

Two New Secretaries Grace IFC, Panhellenic Staffs

MRS. RACHEL JENSEN . . . new secretary to the IFC.

Two additions have been made to the IFC and Panhellenic staffs.

Since Jan. 4 the IFC has had a new office secretary, Mrs. Rachel Jensen.

Mrs. Jayne Anderson, the Panhellenic advisor, has been serving as a secretary for Panhellenic since the beginning of the semester.

Mrs. Jensen describes her new job as "very interesting work." When queried about her opinion of the Greek system she replied, "I think it's wonderful! I've been very much impressed with the people I've met in the Greek system."

"It's quite an honor, I think, to be a part of it," she continued. "It requires the type of person that wants to give and not just take, as far as I can see."

Mrs. Jensen has not worked for 19 years but she decided that "with my sons growing older I was getting bored sitting around home."

She was previously manager of the Post Exchange at Fort Omaha.

Mrs. Anderson, who is serving as the advisor to Panhellenic, said, "I'm attempting to do the secretarial work also although I'm not the world's best secretary. Literally speaking I'm a member of the staff of student affairs and am employed by the University instead of Panhellenic."

"I imagine that Panhellenic will have a part-time secretary before the year is over," she added.

Mrs. Anderson expressed optimism about the Greek system. "I feel that there's a real merit to belonging to a group in the Greek system if that is what a person chooses to do," she said.

I believe in the goals it has, she continued, although I'd be the last person to say it's perfect. What is reassuring is that it improves some every year.

"As far as the future of the Greek system is concerned I can't say I'm a predictor," she said. "I don't have a crystal ball to consult."

"I've enjoyed working with the groups, and as long as they continue to work at growing and developing I really should see no reason why they would not continue to exist."

Faculty Give Varied Reactions Toward Proposed NU Budget

By Dave Buntain
Junior Staff Writer

Faculty members expressed a wide variety of reaction toward Gov. Norbert Tiemann's proposed 1967-68 budget, and near-unanimous opposition to the proposed $95 tuition increase in a sampling taken Wednesday.

Dr. Edward Rack, associate professor of chemistry, said he is "completely glad about the budget request."

"It is the first time the governor and the University has gone hand in hand in recommending the budget," Rack said. "The increase in operating funds will help maintain a good staff."

"It is the first step forward to a position where we can train students to compete with students graduating from other universities and colleges," he added.

Dr. John Felton, associate professor of economics, said that at the present budget should "enable us to cease falling behind. We can reverse the situation with which we have been faced for several years."

Felton was critical of the proposed nine per cent annual increase of faculty salary scales.

"Will Still Lose People" "This increase will not keep us from losing some good people to better-paying institutions," he commented.

"I feel our department request was an essential request," Dr. T. E. Hartung, chairman of the poultry science department, said. "It would appear from the general figures that the governor's recommendations will fall short of these needs."

Hartung said the governor's cut in proposed salary adjustments was an "extremely critical" area in the budget.

Dr. W. J. Arnold professor of psychology added, "It would be nice if we could get all that we requested. If we don't, then we can't do all that we wanted to do."

The governor was bound to cut something from what Regents approved, Dr. Arthur Winter, associate professor of political science, said. "I would hope that the legislature doesn't cut any more."

"I won't be satisfied with any budget that doesn't stop the migration of top faculty members to other campuses," he said. "If this proposal is administered in that way then I would be in favor of it."

"Budget Not Adequate"

Dr. Michael Meyer, assistant professor of history, said he didn't think that the proposed budget is an adequate one.

He said that the faculty members which he talked to would have been happier if the University would have demanded its own budget," he pointed out.

"The University seems to be admitting that there is 'fat' in the budget which they said they weren't going to do."

Tiemann has tried to present a fair budget in view of the tax situation, Dr. Rosalind M. Morris, professor of agronomy said.

"I personally feel that salaries should be raised more in the non-academic fields—the technicians and secretaries," she said, adding "We do need more support in the research programs."

Assistant professors are another group that may deserve a greater pay hike, according to Dr. James Wolford, professor of engineering mechanics.

New faculty members generally begin at the assistant professor level he said, but University salaries are "way below normal" in this area.

Should Take Long Look Concerning the proposed tuition hike, Dr. Mark Hammer, associate professor of civil engineering, said that the legislature should take a long hard look at the raise.

"Some raise is inevitable," he said. "Whether it should be this much is the real question. It could place great pressure on students and their parents."

Meyer said that the additional money should come out of the general fund.

Wolford said he "hates to see that much tuition increase. There may be some students who deserve to come to the University but can't with the tuition increase."

The university would be using the tuition hike to "discriminate against students who couldn't pay, instead of admitting students on the basis of whether they are bright or not bright," Dr. Rack said.

The money from tuition is a "small drop in the bucket of the overall budget, anyway," he said.

Tuition Was $60

When he started at the University the tuition was about $60 a semester, Dr. Robert Sandstedt assistant professor of plant pathology, said.

"It seems to me that the tuition rate has climbed very rapidly these last few years," he added.

The tuition increase is in order, according to Winter. "If the University Administration continues to allow us to admit more students than we can properly handle on existing funds."

It would be justified as one means of controlling the University population, Winter said, but "this may be a mean way to do it."

"I would be delighted to have free tuition if the size of the faculty and other resources could be properly taken care of through state funds," he said.

Hoegberg, Steen Discuss Morals, Life, Censorship

What is moral, what is right and who should determine it was the theme at Hyde Park Thursday as another overflow crowd filled the Nebraska Union lounge.

Wayne State College English instructor, Norman Hoegberg, and Wayne Steen, owner of the Heroic Bookstore, each spoke for an hour at the second forum of the semester.

Hoegberg, officially suspended by the Wayne State Administration said that the first thing he tried to teach his freshman students was that they didn't know anything.

In a later response to a question, he clarified his point by saying: "A moral person is one who commits an immoral act and then realizes it."

Based on the idea that people don't know anything until they experience or can imagine it, Hoegberg wondered how Jesus knew he was "The Christ." He asked how Jesus could have made the statements he did regarding what constituted sin unless he had experienced them.

Hoegberg then said he live your life with your hands or mind tied. Censorship ties your mind."

He called censorship a characteristic of a dictatorship.

Steen told of numerous visits to his bookstore by many city officials. He told of a police officer who visited his store, assuring him that everything he sold was all right.

Later visits were by members of the county attorney's office, police detectives, representatives from the county health department and the Lincoln mayor's office.

"The (state) law I'm being taken to court under is unconstitutional," Steen

Steen opened by saying that freedom is limited by its own definition. He said he believed in total freedom as long as individuals respected other people's lives and property.

Using Ayn Rand's philosophy of objectivism as the basis of his position, Steen said: "You cannot
