OSU Precedes Bowl Worries

By Bob Flasnick Sports Editor

Nebraska's Bob Devaney. a little under the weather with a cold, shunned bowl talk Thursday and said, "We've got a job to do first." Devaney said that if and when the time comes to decide on a bowl, the decision would be put to the vote of the squad.

"We'll put the possibilities to them, let them think it over, and then let them decide what they want to said the Husker coach

One of the two big jobs which Nebraska must concentrate on before the luxury of bowl selection is Oklahoma State this Saturday in Lincoln. "They haven't been a strong running team," said Devaney of the Cowboys, "but they have played good defense all season, with the exception of one game-Houston.

Oklahoma lost 35-9 to Houston in the Astrodome, but Devaney said the special sod underneath the big roof made footing difficult and might have caused OSU some problems.

With the exception of Houston, the Cowboys have yet to lose by more than seven points. Their conference record coming into Saturday's game is 2-1-1. The Cowboy's only loss in Big Eight competition was a 7-0 setback at Missouri. Wins came against Colorado, 11-10, and Kansas, 10-7, and they tied Iowa State Oklahoma State has dropped both of its nonconference games, losing to Arkansas 14-10 in their season opener and dropping a close game to Texas Tech last weekend, 10-7.

'Oklahoma State runs out of a pro-set offense and also a slot back formation," said Devaney. "They have a fine running back in (Jack) Reynolds and a good strong quarterback in (Ron) Johnson.

Reynolds is the club's leading rusher with 407 yards gained in 105 carries. Johnson is the mainstay at the Cowboy quarterback spot, hitting 35 of 86 passes for 339 yards. His primary receiver is left end Jerry Philpott who has grabbed 17 passes for 172 yards and one touchdown.

Iowa State will be the last proving ground this year for University of Nebraska football hopefuls today as the Husker freshmen journey to meet the Cyclones.

"We think we have a lot of fine personnel," said frosh coach John Melton. "Some of the boys will help us in the future.

The Cornhuskers, now with two wins and one loss for the season, will meet a Cyclone squad that beat Kansas State and lost to Missouri. The Husker's only loss was also to the Tigers, Melton declined to spot individuals who may earn varsity positions next season because of variables such as grades and injuries. "Coach Devaney will check them (freshmen) out in the spring," Melton added. Injuries have sidelined regular starters halfback Ken Geddes of Boys Town and guard Mike Dodge of Portsmouth, N.H., formermerly of Lincoln Southeast. According to Melton, fullback Phil Vassar of Uniontown, Pa., will return to ac-tion for the final game.

Other changes in the lineup are Omaha Benson speedster Randy Reeves in place of Geddes; Benjamin Beland of Fort Smith, Ark., moving up to fill the guard post vacated by Dodge and Bill Bomburger of Columbus at halfback.

Old Home Week For Nebraskans

Talk about old home week at last Saturday's Kansas - Nebraska game, one interesting twist centered around the captains for the game, Representing the Jayhawks for the flip were Sandy Buda and George Harvey. Nebraska's pair were Bob Churchich and Larry Wachholtz.

When Buda was a high school senior, he captained Creighton Prep and Church ich was Omaha North's captain in a game won 7-0 by Prep. In the annual high school all-star game the following August, Buda and Wachholtz co-captained the North Stars.

Freshman Top CU Linebacker Meet ISU Rates Huskers High

CU Sports Information Buffaloes, if they happen to be linebackers, shouldn't roam from their home in the secondary.

That's the lesson which, finally learned this season, has helped Colorado's junior right backer Kerry Mottl to three straight outstanding games. The Aurora Central grad, a regular all the way for the past two seasons, has always had a tendency to chase the action . . . often chasing himself right out of the play.

Mottl is a thinking linebacker and, from experi-ence (some painful) is probably as good a judge of runners as there is in the Big Eight. Here are some of his

comments. "Doug McGee of Miami

NU Draws K-State In Cage Tourney

Mail orders for tickets to the 21st annual Big Eight Conference Pre-Season basketball Tournament, December 27-30 at Kansas City's Municipal Auditorium, will be accepted by the Auditorium beginning Monday, November 21.

The tournament, which yearly attracts more than 50,000 fans from the sixstate area comprising the Big Eight Conference, matches all eight Conference teams in a four-day, 12game tipoff to the regular season

In addition, more than 3,-000 high school players and coaches participate in a clinic conducted by the Conference's basketball coaches on Dec. 29.

Opening round pairings match Oklahoma State against Iowa State and Nebraska vs. Kansas State on Dec. 27, and Missouri against Oklahoma and Kansas vs. Colorado on Dec. 28. Semi-finals will be played Dec. 29 and finals Dec. 30. Headlining this year's tournament will be a host of highly touted juniors, in-cluding I o w a State's Don-Smith, the tournament's leading scorer and rebounder last year, Kansas' Jo-Jo White and Kansas State's Earl Seyfert ,as well as the league's defending scoring champion, Missouri's Ronnie Coleman.

is the hardest-hitting runner I've met. Charlie Brown of Missouri is the slipperi-est. Ben Gregory of Nebraska is the strongest, with Harry Wilson of Nebraska and Les Webster of Iowa State right behind. The best combination of strength and evasiveness is owned by Dick Davis of Nebraska."

Despite the collisions. Mottl would rather confront a power runner, explaining, "They might run over you but they're not likely to go all the way. But a guy like Charlie Brown can slip past you and go all the way and that kills you. Collisions are part of the game . . . you supply as much impact as the runner in most cases." Mottl probably missed Big Eight "lineman of the week" honors three weeks ago when a frantic Nebraska rally nipped the Buffs at the wire

Until the Cornhusker comeback, Kerry had made two of the game's biggest plays - hammering the ball loose from Husker quarterback Bob Churcheh to set up the Buffaloes first touchdown then crunching Churchich sideways at the goal line on a fourth down Nebraska try from the one in the third period.

He was equally proficient in the 24-21 win over Oklahoma the next week and, last Saturday at Missouri, in the defense-oriented 26-0 win over the Tigers.

Mottl and his defensive mates will be trying to stop another of the Big Eight's classiest rookies Saturday when they close their league season at Kansas. The Jayhawkers' Don Shanklin is already drawing comparisons with ex-Jayhawker great Gale Sayers as he has churned for a 5-yard average to rank second among the league's rushers.

If the Buffs can get past Kansas, they'll wind up with a 5-2 Big Eight mark and a chance for a second-place finish, one notch higher than they wound up with a year ago.
