

Innocents Defeat MB's In Quiz Bowl Match

The Innocents Society gained long-awaited revenge Thursday night as they defeated the Mortar Boards 230-30 in the opening match of the 1966 Quiz Bowl season.

Having lost the match in two previous years, the Innocents regained their prestige. Marv Amy was the backbone of the team, as he answered seven tossup questions for 70 points. Other team members included Roger Doerr, Ladd Longquist and Gary Larsen.

Mortar Board team members included Erma Winterer, Marian Sicklebower, Bev Armstrong and Candy Sasso.

Following the Mortar Boards and Innocents match, two teams were selected from the audience to play one match. Members of "This Team" were Mike O'Shea, Cathy Costello, Kelly Baker and Jim McClymont, while members of "That Team" included Don Stenberg, Paul Engstrom, James Specht and William Carson.

"This Team" defeated "That Team" 130-100. Kelley Baker was the high scoring player, answering six tossup questions while Paul Engstrom answered four tossups.

Approximately 150-160 people were in attendance. "I'm extremely happy with the turnout," said John Metzger, Quiz Bowl president. "It looks like a good season."

Moderator for the matches was Charles R. Gruener; Steve Ring served as judge.

Following the match a team captains meeting was held. Rule sheets were passed out, and Quiz Bowl procedures for the year were explained.

All team applications with the $4.50 registration fee were to be turned in at the meeting. Team competition will begin on Nov. 3.

ABC Color Crews Start Game Preparation Early

By Mick Lowe
Junior Staff Writer

To a student, a home football game means functions, hot dogs, and a quick tally of rushing yardage to see how the Huskers figure in the Big Eight statistics.

But to the production staff of ABC sports, a football game means hours of preparation, miles of cable and a multi-million dollar franchise.

Members of ABC's color crew began arriving as early as Tuesday to prepare coverage of Saturday's Nebraska-Missouri game.

Two Journalism School seniors will help ABC's regular crew. Karen Hastings will be script writer and Mike Elgert will be on general assignment.

"We started working on the set-up Thursday morning," said Jim Hay, "and we won't be through until Saturday morning just before the game."

"It takes 50 people to put on a show like this," said Hay. "Most of the members of this crew are from the west coast. A few of us flew in from New York."

ABC will have six color cameras in the stadium. Two will be on electric dollies on either side of the field.

Two will be in the press box and another on a platform above the second deck of the south stadium. The sixth camera will be suspended from a crane.

To the layman ABC's operation seems a fantastic electronic achievement.

"I'd say we've got over a mile of just camera cable and about six times that much for mikes and power," Hay added.

ABC's color vans from Hollywood arrived Tuesday night according to Church Howard, ABC sports producer. ABC has three color units, each one costing over a million dollars.

"The first time we used these units was at the U.S. Open last June. We drove all three units to San Francisco.

We had a total of 17 color cameras, which is the largest color pickup in the history of color television. Now two of the units are on the East coast, and the other on the west," said Howard.

"If coverage is necessary East of the Mississippi, we use our New York crews. If the coverage is west of the Mississippi, western unit handles it."

With the expensive equipment employed in a color cast it seems incredible that shows actually run as smoothly as we see them.

"There are two basic things that can go wrong," explained Howard. "The telephone company can goof us up. Or anything can happen here like losing power in the truck."

"Things can go wrong on the field, too, like a cameraman can get faked out like a defensive halfback and we miss the play. That's why we bring our own crews with us. We need professionals, and that's what we are."

Howard has travelled all over the world to arrange sportscasts. He is the producer for all ABC sports presentations including the "Wide World of Sports."

