

Journalists Suspended After Magazine Banned

Washington, D.C. (CPS) —The suspension and subsequent arrest of two student journalists has embroiled Monmouth College in a bitter free press controversy that is viewed on many sides as a challenge to the entire structure of that institution.

Charles P. Kaska and Thomas Breslin, both upperclassmen at the New Jersey college, were suspended for insubordination when they refused repeated orders to cease distributing their independent monthly magazine. They have published The Hawker in violation of the school's activities registration requirements since last February.

Following their suspension, Kaska and Breslin were ordered to leave the campus; they refused and were arrested by local police for trespassing. Their initial arraignment the next day was followed by a week of student demonstrations, sit-ins and rallies.

There is an air of finality about the lines of battle as they have developed thus far. The administration has accused Kaska and Breslin of deliberately forcing the issues. The charge is not being denied; the students are playing their hand for all it is worth.

"We are fighting a whole new battle here," Breslin commented. Both students have vowed to go to jail if necessary and supporters are grimly organizing a class boycott if the two are not reinstated.

Kaska and Breslin have received firm support from inside the college and out. The New Jersey state convention of the American Association of University Professors, meeting Oct. 22, endorsed the actions of the Monmouth faculty and the local AAUP chapter in requesting college officials to reinstate the two, to drop civil charges, and to set up a committee to revise college policy and insure a free press for students in the future.

The administration, however, does not appear ready to compromise much either. Monmouth President William G. Van Note said Oct. 24 that the school had no intention of dropping the trespassing charges against the students, due for trial Oct. 25. "This is a problem involving the administration and the authorized procedure," he said, "not a popularity contest."

Van Note contended that faculty and AAUP statements as well as student protests should have little to say about an "internal" administrative matter such as this. He rejected efforts to mediate the dispute, saying that there is really nothing to mediate.

Why was the magazine attacked at this time, after having survived six issues without official comment? According to the two editors, The Hawker was banned as a result of an editorial in the October issue which called for the removal of a prominent member of the Board of Trustees.

The editorial accused trustee Marcus Daly of a wide variety of unsavory political moves in his latest bid to be elected to local office and suggested that the college "exorcise Mr. Daly and replace him with a man whose commitment is to education and to humanity, and not to himself."

CASHING CHECKS . . . recently has caused problems for the Nebraska Union.

Union Hopes For More Coins To Cash Checks

Inconsistencies in check cashing procedures at the Nebraska Union have provoked inquiries from students.

Students have complained that at times they can cash checks for $25 and then two hours later they can't even cash a check for $1.

Allen Bennett, Nebraska Union director, explained that the Union is given an amount of cash each day from Administration. The amount appropriated to the Union is just not adequate, Bennett said, and frequently the money runs out before the end of the day and no more checks can be cashed.

About fifteen other units on the University campus require a sizable amount of money daily for petty cash and change, he said.

When funds are available, checks for a maximum of $25 may be cashed at the check-cashing window. At any other cash register in the Union a check may be written for one dollar above the amount of the purchase, he added.

During the last six months, requests for more money have been negotiated with the comptroller and the internal auditor, Bennett said.

"Hopefully, the Union will have twice as much money available for check-cashing by the end of next week," he said.

Floating Campus Is In Second Academic Year

The S. S. Ryndam is beginning its second academic year as the floating campus for Chapman College in Orange, California's Seven Seas Division of International Education.

Aboard will be 450 college level students representing 181 campuses from 24 states and five other countries. Major liberal arts interests indicated include sociology, English, education, science, history, business, art, psychology, government and languages.

The distinguished supporting faculty, administration, and secretarial staff numbers 70. In addition, students will meet with representatives from government, society, and industry in the ports of call.

The 107-day fall semester itinerary will include regular college classes six days each week at sea.

In-port activities will originate in the port cities of Lisbon, Barcelona, Marseille, Rome, Athens, Istanbul, Alexandria, Port Said, Suez, Bombay, Colombo, Kuala Lumpur, Bangkok, Hong Kong, Kobe, Yokohama and Honolulu with the semester ending Feb. 4 at Los Angeles.

Prior to embarkation, the entire floating campus community participated in a four-day orientation at Long Island.

Guest speaker was Mr. Shanti Swarup Gupta, Consul-General of India. Final activity was a visit and briefing at the United Nations.

