

KK Show: YD Petition Opposes Tuition Hike

What To Do With Irma?

"Even though the Kosmet Klub Spring Show is the story of a woman of ill repute," Spring Show Chairman Dick Weerts blushed. "It's not really a 'bad' show."

Behind Weerts, in the Nebraska Union Ballroom, the cast of Irma la Douce were revelling in sin, debauchery, drinking lemonade at a real bar, and even watching real go-go girls. When asked how Kosmet Klub got official permission to put on a play like this in "the city of churches" he replied:

"We did think we might have some trouble getting permission from the University to put on a play with such an unusual subject, although Irma la Douce is actually a very decent show," Weerts said. "The University officials we talked to indicated that there would be no problem since Irma la Douce appeared on Broadway and was made into a movie," he continued.

Weerts added that Kosmet Klub "did have a problem with indecency in the Fall Shows back during World War II. The people who wrote the fraternity skits would throw all sorts of grossness in the day before the show after the final rehearsal."

PETITION SIGNER... registers opposition, on a Young Democrats petition.

By 4 p.m. Thursday Young Democrats had collected nearly 400 signatures of students who oppose the proposed tuition hike, according to Bruce Mason, acting YD president.

Plans are now being made for a formal presentation at the Statehouse, but details have not been worked out yet, said Mason.

to tuition hike proposal. YD President, Bruce Mason, oversees the signing.

"We plan to send a copy of the petition to every state senator, as well as to the Board of Regents, since they are the group which ultimately sets the tuition rate," Mason said.

Petition sheets will be circulated through campus housing units, and students will be able to sign today at the YD booth in the Student Union.

Housing Panel . . .

Snyder: 'Parental Consent Isn't Reason To Live Off-Campus'

By Jim Evinger
Junior Staff Writer

A panel of students, administrators and a representative from the Board of Regents appeared before a large crowd in the Nebraska Union Thursday over the University's housing policy.

Roger Doerr, first vice-president of ASUN, moderated the discussion. Panel members included Ed Schwartzkopf of the Board of Regents; Dean and Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs G. Robert Ross; Helen Snyder, associate dean of student affairs; Terry Schaff, ASUN president; and Marv Almy, chairman of the ad hoc committee on housing policy.

Ad Hoc Committee
Stressing that the ad hoc housing committee was working as speedily as possible towards reaching repressed optimism that "progress will be made" with changes hopefully going into effect next fall.

Almy said the committee was considering the needs of the University 10-15 years in the future.

He added that the committee was looking at housing from its educational value, realizing there were different needs for different people.

He gave the example of most freshmen needing University housing, and most seniors needing to get out on their own to make their decision.

'Good Cause'
Present University housing policy states that a "good cause" must be supplied to permit an exception that women live elsewhere than University housing. Miss Snyder said that no objective criteria could be established to define what "good causes" are. She stressed that each case involved an individual and was therefore unique.

Miss Snyder and Mr. Schwartzkopf agreed that parental consent was not reason enough for a woman to live off-campus. He said that often a parent is not in a position to understand or know the reasoning behind all University rules and regulations.

The ad hoc committee plans to look into the economic aspects of housing upon the individual and the University. It plans to investigate what approved off-campus housing really is and will consider the element of who should make what choice about the students right to live where they choose.

Almy expressed confidence that results of the committee would be accepted by the Administration, the students and the Board of Regents.

Schwartzkopf, speaking for the entire Board of Regents, said that current housing rules are flexible and that the University has "loosened up," citing senior keys as an example.

He felt the ad hoc committee on housing "is a positive and constructive way to implement change." He was confident students would come up with the right solution when they knew all the facts involved.

Rules' Development
Miss Snyder traced the development of the housing rules, saying that they eventually came to include an unwritten but "specific interest in the total development of individuals in the process of getting an intellectual education."

She termed this concept "total education," defining it briefly as experiences—social, activities, student government, the exchange of views and experiences with others—as a supplementation of classroom learning with practical experiences. She also expressed willingness to work for changes to meet needs.

