

Computer Project Aids Law College Research

Enrollment in the University College of Law has nearly doubled in six years, according to Dean Henry M. Grether, Jr.

There are 240 students enrolled, in contrast to 130 six years ago. The growth is causing some problems because of lack of staff, the school's new dean said.

"This creates a particularly difficult problem because small classes are vital to the teaching of law," says Grether. "Law teaching cannot satisfactorily be accomplished by the straight lecture method. Legal education is not based on a concept of memorization of thousands of rules of law."

"Instead, law students are trained in a process of deductive thinking, which requires a Socratic method of teaching conducted by questions and answers, argument and discussion between the professor and students, and between students."

"This technique obviously becomes unworkable when classes become too large," he said.

But despite enrollment problems, the college is moving ahead with a variety of programs.

Among them is the computer project, directed by Prof. John M. Gradwohl. The University Law College is a pioneer in the use of computerized statutes.

All 10 volumes of the Nebraska statutes have been put on magnetic tapes; thus, with proper programming, the computer will kick out, at 1,200 lines a minute, each occurrence of any word in the statutes, or any group or combination of words—either affirmatively or negatively. This will save hours formerly spent in legal searches.

Other uses of magnetic tapes include printing statutes at a nominal cost, showing historical development of statutes, and working with internal statutory references.

Another Law College project is the addition of several senior seminars, with about a dozen students in each. Subject matter planned for the seminars includes unfair trade competition, recent U.S. Supreme Court decisions, medical-legal, business planning, air-space law, electronic data processing, legal history and tax policy.

The Law College also plans 12 sessions this school year on proficiency in trial advocacy. Under the chairmanship of Lincoln attorney Charles Noren, the Nebraska Trial Attorneys Association will cooperate with the college in re-staging actual cases—from selection of jury to decision—before the students.

Doctors will help by appearing as expert medical witnesses. Bar Association members will donate their time. Students will be divided into two groups—plaintiffs and defendants—and will have a chance to question witnesses.

"We'll make the trials as realistic as possible," Grether said. Also in the works is a College of Law-School of Journalism project. Grether said the final round of this year's moot court competition—held before the State Supreme Court—will be on a case with both legal and journalistic interest, such as libel or free press issues.

Thus, while the young lawyers argue the case, the young journalists will "cover" the proceedings.

Lincoln Students' Pictures Planned

Unaffiliated Lincoln students and married students may have their pictures taken for the Cornhusker yearbook Wednesday and Thursday.

Students may sign the appointment list in the photographer's office, Nebraska Union, Room 231, Monday and Tuesday. If necessary, they may make an appointment for a later date.

ASUN Group Surveys Library Facilities Lag

The ASUN library committee will begin on the library facilities at Nebraska.

The purpose of the survey is to inform the campus of the library situation at the University.

According to research done by the Library Committee, Nebraska is lagging behind other universities in the amount of their library budget by several million dollars.

The needed finances have been requested by the University in its $98.6 million budget proposal. Of this budget, $3.5 million is being asked for the libraries. In the past ten years, the proportion of the educational budget devoted to library purposes has declined from 3 1/4% to 2 3/4%. The new proposal allots 3 1/2% to libraries.

In 1965, the University libraries spent only $21.93 per student for both books and periodicals. This allowed only two books per student to be purchased.

In comparison with 14 Big 10 and Big 8 schools, Nebraska rates 10th in the number of volumes in the library and twelfth in the number of books purchased per student.

Another problem is the amount of time that libraries are open. Nebraska's libraries are now open for use 90 hours a week. In the 1967-69 biennial budget, it has been proposed that in the 1967 fall semester, the libraries be kept open until 11 p.m. seven nights a week.

The space available for reading and for book storage is another problem that is being considered. The seating capacity of the libraries on this campus is about 10% of the student body. This is below the minimum standard in most university libraries of 20% seating capacity.