The spring 1967 semester voyage, which departs Los Angeles Feb. 7, will journey to Caracas, the island of Trinidad, Salvador, Buenos Aires, Montevideo, Rio de Janeiro, Lagos, Dakar, Casablanca, Cadiz, Lisbon, Rotterdam, Copenhagen, London, Dublin and Galway, returning to New York May 25.

Crusade For Christ Takes Interdenominational View

Crusade for Christ has come to campus to make a dynamic impact on University students with the Christian message, according to Ed Murray.

Murray, a junior transfer student from Northwestern University, is the student representative of Crusade for Christ, an interdenominational evangelistic arm of the Christian Church, which is starting at the University this semester.

Crusade for Christ was started in 1951 at the UCLA campus and has spread to 100 major U.S. colleges and over 20 foreign countries.

"We stress a personal relationship with Christ and the commitment of the whole individual to Him," stated Murray.

He continued saying that "students don't seem to have a purpose in life, they are falling for everything and standing for nothing."

According to Murray, commitment to Christ is the answer to all problems.

The group is involved in weekly discussion groups that meet Tuesday nights in the Nebraska Union. These meetings are open to all University students. Special discussion groups will also be held in individual living units.

"We have already had two meetings in a sorority and fraternity house," said Murray.

According to Murray, the four main points in the Campus Crusade's message are: God lives you and has a wonderful plan for your life; man is sinful and separated from God; Jesus Christ is God's only provision for man's sin; and man must receive Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord by personal invitation.

Murray describes his group as "conservative" in philosophy and differing from other fellowship programs in that he stresses evangelism.

The group's national magazine, "Collegiate Challenge" asks such questions as, "Must I Give Up Sex?" and addresses itself to subjects like, "Science and the Supernatural."

"We have come here to make an impact with the relevancy of Christ to daily college life," explained Murray.

At present the group numbers about 30 members, but Murray said he is looking for membership similar to UCLA's and other universities where 300 to 500 students attend each meeting.

IFC Elects 2 Delegates To National

Two members of the Interfraternity Council executive committee were elected to attend the National Interfraternity Council (NIC) convention.

They are Darryl Gless, IFC secretary, and Joe Carraway, IFC rush chairman. The convention will be held Nov. 30 through Dec. 3 at New Orleans.

The IFC will pay all expenses for the two delegates from Nebraska. Gary Larsen, president, noted that the IFC is also willing to pay half the expenses for each of two other individuals.

There were four other nominees for the NIC: Jerry Olson, Charlie Baxter, Greg Andrews and Larry Foster.

Larsen announced that he has appointed Mark Schreiber, Phi Kappa Psi, to head a committee to plan an Interfraternity conference next semester similar to the one held last year.

Gail Burbridge, IFC expansion chairman, said that a meeting will be held Sunday at 7:30 p.m. to draw up preliminary plans for fraternity contracts with the University for the fraternity-sorority complex.

Ag Constitution Permits Addition Of New Groups

The Ag Executive Board recently enacted a new constitution which will enable any recognized agriculture or home economic organization to have representation on the Board.

According to Dave Snyder, ASUN senator, the new constitution allows for the addition of new groups and the disbandment of old ones.

Snyder said that basically there were no changes from the original constitution, but only a modernization of its wording.

The Ag Executive Board is composed of one representative from each of the organizations on the Ag Campus and the four ASUN senators from the Ag College. Presently there are about 23 members on the Board, Snyder said.

The main purpose of the Board is to co-ordinate the activities of the agricultural and home economic organizations on the East Campus, according to Snyder.

He also noted that the Board acts as a focal point for the dissemination of information concerning the individual groups and University curriculum.

Snyder said that the main social function of the Board is the Ag Barbecue which is held in the fall of each year.

The purpose of the barbecue is to acquaint freshmen with the Ag College and to raise funds to finance the activities of the Ag Executive Board.

The Board sponsors several activities for agriculture and home economics students such as scholarships.

The Board also works to improve the East Campus through joint actions of the Board's Campus Improvement Committee and the University.

A Convocations committee is presently trying to get speakers who will talk before agriculture and home economics students.

On Dec. 8, the Board will sponsor a Job Opportunity Day to be held at the East Campus for all Ag College students.
