

University High Terminates Operation

University High School, which has served for 59 years as the University's center for student teaching, undergraduate observing, and educational experiments, begins its final months of operation.

According to Don Dahlin, administrative assistant of University High, this is the final semester the school will operate. A summer school will be held during June and July and the school will terminate operations in August.

Temple High School
University High began operation in 1908 as Temple High School, occupying the old Temple Building. In 1933 the school was moved to the basement of Teachers College and renamed Teachers College High School. The school moved to its present location in 1955 and was given its present name, University High School.

The school is a laboratory school with student teachers doing all of the instructing, said Dahlin. Students at University High are selected through applications. The main quality looked for in selecting the students is good citizenship, he added.

The laboratory school doesn't put the practice teacher in a realistic classroom setting, said Dahlin. "With students doing the teaching we can't have problem children."

Setting Not Realistic
The fact that the classroom setting is not realistic is one reason that the school is closing down, said Dahlin. Another reason is the added expense it puts on the University.

According to Norman Thorpe, assistant dean of Teachers College, the board of Regents has elected to follow a program proposed by a legislative resolution in 1963. The resolution recommended that state colleges phase out their laboratory school programs and begin using regular schools for practicing and observing.

There are only two laboratory schools presently operating at state colleges, said Dahlin, they are University High and Peru Prep.

Practice Teaching
Next year students in teachers college will do all practice teaching in schools in the Lincoln and Omaha school districts.

Dahlin noted that only 1-3 of the students practice teaching this semester are at University High, the majority are scattered throughout the Lincoln school district.

The new Lincoln East High School will take a large share of the present

UNIVERSITY HIGH . . . will be renovated after the 1967 summer school session for use by departments of Teacher's College.

University High students next year, Dahlin said.

Lincoln East
Lincoln East will be operated as a part of the Lincoln public schools and will have full time teachers, said Thorpe. A large number of our student teachers will practice teach there, he added.

Thorpe said that the main thing that his department will lose when University High closes is a proving ground for testing new ideas in education. The University has set aside $315,000 in funds for remodeling University High buildings. Some departments in Teachers College will move there, said Thorpe. Workmen will begin work in September. The completion date has been set for fall, 1968.

March 6, 7 Election To Decide On Proposed Advisory Board

The proposed constitution for a student advisory board in Teachers College will be voted on March 6 and 7.

Mel Schlachter, chairman of the ASUN Advisory Boards Committee, said that the constitution was developed along the lines of the Arts and Sciences constitution.

The purposes of the board will be to "offer commendations, responsible criticisms and solutions regarding courses, programs and curriculums with the college" according to the proposed constitution.

In addition, the board will have central responsibility for the "establishment and improvement of faculty-student relations."

The board, which was developed by the ASUN committee and the present Teachers College Dean's Advisory Board, will be composed of 10 members, two from elementary education, four from secondary education, two holdovers (after the first year), the president of UNSEA, and an ASUN senator from teachers.

Schlachter said that the board will be elected at the same time as the ASUN elections this spring.

"After this year, we will hold a special election for all advisory boards," he added.

Members of the present Dean's Advisory Board, the Arts and Sciences Advisory Board committee will be visiting the various education classes explaining the importance of approving the constitution.

Schlachter noted that the development of an advisory board is very important in the Teachers college because it is a tool by which educators can become involved with their own education.

Dean Ross Will Attend ASUN Rights Meeting

A discussion on six articles of the proposed Bill of Rights will be held during the Student Senate meeting Wednesday.

Roger Doerr, vice president of ASUN, stated that Student Conduct Committee chairman Dick Schulze will select six articles for discussion. A straw vote will possibly be taken concerning the senate's opinion on the articles.

Ross To Respond
G. Robert Ross, vice chancellor for student affairs, will attend the meeting to answer questions from the senate concerning the University's housing policy.

Doerr stated that he hoped Ross would bring a more concise black and white statement of housing policy to the meeting than he gave in answer to the senate's request on policy.