According to John Winkworth, chairman of the ASUN committee, questionnaires will be distributed to students in the libraries on both campuses Monday through Saturday. These questionnaires will be short answer, and will take very little time to fill out. By this method, the committee will gain the opinions of those people who actually use the library.

A leadership opinion poll is also being taken by the committee. A group of campus leaders has been selected and asked for ideas and opinions on the problems of the library system.

The information received from these surveys will be incorporated into the library committee's report.

The committee is also corresponding with state senators until the University budget comes up in the spring. They will explain the problems of our library system and the need for increased funds.

Mimi Rose, Tom Penney Announced At AUF-Beat

Big Man on Campus, Tom Penney, and Activities Queen, Mimi Rose were announced at the AUF-Beat Dance Saturday.

Penney, a member of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, was selected from a group of ten finalists by popular vote of the students attending the dance.

Miss Rose, Pi Beta Phi sorority, was chosen from a group of seven finalists by an interviewing board.

Over a 1,000 tickets were sold to the dance. Linda Mahoney, AUF publicity vice-president said.

The dance kicked-off the annual AUF drive to solicit funds from University students and faculty members for five national charities.

AUF representatives will solicit money from members of the campus living units and sorority and fraternity pledge classes will cover the Lincoln area Nov. 20, Miss Mahoney said.

The drive will continue until Thanksgiving vacation, Nov. 22.

the Daily Nebraskan that he usually incorporates campus situations into his sermons to appeal to the student congregation.

He stressed that he tried to take the attitude into consideration that the congregation inside a University chapel is an educated group and therefore he attempts to use an educated format in planning sermons and make use of the students' willingness to learn.

Since a service is primarily for the purpose of worship, he added, it is not necessary to connect the service with the University as such.

'Unafraid Of Humor'
The Rev. Mr. William Phillips of the United Campus Christian Fellowship emphasized in his sermon Sunday the importance of the individual in Christianity. He said that without sincerity on the part of the individual, any attempts made by the minister and church to reach a true faith are in vain.

One student who attended the service described its atmosphere as "relaxed and unafraid of humor."

During one part of the UCCF service, for instance, an original prayer was presented citing information contained in the daily newspapers during the week.

The UCCF attempts to modernize the church, Rev. Phillips said, to keep it from being "100 years behind the times."

The Rev. Mr. Alvin Petersen of the Lutheran Student Chapel called for "a clasping of hands in faith between churches."

In a sermon entitled "Not Monks, But Citizens", he stressed the need for worldliness among people.

"We can't go into the monastery," he said. "To do so would bring on a repeat of the Dark Ages."

A student attending the service later commented, "Rev. Petersen brings in much more of what is going on in the world around us. He relates his sermons to things which I can understand, and this makes me think more about the things about which he speaks."

Rev. Petersen explained that he tries to relate his sermons to the student, not so much by picking a specific event and preaching about it, but rather "by dealing in a general way with the problems of student life."

Senate To Elect 2 To Fill Reapportionment Seats

Two senators from the Graduate College will be elected by the Student Senate at Wednesday's meeting, which will be held in the Norfolk Room of the Nebraska Center on East Campus.

The senators are being elected as a result of the recent Student Court decision on the reapportionment carried out by the electoral commission. In the reapportionment, three unfilled Graduate College seats were given to senators from other colleges. This was decided by the court not to be according to direct apportionment as called for in the ASUN constitution.

Also involving action resulting from the court's case, the Senate will consider a motion made last week by Sen. David Senesky that any suit filed in any court involving reapportionment of the senate, must be filed in the semester in which the reapportionment takes place.

If the Senate approves this motion, it will insure Mark Schrieber of retaining his seat on the senate. There has been some question as to whether he should be allowed to retain his seat since there was a mistake in the original apportionment carried out by the senate last year.

The senate will also consider rules of procedure for their meetings. These rules will be presented by Sen. John Gerlach, who was chairman of the committee to draw up such a set of rules.

Also, a resolution calling for Dead Week to be the week before finals is expected to be presented, and the Student Welfare committee may report on the progress of its investigations.
