10 Finalists Chosen For Miss E Week

Ten finalists for Queen of the 1967 Engineering Week at the University have been chosen.

Stephen E. Morris, chairman of the E-Week queen committee, said three attendants and the queen will be selected to reign over E-Week festivities, April 24-28. The traditional E-Week open house will be held April 27.

Finalists

The finalists for E-Week are: Deborah Cushman, freshman in Teachers College; Nyla Soukup, sophomore in Teachers College; Trish Sultzbaugh, sophomore in Teachers College; Martha Gottschalk, freshman in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Cindy Bartlett, junior in Teachers College; Nancy Berne, freshman in the College of Arts and Sciences; Sherri Adams, junior in the College of Arts and Sciences; Vicki Lynn Hakanson, sophomore in the College of Arts and Sciences; Susie Highland, junior in the College of Agriculture and Home Economics; Marian Kay Wisniewski, freshman in the College of Arts and Sciences.

According to Morris the candidates were picked on personality, grace, poise, and beauty. They were picked by 13 judges comprised of two from each engineering department, one from Blueprint, and the two co-chairman of the queen committee.

Queen, Three Alternates

"The Queen and three alternates have been chosen by the judges and will be announced during E-Week", Morris said.

Merlyn Witt, co-chairman of Publicity said there would be approximately 50 displays from the five engineering departments.

"E-Week competition is based on athletic events, quality of open houses, ticket sales for the banquet, and Blueprint sales between the engineering departments," Witt said.

Witt added that they will be presenting a television program on April 27 over ETV showing a display from each department.

Senate Hopefuls State ASUN Troubles

Bob Schanou feels he is qualified to serve in Senate because of his experience in three different living units and his experience on the Agriculture College Executive Board.

Loren Schulze said he feels qualified to fill the Senate post because he "knows many people and their views and my views would be a good representation of those views."

A desire to work toward a better University motivated Gene Thomas to enter the Senate race. Thomas said he urges all students to vote in the upcoming elections because "the future of student government may be riding on this campaign."

ASUN On Threshold

John Wirth said he feels ASUN is "on the threshold of great things for the future."

Wirth said he has valuable ideas and can play a definite role in implementing the Bill of Rights.

Several Student Activities

Jane Palmer said she has been involved in several student activities on East campus and is experienced in student government.

She added she has "a sincere interest in the College of Home Economics."

Constituents Responsible

"The students' are my primary concern, Roger Stark said and he is "ready to deal with issues from the standpoint that his constituents are responsible individuals."

Stark has served as president of the Senate Associates this year.

The Daily Nebraskan could not contact the following candidates for comment: Joe Olson, Jill Tappero, Linda Zimmerman, Kathy McNeff and Jim Paulson.

Janet Giles, an SDC candidate from Arts and Sciences, said the "best way to represent the students is not to promise public opinion survey after election but to present a detailed platform and promise to fight for it."