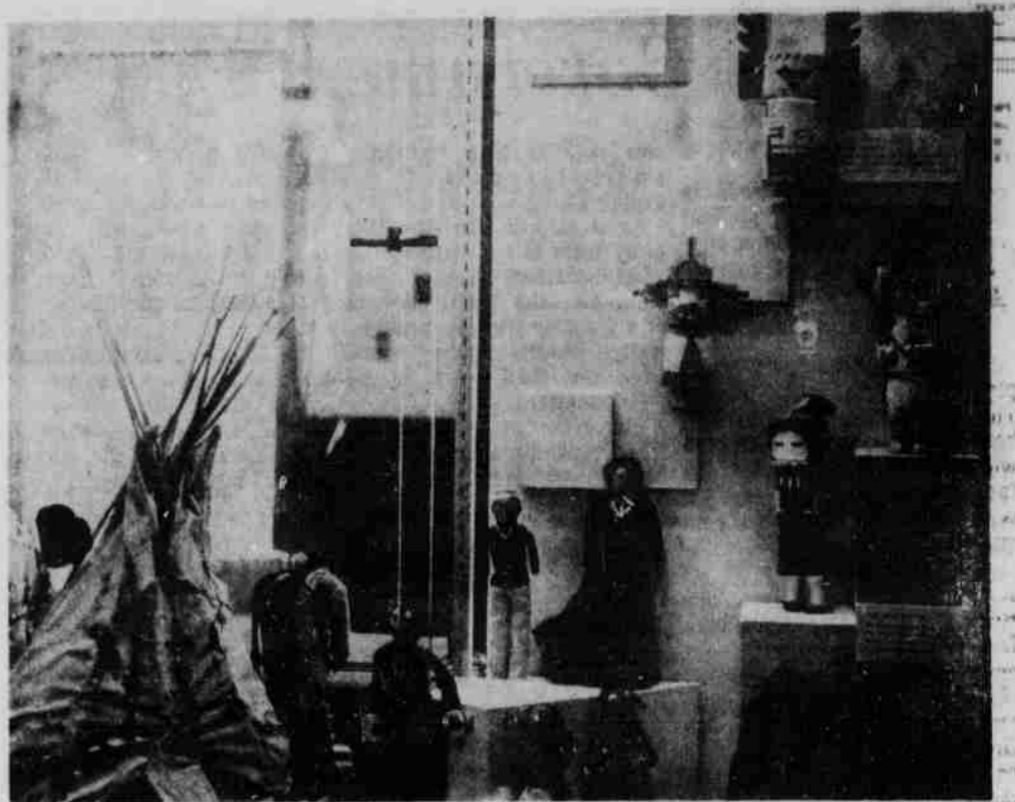

ABC is the only network carrying college football on Saturday. College telecasts are arranged with the NCAA. ABC has purchased the NCAA contract for two years with an option to buy additional two-year contract for 30 million dollars.

Howard and director Andy Sidaris sit in the production van parked outside the stadium and coordinate the sportscasters, cameramen and decide upon video re-runs and stop action cuts.

