

Disappearing Pledges Signal Sneak Season

Sneak season is beginning on the University campus, as pledge classes start disappearing for weekend excursions. Promoting pledge class unity seems to be the main purpose of pledge sneaks, according to fraternity and sorority pledge trainers and active members. The attitude toward sorority pledge sneaks has changed since last year's Panhellenic ruling. The revised rules state that "no actives may be captured by the pledges and taken on the sneak." This has eliminated the annual active-pledge struggle as far as sororities are concerned. Other Panhellenic rules limit pledge classes from being away more than 30 hours, although there is no distance limitation. Weekends Only All sneaks must be registered with the Student Activities Office, and pledges are encouraged not to skip classes or to take sneaks at any other time than weekends. Pledges must notify their housemother when they leave, and sign out of the dorm for a sorority overnight. According to Shari Mueller, Panhellenic vice president, most pledge classes go to chapters in other states, or to the home of one of the pledges. Pi Beta Phi pledges traveled by bus to Grand Island and stayed at one of the pledges' homes. A banquet was given in their honor and Grand Island alumnae served a breakfast for them. "It was the first time we've had to be together," said a pledge who participated in the sneak.

The sneaks should be cultural as well as fun, said Miss Mueller, and the pledges should remember that anything they do reflects on the Greek system as a whole. Alpha Omicron Pi pledges stayed at a cabin in Omaha and went as a group to see "The Sound of Music." They wrote songs and played cards afterward. Sneak Rules Fraternity pledge sneaks must be registered with the InterFraternity Council (IFC) one week before the to Gary Larson, IFC president. Rules for fraternity sneaks state that departure time cannot be before 5 p.m. Friday and that pledge classes should return before 10 p.m. Sunday. The method of transportation and the destination, which is limited to 500 miles, must also be registered. A written report must be submitted to IFC on the pledge sneak within ten days following the sneak. This report must be signed by the pledge class president and pledge trainer, said Larson. Most pledge classes visit one of their chapters in another state, or go to a football game on their sneaks, he stated. Five-House Function A five-house function at Boulder, Colo., was the destination of Sigma Alpha Epsilon pledges. "The actives we took helped to make the sneak a success," said one Phi Gamma Delta pledge who traveled on the sneak to Kansas City. Sigma Chi pledges sneaked to Greeley, Colo., and stayed at Colorado State College where they participated in the CSC Sigma Chi Derby Day. IFC or Panhellenic rules, pledges from letting their pledges from letting their actives know that they are sneaking. One fraternity pledge class which went on a sneak last weekend, left a goat for the actives, as well as a duck swimming in the showers. They also put an active's car up for sale, without his knowledge. "Looked Like Fun" Fraternities are allowed to take actives with them, and most try to capture one or two. One active returning from the pledge sneak commented, "I was going to go home this week end, but the sneak looked like more fun, so I let them capture me." The general attitude toward sneaks according to most pledge trainers is that the sneaks should be observed from a positive viewpoint and that simple destruction or pranks accomplish nothing. "Pledge sneaks give the pledges a chance to relax and have a good time without an active being around," said one pledge trainer. "They also add to the spirit and enthusiasm of the pledge class."

ONE HOUR EACH WEEK . . . is devoted to laboratory practice in studying Romance languages.

