Santa's New Toys Intrigue Collegians

By Julie Morris
Senior Staff Writer

The following exchange between two collegians was overheard last week in a Lincoln department store. The names of the participants have been changed to protect the guilty — but innocent parties.

SHE: John, there's the TOY department, let's stop for just one second!

HE: Okay, but no longer. Wait a second, LOOK at this secret agent kit, complete with weapons, wrist radio and trench coat, do you think it will fit me? (dragging coat out of box and putting it on.)

SHE: John, you're tearing the coat! John it's splitting right up the middle of the back, quick shove it back into the box and let's

Openings Remain For Union Trip

Plenty of openings remain for the Union ski trip to Arapahoe Basin during semester break, according to Karen Jones, chairman of trips and tours.

Total cost for the trip is $86, including train tickets, accommodations, and expenses at Arapahoe.

"Arapahoe should be a good place to ski because they will have two lighted slopes for skiing on Friday and Saturday nights," Miss Jones pointed out.

"Because our skiing equipment comes from Georgetown, Colo. we can go to the surrounding ski areas as well," Miss Jones explained.

The tow tickets, although not included in the initial union payment, will be honored anywhere in the county, Miss Jones added. Arapahoe Basin Lodge also has considerable entertainment facilities right in the lodge, according to Miss Jones.

Nebraskan Seeks Staff Applicants

Applications for next semester's Daily Nebraskan staff are available in the Nebraskan office in the basement of the Nebraska Union, at the University School of Journalism in Nebraska Hall and at the Student Activities Office in the Union.

Positions available on the staff include: copy editors, night news editor and assistant, news assistant, junior and senior staff writers, photographers and business assistants.

HE: Holy Cow! A real Secret Agent machine gun complete with attache case, to conceal the disassembled gun, it'll just take me a minute to put it together . . . where did that little bolt go?

SHE: Look under the counter, it rolled under there, wait, wrap the thing up, we'll find the bolt later. Here comes a clerk . . .

HE: A complete set of miniature power tools! Look, you just plug it in here and . . .

At that moment the store was plunged into total darkness. Two figures were seen furtively sneaking out the rear entrance to the toy department, but the two college students have disappeared.

Someone once said Christmas is for kids, which is partly true, but they forgot to add that it is for "kids" of all ages and many college students make an annual sojourn to the toy department each Christmas.

This season's collection of dolls, guns, drums, tinkertoys, games and puzzles includes toys "I wouldn't have thought of in my wildest dreams!" one browsing coed exclaimed.

Tucked into the shelves with the Scrabble games and "Mr. Potato" are genuine Secret Agent Lie Detectors, and bridge for "juniors."

Along with the teddy bears, kids today can choose from an array of four to five foot stuffed orange lions, polka dot elephants, tigers, and musical toads.

The toy stores are crowded with bicycles, trikes and rocking horses plus motor bikes and a horse that "whinnies" when the child pulls a "magic ring."

The gun displays include cowboy six shooters, a "Thrush" gun that has twelve attachments, a John Eagle "Lieutenant" M-1 replica rifle and a pistol that shoots six different kinds of bullets.

Toddlers can choose from windup tigers that flip flapjacks over a lighted grill to telephones that talk back to the child.

Merry Ballard said "I get really bitter every Christmas and go down and look at the dolls I can't have and don't have any one to buy for because I don't have any little girl cousins."

"Saturday we're going down to look at all the toys," Miss Ballard volunteered.

The doll department has expanded tremendously this year, according to the manager of a Lincoln toy department.

Dolls for sale include the usual "baby dolls" in cradles and Raggedy Anns but now little girls can also have dolls that walk, talk, cry, shake their heads or behave almost like real babies he said.

The two "hottest" selling walking dolls are Baby First Step and Goody Two-Shoes. "Baby" comes with roller skates and Goody Two Shoes offers a second pair of shoes for the time when the first pair wears out.

Advisory Board For A&S Announced After Christmas

By Diane Theisen

New members of the interim Arts and Sciences Student Advisory Board will be announced shortly after Christmas vacation according to Mel Schlachter, ASUN advisory board coordinating chairman.

Interviews for positions on the Board are being held Friday and Monday. The ASUN Advisory Board committee will select the new members who will serve on the Board with the present members until the spring elections, said Schlachter.

Arts and Sciences students ratified the constitution for the newly proposed Board in a recent referendum, Nov. 30 and Dec. 1.

According to the constitution, the new Board which will consist of a representative from the six area divisions within the college, two "holdover" members from the previous year and one senator from Arts and Sciences.

The Board will provide for student responsibility and involvement in educational planning. It is a means to an end, that of students helping to plan curriculum and the Board will be successful only if students show interest and participate," said Schlachter.

Schlachter indicated that he felt that the ratification of this constitution was tion, Olson said. "We can't just deal with Friday night parties," he added.

Olson said that the presidents in IFC might meet in committees to re-examine what fraternities should offer their members in the way of education.

Right now the prevailing fraternity tradition is socially-oriented, Olson said, but men must be offered more than living quarters and parties if the system is to survive.

"Fraternities must develop the individual for his own capabilities and merits," Olson said, "and stop trying to project an image of coolness."

He stressed, "When the interests of the group are detrimental to the educational development of the individual, the interests of the group must go. This is why fraternities must re-evaluate their programs to promote the individual, so that the interests of the group and the individual will be complementary instead of in contrast."

the "initial step for establishing similar boards in the other colleges". The other boards will "have the same goals as the Arts and Sciences but will adapt to the particular needs and situation of their colleges".

He explained that at the present time, Teachers College under the direction of present board chairman Lynn Rathjen, is winding up its efforts of drafting a new constitution according to guidelines set by ASUN. Home Economics College has recently organized a Student Advisory Board. Agriculture College's Student Board is beginning to become more involved with curriculum planning as well as other activities.

The Student Advisory Board of the College of Business Administration headed by Bill Glover has recently sponsored several activities. The Executive Board of Engineering College sponsors such activities as E-Week each year for members of the college.

Schlachter defined the purpose of the ASUN Advisory Board Coordinating committee for the second semester as that of "helping other boards organize according to the guidelines set up by ASUN."
