

POM-POM GIRLS URGE THE HUSKERS . . . to victory as they set the tone for the spirited pep rally held Thursday evening.

Third Season . . .

Gallery Shows Modern Films

By Toni Victor
Featuring American classics, older foreign films plus experimental shorts, Sheldon Art Gallery starts its third year of film programming October 11.

Sheldon coordinates its schedule of films with the Nebraska Union Foreign Film Society to provide as wide a selection as possible of quality vintage films not usually shown in commercial movie houses.

"Shoot the Piano Player" a French film by Francois Truffaut, will be shown November 8, six days before Charles Anzavour, singer and actor who won a French academy award for his role in the picture, appears in concert on campus.

Other highlights of the Wednesday night foreign series at Sheldon include two more films by Truffaut, "400 Blows" and "Jules and Jim", October 11 and 25 respectively.

"400 Blows" was Truffaut's first feature film, released in 1959, and claimed by some critics to be his best. It won the New York Critic's Award and the Director's Prize at the Cannes Film Festival.

"Jules and Jim", one of the most popular of the post-World War II French films, stars Jeanne Moreau, Oskar Werner and Henri Serre. It was the winner of the Director's Award at the Mar del Plata Festival in 1962.

WEDNESDAY SERIES
Two other films included in the semester for the Wednesday series are "Summer Skin" by Torre Nilsson of Argentina, and "Death of a Cyclist" by Juan Bardem of Spain.

Last year's experimental series now alters its format, combining forces with the Wednesday foreign films. Some experimental short subject films will be: "That's Me" by Walker Stuart and Albert Maysles, "Jail Keys Made Here" by Lee Boltin, "The Smile" by Serge Bourguignon, "Help! My Snowman's Burning Down" by Carson Davidson, and "The String Bean" by Edmond Sechan who has also done "Red Balloon" and "The Silent World".

The Sunday series of American classic films at Sheldon will feature an episode in the "Perils of Pauline" before each of the scheduled movies. The first episode in titled "Trial By Fire."

LITERATURE INTEREST
This series should have great appeal to American literature students, according to Jon Nelson, assistant director of Sheldon. Orson Welles, William Faulkner, Booth Tarkington and Paddy Chayefsky are some of the names that stand out in the series of American classic films.

"The Goddess", written by Chayefsky and directed by John Cromwell, will be shown October 15. It stars Kim Stanley and Lloyd Bridges. Bogart fans can view "The Big Sleep" October 29. "Member of The Wedding", from the Faulkner novel, is scheduled for November 19 with the Brandon de Wilde, Ethel Waters and Julie Harris. Orson Welles, director of "Citizen Kane" presents "The Magnificent Ambersons" based on the Tarkington novel. It stars Joseph Cotton, Agnes Moorehead, Ann Baxter and Tim Holt.

SHORT FILMS
In addition to the Wednesday and Sunday series at Sheldon, two full length programs of short films by distinguished directors will be co-sponsored with the Nebraska Union Film Committee.

The program is called New Cinema and was originally presented by the Film Department of New York's Lincoln Center. It offers an opportunity to see some of today's most creative film making by such directors as Godard, Polanski, Lester and Truffaut.

Part One of New Cinema will be shown twice at 2:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. October 12 and 13. Part Two runs October 19 and 20.

All of the films are shown in the Sheldon Auditorium. The Wednesday foreign film series alternates weeks with the Foreign Film Society's showings at the Nebraska Theatre. The Sheldon films are at 7:30 on Wednesdays and Sundays.

AWS Holds Lincolnites' Orientation
AWS will sponsor a orientation seminar for all Freshmen Lincoln women Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Nebraska Union. Maggie Evenson, AWS workers council chairman, said the event has been scheduled to acquaint these coeds with the University.

Speakers featured at the orientation will represent three campus organizations, according to Miss Evenson. A delegate from ASUN will speak to the group on campus politics and government, and Mortar Boards will discuss campus activities and honors.

Also, AWS officers will acquaint the women with AWS rules, regulations, and election procedures.

Experiment Discards Lectures

Econ Students Learn On Their Own

About 230 University students are being encouraged to cut lectures this semester.

The lectures are in Economics 11 and the students are part of an experiment being researched by F. Charles Lamphear, assistant professor of economics.

"We are offering this experimental course with no lectures because we are concerned with better ways to teach Economics 11 and 12," Lamphear said.

JOINT EXPERIMENT
With Campbell R. McConnell, professor of economics, Lamphear has been working for six months on research for the course, which will have only assigned readings, exams and optional tutorial sessions.

"We are faced with two problems," said Lamphear, which forced the college to consider other instructional methods. "There is a larger number of students and there is a limited faculty."

VOLUNTARY BASIS
The course is completely voluntary, Lamphear emphasized. Of approximately 1,000 students enrolled in economics, 230 signed for the no-lecture class.

Because of paperwork involved in research on the experiment, Lamphear expressed satisfaction on the enrollment number. Lamphear will compare the results of the experimental group to the rest of the students taking the course by television lecture at the end of the semester.

TUTORING PROVIDED
"There will be eight tutorial sessions for review that the students may attend if they wish," Lamphear said. "This will present an opportunity to bring questions forward."

