

Decision Awaited For Coed Visiting

The final approval or rejection of the coed-visiting hours proposal that was presented to the University Board of Regents Monday will come at a future Regent's meeting, possibly the Regent's meeting later this month, Edward Schwartzkopf, University Regent said Tuesday.

"We really didn't have time to consider the idea or discuss it at the meeting," he said, "as other things, such as the stadium box, needed a decision at the meeting."

"We are taking this thing under discussion as it is the normal procedure," he added.

Schwartzkopf added that Dave Shonka, chairman of the coed-visiting hours committee, did "a nice job" of presenting the measure to the Regents.

Shonka, along with committee members Wayne Morton, Abel-Sandoz president and Norm Mattson, Abel floor president and the group's advisors, Abel residence directors Richard Arndt and Bob Muschewski, attended the meeting Monday.

Regents Were Receptive Shonka said that the Regents were quite receptive to our requests and I'm pleased they are taking the time to give it the proper consideration that the issue requires."

The group presented the motion in statement form with several modifications from previous statements the group had prepared.

Shonka said the group "feels so strongly about our contentions" that according to the statement, "If approved, we take this opportunity to invite and request the Board members, University administrators, faculty members and the general public to come into the halls at any time and view the visiting hours when they are in operation."

Handbook
The committee presented five contentions, including a section of the Campus Handbook, which Shonka said "expresses our feeling quite aptly."

The Handbook reads, "It is believed that students at an institution of high learning hold for themselves total educational goals and that their conduct will be in keeping with the expectations of the University community."

"It is not the intention of the University to determine moral codes for individuals, but it is the expectation that students will themselves determine moral principles acceptable to the society in which they live and conduct themselves accordingly."

Other contentions included several key points the committee feels give additional support to the measure.

"A college student making his own decisions and actively functioning in our society is mature and responsible enough to entertain guests in his own home — and the residence halls is his home for nine months of each year."

The private rooms provide enough privacy to allow the discussion of mutual interests and the presence of mixed company will increase personal pride in the individual's home at the University.

"The student's room is both a place of living and learning. The assets of the rooms such as radios, televisions and desks are conducive to the proper entertainment of guests by an individual. The room is a place where couples can study, make popcorn or listen to records."

Trial Period
If the Regents approve the measure, it will be placed on a four-week trial period with the following requirements in effect.

During the trial, a responsible person, not necessarily a student assistant, would be required to be on the floor during the times the hours are in effect, serving as an advisor and coordinator.

The doors to individual rooms would remain open during the time a guest is being entertained in the room.

The individual residence hall may have the visiting hours no more than twice a week and respective hall has the final decision when or if the hours will be in effect.

Fifty Candidates Apply For Advisory Boards

Fifty students have applied for the 20 positions open on the Teachers, Arts and Sciences and Agriculture Advisory Boards, according to Mel Schlacter, chairman of the ASUN advisory board committee.

Schlacter said the elections will be held April 12 along with ASUN elections. He said he was pleased with the response and hoped the candidates would remain concerned about the advisory boards.

"The candidates have 120 for campaign expenses and the other regulations are the same as for student senate candidates," Schlacter added.
