

Icy Sidewalks Raises Hopes For Skate Pond

By Nancy Henrickson
Senior Staff Writer

When the weather turns cold, the biggest problem for University students seems to be getting to class.

Even if the sidewalks aren't covered with ice and it's almost possible to go anywhere without slipping and falling at least once, students face the problem of how to dress for the weather.

Coeds have donned knee socks and over-the-knee socks, big furry coats, wool mittens and hats.

Winter sports also occupy students' leisure hours. Dormitory residents are anxiously awaiting the construction of an ice-skating pond north of Cather Hall.

Construction will begin as soon as the University

Physical Plant finishes plans and estimates of cost, according to Richard Scott, assistant to the Dean of Student Affairs.

"Hopefully, if Colorado gets lots of snow in the next ten days, I will be skiing during Thanksgiving vacation," a junior coed said.

"I evaluate the conditions outside and my own feelings about the importance of attending the class," said Tom Colorado.

As soon as winter comes girls have to change their hair styles from behind the ear to in front of the ear. Other style changes are also evident.

"I wear my big fluffy pierced earrings now," said one coed.

Merry Ballard said that tall girls definitely have a winter problem because over-the-knee socks are too short to be worn with short skirts. Most tall girls wear knee socks and freeze their knees, she said.

Wearing shoulder bags over heavy winter coats is also difficult, Miss Ballard added.

"I carry mine on my elbow and it hangs and knocks against my knees," she said.

One male student asserted that the boys haven't worn long underwear under their slacks since they were toddlers. Another male admitted that he wears long socks.

"I freeze. When it gets cold and the temperature drops below zero, I don't go to class," said one boy who wished to remain anonymous.

D. Donald DeForest said he wears a hat with ear flaps, the type that Russian soldiers, used in World War II, and his mother sewed stripes on the side of it.

"When I am riding my Honda and the flaps are blowing in the wind, I look like a soppith camel driver," he said.

"When it's really cold I put my hood up or grin and bear it," said Bill Paxton, "but I can't stand hats."

"You put your collar up on your coat," said Rick Banta.

Brown and tan suede coats and sheepskin jackets are popular with the guys.

"When the snow is falling and I get letters from my mother in California saying they're having a heat wave, I feel like driving out to the airport and flying home," said Pat Layman.

Two-Game Rally To Include Horns Blasting Foes

Campaigning for both Oklahoma games, a pep rally at 6:30 p.m. Friday will urge the Huskers to "Blast Oklahoma off the Map."

According to Tassels rally chairman Stephanie Tinan, the rally will feature the blowing of any type of horn.

The rally is just a part of an extended campaign until Nov. 21. Miss Tinan said that living units are encouraged to display signs complying with the theme during the next two weeks.

Friday the parade will begin at 6:15 at the south entrance of the Nebraska Union. The 6:30 rally will be held on the stadium steps.

This will be the last football rally at which the Spirit Trophy will be awarded, with signs, costumes and enthusiasm counting toward points, according to Miss Tinan.

She added that signs and any other display of spirit by living units during the next one and one-half weeks will count toward a unit's accumulative points.

Miss Tinan said that any unit proceeding to the stadium before the parade Friday will be disqualified from the competition.

The campaign will come to a close Monday, Nov. 21, with an afternoon rally for the team at the fieldhouse.

Constitution Done For A&S Advisory

Following the ASUN bill setting up standards for college advisory boards, the Advisory Board Coordinating Committee has drawn up a constitution for such an organization in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Committee chairman Mel Schlachter said that a vote of the students in Arts and Sciences will be held Nov. 30 and Dec. 1.

The Arts and Sciences advisory board will consist of nine members, Schlachter said. The members will include six members representing divisions of the college, two "holdover" members and an ASUN Senator from the college.

Schlachter said that once the constitution has gone through the process of ratification and ASUN and Faculty Senate approval, they will appoint an interim board to serve until spring elections coinciding with the ASUN elections.

The areas represented within Arts and Sciences are natural sciences and mathematics, classical and modern languages, English, the school of fine arts, the school of journalism and social sciences and philosophy.

Members of the college will vote on these representatives, voting on one from each area. In addition, the board itself will chose two "holdover members" to serve the following year and select an ASUN Senator to be an additional member.

As stated in the constitution, the board will work in areas of curriculum, faculty-student relations, ASUN relations and publicity.

The board proposes to "guage student approval and disapproval" in curriculum; "initiate research into the quality and effectiveness of courses, programs, and curriculum;" and "utilize student suggestions and Board research to formulate alternatives and solutions to the problems encountered."

The constitution also states that "The Board must seek to provide increasing opportunities for informal contact for all students in the college with the faculty."

Regarding ASUN relations, the constitution seeks to "be informed and-or participate in any ASUN programs applicable to the College," obtain "ASUN political support for the work of the boards" and obtain "ASUN aid in completing projects beyond the scope of board or college."

The constitution adds that "The Board shall at all times communicate the results of its endeavors to the students of the college and the University."

Schlachter predicted that the board might become so active so as to necessitate the formulation of sub-committees within the divisions of the college.

He said that this would supplant the appointive advisory board begun last year.

Schlachter said that his committee is continuing to form constitutional guidelines for boards in the other colleges, again following the principles of the ASUN bill.

Beatles Films Featured In Union Film Festival

The latest in a series of Nebraska Union Film Committee Beatles on Saturday, Nov. 19, according to committee chairman Kris Bitner.

John, Paul, George and Ringo will star in "Help" and "Hard Day's Night" at 10:30 p.m. at the Sheldon Art Gallery Auditorium. Tickets will be sold at the door for $1.25 each. The auditorium seats 300.

Miss Bitner said that this year the film committee hopes to bring festivals of modern films in addition to older classics. She said that there might be two specials a month for the remainder of the year.

These specials will usually be centered around a specific theme.

The next one will be a law special, including the movies "Written on the Wind" and "Twelve Angry Men."

This will be followed by a "war" special, featuring "Manchurian Candidate" and "The Great Escape."

Miss Bitner pointed out that certain festivals will be timed to coincide with other events on campus, particularly a Vincent Price film festival when he visits the campus.

New Society Organizes: L'Ecole de 'Pataphysique

To point out absurdities on campus, members of the newly-formed L'Ecole de 'Pataphysique held their first meeting Thursday in the Nebraska Union.

The Pataphysics society, as the organization is more commonly termed, voted on uniforms and passed a declaration of support for the war in Vietnam. The constitution and a Bill of Irrelevancies were also discussed.

Uniforms of the Pataphysics Society will consist of double sheets with hoods and green candles. Sheet color will be decided upon at a later date.

"We have no affiliation with the Ku Klux Klan and it was not the inspiration for our costume," explained George Olivarri, University graduate student and one of the founders of the society.

The uniforms are reminiscent of Ubu's grab in Alfred Jarry's works and will be worn at all official functions of the society. There was some discussion centering around the fact that Ubu is coming and that he may be proclaimed as a god by the Pataphysicists. This would take place at a "happening" to be arranged before Thanksgiving.

Members stressed that while they supported the war in Vietnam as long as it did not involve the death of Vietnamese and other foreigners, they did see two solutions to the strife.

"As a diversionary tactic, the US should bomb Argentina," Olivarri stated as the first alternative.

The second alternative hinges upon the creation of a de-militarized war zone in the Mojave Desert. According to members, this would be inhabited by U.S. military forces who would then divide into two camps and form Boy Scout troops.
