

Hughes: Conference Proves Educational

A University student, Rusty Hughes, attended the 18th annual Student Conference on U.S. Affairs held at West Point Nov. 30 to Dec. 1.

Hughes, a senior in political science, was chosen from the University to attend the conference which was designed to give students an opportunity to formulate foreign policy.

Approximately 200 students from 50 colleges and military academies attended the three-day conference which Hughes termed "well-organized and educational."

The majority of the time was spent in round table discussions, each group taking a specific area of study.

Hughes' group was given the topic of China and Southeast Asia. They discussed problems involved in the area in relation to the U.S. and were directed to come up with creative suggestions for a foreign policy in the area.

"There was a unanimous feeling that there should be recognition of Red China, but without rejecting our commitments to Formosa," stated Hughes.

He explained that this was not a "two China" policy, because it necessitated a recognition of the independent state of Formosa. The group came to the decision after studying the realities of the political situation, according to Hughes.

Vietnam received much attention from Hughes' discussion group, as a policy was developed that called for a continuation of involvement at the present level in Viet Nam, but requested an increase in efforts for negotiations with the North Vietnamese and the National Liberation Front.

"We felt that the U.S. commitment in Viet Nam should be primarily economic and social in nature, with military involvement played down as much as possible," stated Hughes.

However, he said the group decided that there could not be economic, political and social development without a military protective "envelope" to provide stability.

Opinions within the group were divided on the issue of future bombing of the north. Evening panel discussions at the conference featured such speakers as: Congressman Ogden R. Reid; Henry A. Kissinger, professor of government at Harvard; Charles B. Marshall, with the Washington Center For Foreign Policy Research; Lincoln Gordon, Under Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs; and Mrs. Esphelt Rostow, wife of the president of the State Department.

Speakers Conflict On State Of Campus Negro Student

By Eileen Wirth News Assistant

Sharp disagreement and extended debate about the role and the condition of the Negro student on campus occupied much of Thursday's Hyde Park forum.

Bob Pickens attacked recent columns by Brenda Lyle in the Daily Nebraskan about the role of the Negro woman on campus. Calling Miss Lyle a "frustrated little lady who came here expecting more than she got", he recounted social situations which might have influenced her attitude in her columns.

Wayne Kreuscher, editor of the Daily Nebraskan, said it was not funny when Pickens made a personal attack on Miss Lyle. He stated that since Miss Lyle began her series, she has been subjected to attacks and criticisms and personal badgering.

Kreuscher commented that he did not know if what Miss Lyle is saying is true, but that at least she should have a right to state her opinion without fear of harassment.

If people want to disagree with her, they should attack her opinions, and not her personally, he added. Coley Webb said that before Miss Lyle had begun her series she had talked to him. He said he encouraged her to write it because he said he thinks that Negro students do have problems on this campus.

Pickens noted that he had agreed with Miss Lyle's first article, but in succeeding columns, she was merely expressing personal opinions.

He claimed he wanted to show the seeds of an article that can have an impact on the entire campus.

Webb agreed with Pickens and said that if the Daily Nebraskan had wanted to know something about the condition of the Negro on this campus, it should have come to him since he had been here five years instead of a year and a half.

Pickens stated that no white student from a middle class background could really know the problems of the Negro.

Webb said that if people want to know about the Negro, they should talk to Negro men, not to Negro women because the days when the Negro woman dominated Negro society are over.

Raphael Operce, a Nigerian student, said that Pickens should not use Hyde Park as a forum for slandering Miss Lyle. He said it did not create an intelligent atmosphere for discussion of a serious problem.

Linda McKain, a white student, commented that the basis of the problem lies in our culture which says that what one Negro says and does reflects on all, while what white people say and do are their own business.

Other topics of discussion included hitch-hiking and the merits of dormitory as opposed to apartment living.

Doyle Nieman said that off-campus housing was cheaper, more conducive to studying and no deterrent to participation in extra-curricular activities.

Bob Pickens commented that he thinks everybody should experience living in Selleck because of the variety of people one is exposed to. He commented that meeting different types of people and getting to know them is the best way he knows to break down prejudice.

NEGRO STATUS . . . is discussed by Bob Pickens, a Hyde Park speaker.

IDCC Amendments Permit Resident Vote On Officials

Amendments passed at Wednesday's Interdorm Coordinating Committee made the offices of president elective by all Interdormitory Association (IDA) residents.

In addition, the positions of secretary and treasurer were made appointive.

Ted Suhr of Selleck Quadrangle led the defeat of his own original motion to elect the president and vice president by secret ballot of the council.

Suhr then introduced an amendment making the offices elective by the vote of the residents. He said, as did Larry Anderson of Selleck, that this would increase student interest in and IDA and give dormitory residents more participation in the council.

IDCC chairman Jim Ludwig said that such an election might lead to block voting with the larger dorms maintaining an advantage to push their own candidates over capable people from small dorms.

The motion passed, and Suhr advanced to giving the president powers to appoint the secretary and treasurer and the power of veto. A previous amendment by Dave Shonka of Abel to make these offices elective from the students was defeated.

Proponents of appointing these two executive officers said that they were administrative personnel who the president needed control over in order for the executives to function efficiently. The motion passed.

Opponents argued that such officers should have a right, including the president, but Suhr reaffirmed his intention to make these executive positions non-voting. No action was taken on this discussion.

A motion by Dave Shonka of Abel to change the IDA court structure was tabled. Shonka's resolutions included making a person other than the vice president the chief justice.

In other business, Rich Thompson of Unicorns spoke to the IDCC members about setting up an independent spring activity resembling the former Selleck Independent Spring Fling. Thompson said that this would involve dormitories, cooperatives, and off-campus independents.

Anderson questioned the right of chairman Ludwig to enter into discussion, possibly biasing the committee. Ludwig asserted his parliamentary rights as chairman of a committee to argue motions.

The next IDCC meeting is Wednesday, Dec. 14 at 8 p.m. in the Abel-Sandoz cafeteria.

Britain Declares Barbados Liberty

Barbados became the world's smallest independent nation at midnight Tuesday after more than three centuries of British rule.

Thousands of Barbadians celebrated as Queen Elizabeth's cousin the Duke of Kent, handed over to Prime Minister Errol Barrow the British monarch's official assent to the new nation's independence.