Electoral Proposals
The Electoral Commission of ASUN will present their proposals for the upcoming ASUN elections. Doerr stated that they will be reviewed by the senate and are subject to senate approval.

"The crucial areas for discussion are the length of the campaign period and the number and location of voting booths," Doerr stated.

Party Designation
Doerr said that he believes the commission will recommend that a candidate's party affiliation be designated on the election ballot providing the candidate designates it at the time of filing.

Two changes in the senate by-laws will be proposed by Tom Briggs, director of records. They will deal with the procedure in case of a tie in ASUN elections.

The second change will be a statute of limitations on the length of time that an election can be protested.

Old Crusty Minstrels
Doerr added that the Old Crusty Minstrels Repertory Company will be asking for a special resolution permitting them to establish an account in the Student Activities Fund before their constitution is approved.

The account is necessary, Doerr stressed, because the tickets for their grand performances must be printed next week.

Tiemann: Hike Won't Limit Enrollment

Gov. Norbert T. Tiemann said he does not expect his proposed $95 a year tuition increase for resident students to limit enrollment at the University.

Tiemann also said that student leaders had told him they favored a tuition increase as long as the instructional budget was substantially increased.

The governor stated that he has yet to see evidence that anyone in Nebraska is being denied an education because of tuition costs.

He claimed that he had had little reaction from University students about the proposed University budget and what there was had been favorable.

No Applications Received Yet For IDA Executive Positions

Applications for Inter-Dormitory Association (IDA) president and vice-president will be accepted by the Inter-Dormitory Coordinating Committee (IDCC) until the IDCC's 8 p.m. Wednesday meeting, according to Joan Spivey, IDCC secretary.

Miss Spivey said as of Tuesday no applications had been received, but Jim Ludwig, IDCC chairman, felt that there would be several applications submitted before the deadline.

At the Wednesday meeting, the IDCC, which is functioning as the Inter-Dormitory Council, election committee and Inter-Dormitory Court until the IDA officers are elected, is expected to discuss the forthcoming election and campaign procedures.

Campaigns Begin
The presidential and vice-presidential campaign will begin Thursday and continue until the elections are conducted in University residence halls March 9.

Candidates for IDA president and vice-president, who along with the IDA secretary and treasurer will form the executive committee, must meet the following four qualifications:

—Meet University regulations for participation in extra-curricular activities.
—Be a member of the Association and agree in writing to resign his position if he should terminate his membership in the Association.

—Resided in University residence halls for at least one year.

—Not hold a student or graduate assistantship in University residence halls.

Most Votes
In the election, which will be conducted by the election committee under the regulations approved by the Council, the candidate receiving the most votes in the Association-wide election will be declared the winner provided he receives at least 40 per cent of the ballots.

Runoff Election
If such a plurality does not exist, a runoff election will be held within ten days between the two candidates receiving the largest number of votes.

The president and vice-president will assume office one week after their election and will serve a one-year term, according to the IDA constitution.

After the election, the IDCC will disband and as the IDCC's last official function, Ludwig will swear in the entering officials of the Association.

The president and vice-president each have official duties as outlined in the IDA constitution.

President
The president is responsible for the execution of all provisions of the Constitution. By-Laws and duly enacted legislation of the Council and he must report all executive action to the Council.

He is also an ex-officio member of all committees and presides at all Executive Committee and Council meetings.

While representing the IDA in a ceremonial capacity and stating Association opinion before the public and official assemblies, the president can appoint committee chairman and committee members of both standing and temporary committees and also appoint the secretary and treasurer with the approval of the Council.

Vice-President
The IDA vice-president also has specific duties that are stated in the IDA constitution. He can assume presidential duties in the president's absence and can serve as president if the presidency is vacated.

Executive Committee
The executive powers rest with the Executive Committee, consisting of the president and vice-treasurer, which is expected to carry out Council legislation.

The Executive Council also supervises the committee structure of the Association in their activities and proposes committee recommendations to the Council.
