New Dorm Complex To Receive Final Touches

Finishing touches on the new dormitory complex north of campus will be completed within the next two weeks, according to George Miller, University administrator.

Lighting and the sprinkler systems are expected to be finished by this time.

"We plan to seed the lawn as soon as possible, Roy K. Rasmussen, grounds superintendent said.

Rasmussen expects to do most of the landscaping at the complex himself since the death of the University's Landscape Architect C. B. Billings last year.

Parking areas are "shaping up well," Miller noted. The north parking lot, which will be finished by the first of next week, he predicted.

"We hope to acquire some land from the railroad to expand the north parking area to include another row of cars," he said.

Miller pointed out that all phases of building construction are completed. Some furnishings are not installed, he said, but for all practical purposes the buildings are finished.

The installation of a food tray conveyor in the food service building is the only large task remaining and that will be installed by the first of next week, Miller said.

Miller was very impressed by the 18-month construction time required for the buildings.

"We feel that the construction time of the buildings was very fast considering the size of the project," Miller said.

Construction companies received a bonus for completing the three dormitories and two of the additional living units for sororities and fraternities ahead of schedule, according to Miller.

The rapid completion of the complex was attributed by Del Busacker, assistant construction engineer, good planning, overtime work, large crews and more than the usual amount of equipment.

A unique feature of the dormitory complex is a tunnel system connecting Schramm, Harper and Smith Halls, the three halls in the complex.

The tunnels, which are closed during the night, allow students to exchange linen, eat and travel from building to building without going outside.

University Lacks Money; Refuses Band Grandstand

Lack of time and money were the major reasons for the University's refusal to build grandstands in Memorial Stadium for the band, according to James S. Pittenger, athletic ticket manager.

The request was made to Pittenger last spring by band representative Mike Bang.

Bang said that the band's current vantage point, on the 50 yard line behind the football players, makes it "next to impossible to see what is happening on the field."

"Since $½ million was just spent for a new press box, there wasn't enough money left for stadium construction," Pittenger explained.

He also said that by the time such things as the drawing of plans were completed it was too late to begin construction.

"It takes time to make preparations," he said. "You can't just begin building a grandstand by nailing together 6 inch boards."

"We have the biggest stadium in the Big 8 and have the worst seating facilities for the band," Bang said. "We feel that we could better serve at the football games if we had better seating arrangements," he added.

Pittenger said that he is "very receptive" to the idea and that there is a possibility that it will be carried through in the years to follow.

"We of the band feel that we contribute a great deal to football games and that we deserve better accommodations," Bang said.

The idea submitted by the band called for a $4000 portable grandstand to be located in the southeast corner near the end zone.

News And Opinion . . . The Incorporation Question

BY MICK LOWE
Staff Writer

ASUN still may not be financially autonomous, according to Dick Schulze, president of ASUN.

Most students and many senators believed that ASUN was financially independent of the administration when it was announced last year that ASUN "had received articles of incorporation."

It was assumed that such incorporation gave ASUN powers to raise funds on its own for projects of its own choosing without approval or comment from the Board of Regents or the administration.

FINANCIAL INDEPENDENCE

ASUN has indeed been incorporated, according to President Schulze, but there is some room for doubt about ASUN's financial independence.

The ASUN Constitution was used in the articles of incorporation.

But Article IV of the Constitution states that ASUN "shall have the following powers, in so far as these powers do not conflict with general University regulations established by the Board of Regents."

LEGAL QUESTION

This means, according to Schulze, that there is a legal question as to whether ASUN can conduct normal business functions as a corporation without Regents approval.

I'm afraid that this incorporation hasn't given us the freedom that we'd hoped for," Schulze observed Wednesday afternoon.

Probably the most important potential transaction endangered is the right to borrow money.

REGENTS APPROVAL

Neither Schulze or the other executives are sure that a loan can be obtained without Regents approval because of Article IV.

Since the basic budget for ASUN came from student fees as approved by the Regents and administration this summer, it would be fatuous to argue that ASUN could ever be "independent" under the present system.

The problem is that ASUN would now like to consider projects which would require funds not provided within the original budget.

FM STATION

One such project is the University FM station, presently under consideration by the ASUN Executive Committee.

If ASUN decides that they would like to back the station financially, then they will have to raise considerable funds and the most likely alternative is a loan.

"As it is now," Schulze said, "we have three ways to raise money. We can apply for a loan, levy a tax on the students or create a fund drive."

A tax is risky because its success rests on the mercy and pocketbooks of the students. A fund drive faces basically the same problem.

REALISTIC SOLUTION

The most realistic, and the most businesslike solution to the problem would be a loan. But if the loan company or bank involved turned to the Regents for approval, ASUN would be at the mercy of the Regents again.

"The whole situation is a fairly complex legal problem," admitted Secretary of State Frank Marsh, who granted ASUN its articles of incorporation.

Schulze said that ASUN will seek legal advice concerning its financial relationship with the Regents.

WAIT AND SEE

At the same time,

Schulze said that ASUN will operate financially as if the Article IV dilemma never existed, and "see what happens."

The first test is probably months away. It will most likely occur concerning the FM station, although a cooperative bookstore plan is also under consideration.

If ASUN decides to seek a loan, as it will probably do if it supports the FM station, and if the Regents are consulted concerning the loan, then the question will be in the hands of lawyers and out of the senate.

Since the ASUN mills grind slowly, the question will remain a question until November or December.

ASUN will continue to wait to the Regent's two step — three steps to the side, one step forward, two steps back. Maestro?

Tuition Statements Sent; Due September 29

The University is mailing tuition statements for the fall semester to students at their Lincoln or commuting address this weekend. The bills must be paid by 5 p.m. Sept. 29.

James Wickless, University bursar, emphasize that payment must be in the Bursar's Office in the Administration Building by 5 p.m. Sept. 29 to avoid a $10 service charge.

SERVICE CHARGE

Tuition payments received in the Bursar's Office after 5 p.m. Sept. 29 will be assessed a $10 service charge. If the tuition plus service charge are not paid by 5 p.m. Oct. 6 in the Bursar's Office, the student's registration may be subject to cancellation.

Students are responsible for paying tuition even if they do not receive a statement, Wickless said.

Any student who does not receive a tuition statement by Sept. 27 should report to the Bursar's Office in the Administration Building.

Students may pay tuition by mail, but they should allow adequate time for the payment to be received in the Bursar's Office before 5 p.m. Sept. 29.

Included with the tuition statement is a special form to obtain information needed by the University to complete reports for the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare in the interest of assuring equal opportunities for all students.

Data in the form will be used for statistical and reporting purposes only, and student's official record in any way, nor will any individual use be made of the information.

Students are requested to complete the form but are not required to sign it. The completed form should be returned with the tuition statement.

If students have questions about the form, they should contact Dr. Russell Brown in the Office of Student Affairs.
