

Employee Committee: Boost In Wages Sought By Petition

Temporarily foregoing their original plan of forming an association of student employees, the committee seeking higher student wages will prepare a brief. The brief will appear in petition form within the next week, committee member Jim Whyte said Wednesday.

The committee, consisting of Selleck sophomores Steve Flodman, Scott Pedley, Dave Ruttner and Whyte, will circulate the petition among University student employees, in an attempt to obtain a wage increase in proportion to the proposed University tuition and $75 residence hall increase.

from the people I have talked to so far."

Whyte said the reason for the altering of the group's initial proposition of forming an association was the turnout of less than 20 persons at the group's meeting Sunday night.

"Since there wasn't enough student interest in the association," he said, "we thought we would get signatures and approach the problem from this angle."

Whyte said he was disappointed in the small gathering as prior to the March 12 meeting, his committee had gathered over 100 names of interested student employees.

"It's easy to get names but it's harder to get the students to turn out for something," he said.

Several committee members placed the blame for the poor crowd on the lack of publicity, the night and time along with the fact many students were still on weekend trips away from the University.

Whyte earlier pointed out that with the probable tuition increase combined with the $75 residence hall hike, a work scholarship which the university provides for many students, won't be worth its full value.

"Students will lose about 46 per cent of the $400 work scholarship if both tuition and room and board are raised," he said.

Although the committee primarily concentrated on Selleck employees at the start, the movement will now be expanded campus-wide, Whyte said.

Regulates Conduct . . . IFC Establishes Rules On Sneaks

The IFC adopted a series of rules for conducting of fraternity pledge sneaks at their meeting Wednesday evening.

The rules, which will become part of the IFC by laws, establish conduct rules which have not been specified before.
The first regulation states that pledge sneaks "are not to interfere with the educational atmosphere of the University or with any University classes."
The second rule said that no physical damage to the fraternity house on the part of the pledges will be allowed.

One house officer must accompany the pledges on their sneak and he will be held responsible for their actions.