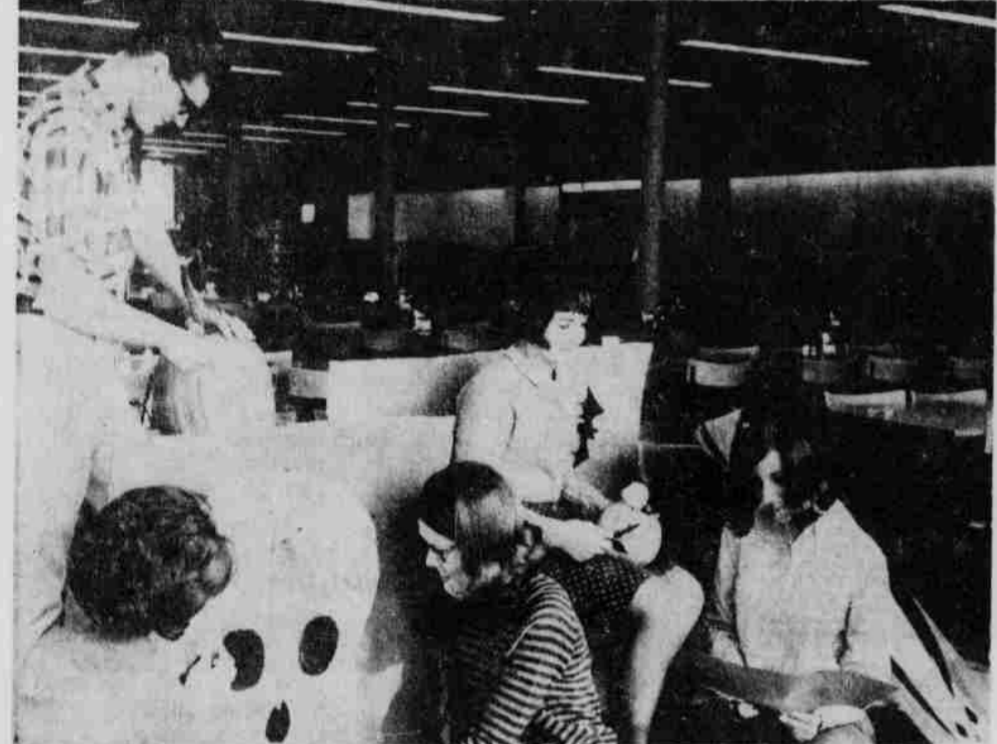

Will the time-outs be longer because of TV coverage? "Definitely not," replied Howard emphatically. "That's one of the great fallacies about TV coverage of a football game."

"There are enough time outs when you take scoring and regular time outs—85 per cent of the time. We never stop the play on the field. In the pros it's a different story. They'll let you stop plays and flagrantly interfere with the game."

The results of the crew's efforts will be evident at 11:45—air time for the pregame show. Kick off is at 12:15 rather than 2:00 because of the time factor on the east coast.

THE NEW DISPLAY in the Nebraska Union museum case is titled, "North American Indian Dolls and Munalins." It replaces a display of Japanese armor. The dolls are most closely associated with children's play and were used in magical and healing ceremonies of Indian groups.

New Chapter At JFK College

The executive committee of the University YWCA presented a program to the women's student body at John F. Kennedy College in Wahoo Wednesday.

JFK college is initiating a YWCA program on their campus, and the Nebraska organization is helping them take the initial steps, according to Jeanne Jaspersen, YWCA president.

The Nebraska committee stressed the fact that YWCA presents a challenge to the college woman, and adds to a well rounded college career. The group also explained various service projects and other functions of YWCA.

Representatives from John F. Kennedy College will be attending YWCA cabinet meetings here next week.

A YWCA program is also being considered by Omaha University.

J-School Depth Report Probes Paradox Of Nebraska's Politics

Prairie Paradox, Nebraska—Its Politics", the fourth depth report published by the University's School of Journalism, went on sale this week.

"The report, hopefully, will provide information to help us all in understanding Nebraska politics," said R. Neale Copple, journalism school director.

The report attempts to examine the paradoxes of Nebraska politics, not its political history, he said.

It explores the matters that cause people to wonder in Nebraska's politics, such as the public allegation of electrical power in a conservative state, he added.

"The immediate prerequisite of all depth reports is to educate the students doing the reports," Copple said.

The report represents two years of hard work on the part of about 30 people, said Mrs. Emily Trickey, editor of the report.

The depth reporting class of senior students worked directly with Mrs. Trickey and Copple.

Student editor was Marilyn Hoegemeyer and student assistants were Frank Patsch and Jim Patten.

The report was illustrated completely with political cartoons by Gunars Strazdins, a University graduate in art who is now in graduate school at the University of Wisconsin.

A supplement of a 100-year statistical study of Nebraska elections was also printed in a limited quantity. The statistics for the supplement were gathered by Marv McNeff, now a graduate student at the University of Wisconsin.

Copies of the depth report were distributed to all daily newspapers in the nation, accredited schools of journalism, state legislators and the heads of campus academic and administrative departments.

The report was financed by the Newspaper Fund, Inc., as were the first three depth reports, Mrs. Trickey said.

She noted the financial aid has been given to the school for five years, which is two years longer than a grant is usually given to a journalism department. The $5,000 grant covered the printing costs of the report. Reports are being sold for 75 cents per copy.