Inadequacies May Make Prosecution Difficult

The inadequacies in both the Nebraska statutes and federal court decisions dealing with obscenity might make it difficult to prosecute William Steen, the owner of the Heroic Bookstore, an attorney of the American Civil Liberties Union said Wednesday.

Speaking before a small gathering at Abel Hall, Patrick Healey, one of the directors of the Nebraska ACLU, said that Steen was making a challenge to the obscenity.

Redeeming Merit
Healey said that since the statute makes no specific mention of the phrase "redeeming social merit" as is required by the Supreme Court, the state may have to appeal to other laws to convict Steen on the obscenity charges he faces.

The need of a redeeming social merit clause first appeared in a Supreme Court decision on the book Fanny Hill, which reversed an earlier ruling of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, he said.

The Supreme Court ruled in this case that a book which has an literary value cannot be barred he explained.

Variable Obscenity
A Supreme Court decision, that could be used against Steen, described variable obscenity, Healey said.

This decision in the Ginzburg case states that regardless of the book's content, if the manner of advertising implies sexual overtones are prevalent in the book, then the book can be barred he said. In this case, he continued, the seller is not prosecuted, but "the book suffers the fate of being suppressed."

Another Supreme Court verdict in the Roth case, under which Steen could be tried, gave the following vague definition of obscenity: if the book's dominant theme appeals to the prurient interest of the average person applying contemporary community standards, then it's obscene, he said. Healey criticized the ruling as being "vague, imprecise and simply appearing as a general concept."

Charges Against Steen
Healey, who has practiced law in Lincoln for almost ten years, said that Steen is charged with selling three specific nudist magazines, "which aren't as suggestive as some of the others I've seen," the controversial book "Candy," and a book "Lesbians in White."

While he didn't express an opinion about Lesbians in White," he refused to classify Candy" as obscene, saying it was a "funny book which is a satire of daily life."

Healey didn't know if the state would prosecute under the Roth verdict, the Ginzburg decision or another decision.

Easiest To Defend
In the trial, still pending in court, Healey said Candy would be the easiest to defend, the nudist magazines would also be defensible, but that the other book concerning the white slave trade might be a little difficult to defend.

"I don't feel any book in the area of sexual communication should be banned unless there is a clear and conduct which can be perceived from the book."

He said that censors feel that 'nice' people don't react to sexual overtones, while it's the person who is likely to be led astray by the book that causes it to be banned.

"Psychologically, there is a great deal of doubt if banning the book will really prevent crime, fear and sexual responses," he said. "There is no evidence that the book will or will not cause dangerous reactions when read by certain persons."

He said writing about human sexual conditions indeed has merit and that "there is much to be said about sex not being the dirty concept that people view it as."

Fallen Society Depicted In 'Waiting For Godot'

The avant-garde play "Waiting for Godot" opens Friday evening, March 10 in Howell Memorial Theatre. The play is written by Samuel Beckett, a pioneer in the modern absurdist movement, according to Dr. William R. Morgan who is directing the play.

"Waiting for Godot" attempts to tell the story of a discordant and decayed society. It is highly allegorical and symbolic, with a setting created by electronic music, sounds of jets, and junk sculpture.

Two Tramps
The production opens with two tramps waiting beside the only tree on an empty plain. They are waiting for a mysterious person named Godot, even though they don't know Godot nor why they should wait for him.

Besides the two tramps, named Estragon and Vladimir, the cast includes Pozzo, a pompous taskmaster, Lucky, a laborer whom slavery and unquestioning acceptance have reduced to playing roles near idiocy, and a messenger from Godot.

The two tramps will be played by Clint Jakeman of Fremont and Dave Clark of Lincoln. The tyrant and his slave will be played by Steve Gaines of Grand Island and Gary Hill of Lincoln, and Dan Weymouth of Lincoln, will play the messenger.

"Waiting for Godot" will be presented at 8 p.m., Friday and Saturday in Howell Memorial Theatre. It will also play April 14-15, April 28-29 and May 12-13.