The students in the experimental section may also go to teaching assistants for individual help.

"The only thing they can't do is attend lectures," he noted. "The television lectures do not cover any additional information to the text and required readings."

SAME EXAMS
All the introductory economics students will take the same exams, enabling Lamphear to make comparative studies.

"When we go into testing," he said, "we may find that perhaps only students with a 2.8 or above are able to do it, or that this type of course should be restricted to juniors and seniors."

If the students in the experimental course pull lower grades on the average than the television-lecture students, they will be put on their own grade scale, according to Lamphear. "I think the students are not going to get 'hurt' in this," said Lamphear. "They will have the assignments from week to week, teaching assistants for individual help and tutorial sessions every two weeks, if they want them."

RESPONSIBILITY
"Of course, there is an element of responsibility," he added. "But, I have the feeling that students are going to be prepared for the exams."

A student in the experimental course agreed on the "element of responsibility."

"If a person does this on his own, it brings our responsibility," said Ron Colburn, sophomore. "I anticipate that this will be my first chance to take a book and get out of it what I want to and not what the teacher expects," Colburn said.

USE TUTORS
Colburn said he planned to use the tutorial sessions and to avoid cramming by keeping up with the reading assignments.

"Not having to cram is part of the responsibility I accepted when I agreed to take the course," he said.

Lamphear indicated that he and Professor McConnell would have the results within a few months after the end of the first semester.

"At the end of the semester, the course will be analyzed," Lamphear said. He added that the college would have the decision on the fate of the no-lecture method.

Dorms Plan To Publish Frosh Book

The Inter-Dormitory Association will publish a Freshman Booklet within the next three weeks, according to Brian Ride-nour, president of the organization.

"The council feel that dorm residents are not fully acquainted with the purpose and potential of IDA," Ride-nour said, "so we feel the booklet is necessary."

The booklet will contain the organizational structure, projects, concepts, history, and recommendations of IDA. In addition to IDA information the booklet also lists the campus activities and university history of each dorm.

The course will continue for five Mondays beginning Sept. 25.

Dr. Alan J. Pickering, director of the United Campus Christian Fellowship will instruct a course on Great Religions of the World. Students will discuss major beliefs of Buddhism, Judaism and Islam and will point out the political implications of each in current world problems.

The course will continue for three Mondays beginning Sept. 25.

ALCOHOLISM
Problems of Alcohol and Alcoholism will be taught by Dr. J. Fred Sills of University Health Services. The course will consider such a future date as the legislature shall determine," the statute states.

The tuition of about 250 students is now being waived and the number is expected to increase substantially, according to J. Harold Pine, deputy director of the State Veterans Department.

Students need only apply for the waiver once during their college career, unless they change schools, Pine noted.

The deadline for a tuition waiver for the present semester has past, but students may apply now for benefits next semester, according to the University Bureau of Veterans' Affairs.

Balfour Loses Monopoly

As a result of recent action by the Federal Trade Commission and the U.S. courts, no jewelry company will be able to claim that it sells "official fraternity jewelry", according to a Lincoln jeweler.

The rulings have come in conjunction with an FTC report which says that L. G. Balfour Co., Attleboro, Mass., has monopolized the market for national college fraternity rings and other insignia.

CONTROLS PRICES
The report, made by hearing examiner Raymond J.

Lynch, found the company had exclusive contracts for 98.2% of the 15,866 national college fraternity chapters. The examiner said this allowed Balfour to fix and control prices.

Lynch recommended that the FTC bar the company from alleged illegal restraint of trade in the manufacture, sale and distribution of insignia such as badges, buttons, and pins, according to the Wall Street Journal.

SELL HOLDINGS
U.S. courts have since ruled that the Balfour company must sell a number of its holdings, including its wholly owned subsidiary, Burr, Patterson & Auld Co., the Lincoln jeweler said. They have also moved to strike down Balfour's claim to "exclusive" insignia distribution on college campuses.

As a result other Lincoln jewelers, in addition to Balfour Co., will now be able to market "official" fraternity jewelry, he said. Balfour and three other companies were indicted by a Federal grand jury in Atlanta on charges of rigging prices of class rings and graduation invitations and announcements in Georgia, the Wall Street Journal reported.

Retired Chem Dept. Head Dies In Lincoln

Former chairman of the University chemistry department from 1955 to 1963, Dr. Edward R. Washburn, died Aug. 31 in Lincoln.

A physical chemist, Dr. Washburn was a member of the University faculty for 41 years. He had officially retired from his teaching position in July.

A member of the American Chemical Society and the American Association for Advancement of Science, Dr. Washburn was also affiliated with the honoraries, Sigma Xi Alpha Chi Sigma and Phi Lambda Upsilon.

How wide should a traditional Shetland be?

Resilio

Soft textures, lighter weight, and subtly blended colorings reminiscent of the heaths and moors of northern England, give these Shetlands a distinction that can be achieved by no other fabric. Knots neatly and beautifully complements traditional sportswear, blazers and suitings. To know all the facts on traditional neckwear write for the free booklet "Tiemanship."
