN Senate, received a seat in the Senate "contrary to the provisions of the ASUN constitution. Plaintiff contends that:

1. The reapportionment of the representation of the Senate was not completed by April 1, 1966 and,

2. The reapportionment was not directly proportional as required by Art. VI, Sec. 1 (E) (3) of the ASUN constitution."

The opinion stated that evidence produced by the defense "clearly indicates that the Electoral Commission had completed and published by March 25, 1966, its reapportionment, which included a provision for filling seats not filled by the general election."

"The reapportionment, if it is to be unconstitutional, must fail for reasons other than a failure to make this reapportionment prior to April 1, 1966."

Concerning the action which was taken by the electoral Commission to fill the vacant seats resulting from only three students being elected to fill the six Graduate College seats, the majority stated that "to permit students from other colleges to fill seats apportioned to the graduate college is to permit representation other than by direct apportionment."

"This departs from representation by direct apportionment and embraces a conglomerate system of apportionment which has overtones of being proportional representation. The constitution makes no provision for proportional or any other such method of representation."

The opinion also stated that the majority felt that the "tenor" of the constitution shows that direct apportionment of the Senate seats is not to be modified "at the time of election or at any time thereafter."

In conclusion, the opinion, which had Associate Justices Muller, Turner, and Schrekinger in agreement, stated that the "method of filling seats apportioned to the graduate college but not filled at the Spring election was repugnant to the ASUN constitution."

They based this decision on the fact that the reapportionment was not in agreement with Senate representation within the various colleges in the same ratio as the enrollment of each college to the University enrollment.

'No Good Reason' To Veto Proposal

Extending suffrage to 18-year-old Nebraska citizens would require the support of pressure groups, stated Dr. Arthur Winter, political science professor at the University.

Winter's statement comes in the wake of yet another proposal to give the vote to Nebraskans aged 18 and over.

State Senator Eugene Mahoney of Omaha has said that he will make the current suffrage proposal to the next Legislature, in connection with general governmental reform.

The same proposal has failed to receive a majority vote five times in the past in Nebraska.

He said further that there is probably no good reason for opposing the proposal and that the phrase, "If a man is old enough to fight for his country he is old enough to vote," is the major argument in the proposal's favor.

Four states now allow persons younger than 21 to vote. Both Georgia and Kentucky have extended the right to vote to 18-year-olds and Alaska opened the voting booths to 19-year-olds. Hawaii did the same for 20-year-olds.

Winter noted that Georgia and Kentucky have not been plagued "with revolutionary upheavals" since allowing 18-year-old suffrage. Politically, he said, these states have not moved any further to the left and are still basically conservative.

"The civil rights issue in Georgia has possibly kept 18-year-olds from making any effective changes in the politics of that state," Winter said.

The political scientist cited several factors that would favor the suffrage proposal.

"If you take a random group of 18-year-olds they will be, on the whole, much more idealistic than older voters. I feel it would be good to have a few more idealists in government," Winter stated.

Noting that older people live longer today according to demography studies, Winter said that this would provide a counter-balancing action between conservative and liberal philosophies if the 57,746 new 18, 19 and 20 year old prospective voters of Nebraska were registered.