Romance Languages Will Have New Lab

A new Romance language laboratory is being used by more than 1,300 University students who are studying French, Italian, Spanish, and Portuguese this fall. Consisting of a master play-back console and 56 student booths, the new facility offers the advantages of increased student capacity and a larger number of tapes that can be played simultaneously, said Hal Carney, assistant professor. Twenty-four different tapes can be played at the same time. Students are required to spend at least one hour each week in the Burnett Hall laboratory. Carney said, as part of their outside preparation. A laboratory session, in which the students don earphones to listen to the recorded sounds of Romance languages properly spoken, includes pronunciation and comprehension drills. By means of the speaker-earphone set-up, the student can hear his own pronunciation and compare it with the correct version. Carney said some literature instructors are taking advantage of the laboratory to offer their students recorded plays and readings in Romance languages. The displays show engineering projects at architectural scale. Examples of dams, spillways, tunnels, earthworks, roads, bridges, as well as giant instruments, enclosures for storage, work and public assembly are included in the exhibit. Many of the projects are closely related to architecture. Four buildings, shown under construction, illustrate engineering applied to architecture. Twenty-seven of the projects, selected for their beauty, historic interest or monumental scale, are shown in large photographs. All 148 projects are shown in detail, including plans, sections or elevations. An accompanying text explains each project's function and importance.

St. Mark's Mass Mixes Liturgy, Folk Traditions

Parishioners of St. Mark's - on - the - Campus Episcopal Church will sing Mass Sunday at 5 p.m. to the music of folk songs. The purpose of the folk mass is to express the meaning of the Eucharist in modern media that college students understand easily and readily, choir director Jim Ransom said. Father Ian Mitchell, the Episcopal chaplain at Northwestern University, wrote the music to be used for the Mass in original folk tunes composed in the American folk song tradition, Ransom said. He set to music the traditional words of the liturgy of the prayer book. The music is designed to express fellowship among the worshippers themselves and between the worshippers and God, Ransom stated, and also to express the feeling and meaning of the Eucharist in 20th century terms. Within the folksong medium, feelings are easier to recognize than in other musical heritages, he added. The folk song Mass itself will be accompanied only by guitars. The music is simple and easy to sing, Ransom said, and one of the purposes is that everyone will join in and feel completely at home with the music. Many persons have questioned the folk song Mass as to whether or not it is legitimate music for worship in the Church. It is valuable as a teaching experience and for putting new focus on the liturgy of the Church so that people might understand the Eucharist, Ransom said.

Sheldon To Show Engineer Exhibit Of Photos, Plans

"Twentieth Century Engineering," an exhibit of enlarged photographs and plans of 148 projects in 28 countries, will be displayed at Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery Nov. 4-27. The exhibit is sponsored by the University Art Galleries and the College of Engineering and Architecture. Originally shown at the Museum of Modern Art in New York City during the summer of 1964, the exhibit was selected by Arthur Drexler, director of the museum's Department of Architecture and Design. It is traveling throughout the nation under the museum's program of circulating exhibitions. The displays show engineering projects at architectural scale. Examples of dams, spillways, tunnels, earthworks, roads, bridges, as well as giant instruments, enclosures for storage, work and public assembly are included in the exhibit. Many of the projects are closely related to architecture. Four buildings, shown under construction, illustrate engineering applied to architecture. Twenty-seven of the projects, selected for their beauty, historic interest or monumental scale, are shown in large photographs. All 148 projects are shown in detail, including plans, sections or elevations. An accompanying text explains each project's function and importance.

Off-Campus Living Trend Causes Clemson Worry

Clemson, S.C. (I.P.) The increasing desire for "off-campus" living" by Clemson University students is receiving careful administrative attention here. "For many students, off-campus living is here to stay," says Vice President for Student Affairs Walter T. Cox. "There are many reasons why students seek off-campus living," he said, "including the principal one given by most students that study conditions are quieter and better." A prime contributing factor to search for off-campus housing," Cox added, "is Clemson's increasing graduate school enrollment. "Graduate students by their very nature and educational commitment search for living accommodations with a minimum of distractions and maximum of good study conditions. Most graduate students seek privacy and freedom of activity that off-campus housing offers." Clemson's climbing enrollment and the amount of off-campus living that goes with it has prompted the private construction of eight or ten small apartment buildings in the last two years. "The factor of off-campus living is one with which colleges and universities all across the land are having to deal," Cox said. "here, as on virtually every other campus in the land, some students will always insist upon living in non-university accommodations."
