

Proposed Amendments Include New IDC Name

Three articles in a proposed inter-dormitory constitution were amended by the Inter-dormitory Coordinating Committee (IDCC) Wednesday.

The amendments changed the name of the proposed organization to Inter Dorm Association and changed the membership selection.

A previous inter-dormitory constitution written by IDCC was defeated by dormitory residents in elections Nov. 7, 8 and 9.

The IDCC is now re-writing and changing the constitution for the proposed organization.

A motion was passed to remove sections providing that residents whose halls did not approve the constitution be represented by a non-voting delegate and providing for honorary memberships. The motion was introduced by Ted Suhr of Selleck Quadrangle.

The membership section remaining in the constitution states that all residents whose halls have approved the constitution will be members of the Association.

A motion to provide that all residents whose halls were voted by majority for membership, shall be granted membership, was defeated.

Dave Snyder of Burr West, who presented the motion, explained that residents should vote for or against being members of the IDA, rather than vote for or against the constitution.

Suhr said that if residents approve the organization, they are automatically governed by the constitution. Residents should make it known to their representatives if they are opposed to the constitution, he said.

John Fryar, of Cather, added that the last constitution was passed unanimously by the IDCC, but failed to be approved by a majority of residents in six residence halls.

Also approved was a motion by Suhr to change the nominating procedure of executive officers. The motion stated that applications for president and vice president be accepted by the council one week before election of officers.

The motion that the president and vice president be elected by secret ballot of the council was tabled until the IDCC meeting next Wednesday in Abel Hall.

Nebraskan Positions Available

Funds Needed For Deficit Incurred From Exchange

A fund-raising drive is presently in progress to raise the $200 deficit incurred this semester by the YWCA in bringing the two exchange students from Stillman College.

The YWCA incurred the debt when it paid the $200 difference between the costs at Stillman and those at the University, for the two students, Michael Figures and Alice Watts.

Kris Bitner, chairman of the ASUN committee working on the Stillman exchange program, said that they are attempting to raise the money in order to pay the YWCA for its expenses.

"We have raised $100, so far, by writing letters to interested people, asking for their aid, and by the caramelized apples sold by the YWCA," Miss Bitner stated. "In the next few weeks, we plan on sending letters to all the living units and asking for their help in our drive to obtain the money."

Miss Bitner also asked that any student who is planning on attending the Sugar Bowl and would have room in his car for an extra person when he returns, contact the YWCA.

"It would save expenses for Miss Watts and Figures if they could return from their Christmas vacations, at their homes in Alabama, in this manner," Miss Bitner said.

"Arrangements would be made for the two students to meet their transportation wherever it is convenient," she added.

Miss Bitner said that information and applications for University students to attend Stillman College in the fall semester of 1967 will be mailed to living units in the next several weeks.

The applications and the information will also be available at that time on the door of the YWCA or ASUN offices.

"We plan to meet with interested students either the week before or the week after spring vacation. At that time, Figures and Miss Watts will speak on what Stillman is like and what University students should expect attending a small, predominantly Negro institution," she explained.

"The two students who will participate in the exchange program will be selected by interview."

Miss Bitner said that there has already been quite a bit of interest generated by University students in participating in the program.

Amateurs Star... Movie Makers To Unite

Future movie stars, producers, script writers, and directors soon will have an opportunity to make a movie, according to Sandy Becker.

Becker, a freshman in law college, is organizing a campus film group of amateurs to make movies.

"We need actors, script writers, cameramen, sound technicians, musicians to compose original theme music, and advertisers to produce a motion picture," Becker said.

Two professors in the journalism school have expressed interest in acting as advisors to the film making organization, he said.

The group will use equipment from the University photo production department to make a movie, Becker said.

Since there was no previous film group on campus, Becker said he is organizing a group for amateur film makers. He said he has had some experience with a film group at New York University.

No experience is needed, he said, and all interested persons should contact him at the Law College.

UNSEA Meeting Makes Proposal For Teachers Curriculum Changes

By Nancy Henrickson Senior Staff Writer

Changes in the curriculum for Teachers College are to be presented at the fall University of Nebraska Student Education Association (UNSEA) convention Saturday, according to UNSEA president.

Teachers' education is inadequate and future teachers are unprepared for teaching, she said.

The Teachers College curriculum needs to relate more to teaching and needs to be more practical, she continued.

Changes she suggested are teaching labs, in which a student could tape a teaching session he gives on audio-visual tape and then watch himself teaching, screening systems for professional certification, courses of teaching theory and tutoring in Lincoln schools.

"Student teaching definitely does not give enough experience," she said.

A proposal will be presented to UNSEA delegates at the convention stating that all students who graduate from teachers colleges in 1966 will not teach for less than an annual salary of $5500.

This is an attempt to put pressure on Nebraska school boards for higher salaries, she said.

Also at the convention, Walter K. Beggs, Dean of Teachers College, will speak on innovations in teachers' education.

Wayne Bledsoe, a teacher from Arkansas, will speak on the problems of teaching to minority groups.
