Zeta Beta Tau Returns After 5 Year Absence

Zeta Beta Tau fraternity has returned to the University campus after a six year absence. A group of thirteen comprise the pledge colony.

Louis Gadless, ZBT field secretary, explained that the fraternity was originally established on the University campus in 1926 and went off campus in 1961.

"National ZBT and the alumni felt that it would be best to pull the charter until there was enough quality material to build with," he said.

"Now we feel that we have that material," he continued, "and are looking forward to seeing this chapter take its former place as a leader in scholarship, social and activities once again."

Gadless explained that ZBT was considered a non-voting member of IFC and would be considered such until the colony had 25 men with 2.0 grade averages.

This year, he noted, the members are living in dormitories and apartments. Next fall, however, they will have possession of the house owned by ZBT on the south west corner of 14th and R st.

"The Chi Phi's, I understand, will be moving into the fraternity complex," he said.

Officers of the new colony include: Ronnie Frank, president; Jeff Moyer, vice president; Marshall Turkel, secretary; Paul Landow, treasurer; and Rich Jacobson, historian.

The other members are: Bruce Hoberman, Ken Hoberman, John Robinson, Phil Raznick, Barry Lottman, Jim Milder, Abe Gelbart and Jerry Goldman.

According to Gadless, the colony will function as a regular fraternity this year "only without a house."

He added that local alumni have promised support and facilities for social events.

SDS Stresses Change In Universities, Slums

EDITOR'S NOTE: Daily Nebraskan Senior Staff writer Toni Victor attended the regional SDS conference last week-end in Kansas City, Mo. This is an account of the conference.

Social change, from University improvement to slum reforms, was the subject of last week-end's Great Plains Regional Conference of Students for a Democratic Society (SDS).

Twenty-five delegates from SDS chapters in Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska attended the two-day conference held in Kansas City, Mo.

Six representatives from the University chapter of SDS were present. They were: Cater Chamberle, Dennis Bartels, Wes Cooper, Maggie Young, Jerry Hutchens and Joe Knight. Thane Croston, former University student and current editor of New Left Notes for SDS, traveled with the Nebraska contingent to Kansas City.

The program at the St. James Methodist Church centered around the kind of social change SDS is striving for, the philosophy behind the desire for change, and the methods for accomplishing the change.

"We believe in participatory democracy—the right of the individual to make the decisions that affect his life. The people are always right, but only if they have all the facts," stated one delegate.

A majority of the delegates were university students involved in university reforms. In the four-state area, university projects concern the abolition of the grading system and women's hours, and certain curriculum and housing reforms on campus.

The Campus Freedom Democratic Party (CFDP) at the University is a prominent example of other organizations on campus who are working in the same immediate direction as SDS.

APPLAUDS

The Cadence Countesses for 1966-67 are Joyce Carlisle, Nikki Farrer, Carla Gruncewinski, Lucinda Hunter, Kris Juffer, Pat Keating, Courtney Larmon, Nancy Livers, Launa Manstedt, Kathy Place, Linda Ross, Lynn Trombla, Vicky Umberger and Nan Webster.

Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority has announced pledge class officers for 1966-67: Nancy Thorne, president; Ann Brayton, vice president; Susan Deitemeyer, secretary; Vicki Scheyer, treasurer; Sally Reed, house chairman; Kathy Langdon, social chairman; Jeannie Pinkerton, public relations; Carol Andrews, cultural chairman; Jan Donnan, scholarship chairman; Barb Hosford, Panhellenic representative; Carol Lyons, activities chairman; Becky Stone, songs chairman; Rita Tarpley, gifts chairman; and Chris Kress, intramurals chairman.

change the university in a year or two—it will be 30 or 40 years, if then," said Mike James, head of the SDS JOIN project in Chicago.

JOIN is an example of SDS work in the area of slum reform. According to James, it is an attempt to organize poor Southern whites in the Uptown district of Chicago, in order to improve their social and economic position.

Barbara Pondurant of the Topeka SDS chapter explained her program of social reform to the delegates. She is taking a year out from college to work for 70 cents an hour in a laundry in Topeka. She stated that her purpose is to organize the laundry workers into a union for better working conditions.

Changes in U.S. foreign policy were also discussed as the delegates ruled out further demonstrations against the war in Vietnam, on the grounds that such action accomplishes little. Instead, Miss Young of the University SDS chapter, outlined a program in the region of debates centering around the war.

The Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO), VISTA and the Olinsky model for social change—all unaffiliated with SDS—came under heavy criticism from delegates.

James criticized most government-sponsored poverty programs on the grounds that they were organizations for social control rather than social change.

"Social control of poverty districts is the price paid for moderate reforms," James stated.

"Afraid to upset the apple-cart" and "restricted to short-term gains," were two major criticisms of existing poverty programs made by the delegates.

SDS has no real regional structure in the Great Plains area, but it was decided at the conference to continue meeting informally. The next informal regional conference will be held in Lincoln on Oct. 30 in connection with the University Black Power Teach-

Shanks: Rights Workers Should Start On Whites

Speaking to the United Campus Christian Fellowship Sunday, Lincoln attorney Hughes Shanks told members that it was time for white civil rights workers to begin working with their own race.

Shanks, a former member of the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE), explained the "Black Power" movement as being an act of Negroes in turning their backs on whites just to take a look at themselves.

Shanks said that the time has come for Negroes to seek their own solutions to problems instead of following the ground rules of the white man, as they have done throughout the history of the nation.

Pointing out that Negroes have to develop their own political, economic and cultural unity, Shanks said a Negro must overcome barriers of culture, affluence and education to be accepted in a white society.

Pointing to such prominent Negroes as actor Sidney Portier and Ralph Bunche, member of the UN delegation, Shanks said that these men have reached position and affluence but are still denied acceptance because of the color of their skin.

Shanks said that Black Power is not an endorsement of violence but is a look inward on the part of Negroes rather than a separation from society.

At the same time the Negro is looking inward, Shanks said that the white civil rights workers should be returning to their own neighborhood to lead his own neighbors out of bias and ignorance.

Quoting from data and newspaper articles he has gathered from around the nation, he said that police brutality centers around "Negro treatment."

Noting that white investigations had continually shown "no evidence of brutality," Shanks said that he could only conclude that bigotry and discrimination were so engrained in the minds of the police that they consider brutal treatment of the Negro as being common procedure.

In Lincoln, Shanks said that Negroes consider it "very dangerous to call the police into a ghetto." He said that there are now two patrolmen in each squad car patrolling the ghettos.

On the other hand, Shanks said that many policemen he has talked to approach a Negro neighborhood with "fear."
