

ReMarks . . .

By MARK GORDON
Sports Editor

Don't kid yourself. The Kansas State crew that Nebraska meets at Manhattan Saturday doesn't resemble their predecessors that failed to win a game during the last two seasons.

New head coach Vince Gibson has revamped the Wildcats and it paid off with a 17-7 opening victory over Colorado State. Last week, however, Virginia Tech clawed the Wildcats 15-3 after K-State had jumped in front on a field goal.

Kansas State has a brilliant passing combination from quarterback Bill Nossek to the Big Eight's leading receiver Dave Jones.

Overall the Wildcats are leading the Big Eight in both passing offense yardage (with a 164.5 game average) and in passing defense (allowing only 73 yards per game).

GROUND POWER

Nebraska's passing attack hasn't set any records offensively and the passing defense, manned by an inexperienced crew is currently third in the league.

Nebraska won't rely heavily on its passing crew Saturday, but rushing is the main gun the Huskers used to defeat Washington and Minnesota this season.

Nebraska is averaging an impressive 239 rushing yards per contest and has allowed a mere 61 yards per match defensively.

Kansas State, is in the league's cellar in both rushing departments so Nebraska should come through with a strong running game.

The Wildcat defense is led by Danny Lankas, a strong-side linebacker who was named Big Eight Lineman of the Week following his work against Colorado State. In the first two games, he has made 24 unassisted tackles and 19 assisted grabs, placing him among the league's top defenders.

TAKES MORE THAN ONE

But Lankas can't do it alone. Nebraska features hard running backs Ben Gregory and Dick Davis, who rushed 104 yards against a rugged Gopher defense in Lincoln last Saturday.

Nebraska's defense is leading the Big Eight with an average allowance of 166 yards and has only permitted one touchdown in two games.

K-State may have a good passing attack but not good enough to do much penetrating against the Nebraska defenders.

Even with all the talk about the potent passing game the Wildcats have only scored 20 points in two games, and while Nebraska has totaled just 24, the Huskers have the great defense which K-State lacks.

Nebraska has never lost to K-State under coach Bob Devaney and they will pick up their 41st victory of the series dating back to 1911, by scoring their season's first conference victory Saturday.

81 PER CENT

After picking all Big Eight games correctly last week, boosting our percentage to 81 per cent, we will try tomorrow's schedule which shows Oklahoma idle. COLORADO OVER IOWA STATE: It will be David meeting Goliath at Boulder, but Iowa State doesn't have the knockout stone that killed the bully centuries ago. The Buffaloes are seeking to replace Nebraska as Big Eight king and by Saturday night both Colorado and Nebraska will share the Big Eight lead with a victory apiece.

TEXAS OVER OKLAHOMA STATE: Darrell Royal may have seen his Texans lose two games this season, but those losses were to the nation's number one ranked Southern California Trojans and to the Texas Tech Red Raiders, rated tenth in the land. The Cowboys have only scored seven points in two games and will finally find their match against the Longhorns at Austin.

KANSAS OVER OHIO UNIVERSITY: Strictly a hunch. The Jayhawks have come close in both their previous games and this may be the week they jump over the victory hump. The Jayhawks will play before the Lawrence crowd in the Kansas opener and they will score Pepper Rodger's first triumph.

MISSOURI OVER ARIZONA: Arizona upset Ohio State last week but they will have trouble doing the same against Dan Devine's nationally-rated Tigers at Columbia. Missouri's Gary Kombrink, voted Big Eight Back of the week this week, will lead his crew to their third straight non-conference win.

KSU Coach Says NU 'Tougher'n Gangbusters'

Wildcat assistant coach LeRoy Montgomery watched Nebraska, which faces Kansas State in a 1:30 p.m. Manhattan kickoff Saturday, and gave the following report to K-State coach Vince Gibson.

"They're tougher'n gangbusters," he said. "The score was no indication of how badly Minnesota was beaten. Nebraska is quicker than they used to be and they're deep."

"I think they played something like 41 men in the game," he added. "They suited up about 70. Patrick (Frank, Nebraska's sophomore quarterback) is good."

"So are their running backs Ben Gregory and Joe Orduna," he continued. "They run lots of offensive formations. Seems like they used 12 against Minnesota. They're a great team."

Kansas State, splitting their first two contests, will face Nebraska in relatively good physical condition with only tailback Cornelius Davis suffering from an injured shoulder, which is expected to be healed by game time Saturday.

F. A. C. (Friday Afternoon Column)

BY ED ICENOGLE

Friday afternoon again and here you are reading this column. This proves beyond a shadow of a doubt that you have nothing better to do and are therefore a social dropout.

But both of these charges are unfounded because Friday Afternoon Column should be taken with a grain of salt, preferably on a pretzel and that preferably with a beer.

Speaking of beer, Busch & Co's St. Louis Cardinals did not get off to the start they were expected to against a supposedly tired Boston team in the World Series. But a 2-1 win is as good as any, especially if you have "3" in the baseball pool. I didn't.

Boston, of course, bounced back Thursday for a 5-0 decision, an especially good score if you have "5" in the baseball pool. I didn't. Baseball can be an expensive pastime.

But this is really football season—and not just in Nebraska. Our Daily Nebraskan Special East Coast Mystery Correspondent has sent word that the Ivy League is climbing.

Right now Dartmouth is ranked over Harvard, followed by Yale, Columbia, Princeton, etc, but non-Ivy Slippery Rock is emerging as one of the big powers of the East.

The East Coast Mystery Correspondent

claims to be sporting a perfect prediction record as yet. He did not publish his first week's predictions because of lack of confidence in his picks. He assures, however, that all his choices were correct.

This week's predictions:
PENN over Brown—Brown gets Penned, as Miners leave Brown out in the cold.

CORNELL over Colgate—Colgate's Invisible Protective Shield was fractured by Columbus last week.

HARVARD over Boston—Harvard looks like a sleeper in Ivy League, but Boston just looks asleep.

SLIPPERY ROCK over Shippensburg—The Shipp should go aground on the big Rock.

YALE over Connecticut—Yale should disconnect Connecticut.

MUHLBURG over PMC Colleges—Muhlburg hits the big time with a splash and PMC gets wet.

Other picks: COLUMBIA over Princeton, HOLY CROSS over Dartmouth and HAMILTON over Rensselaer Polytechnic.

The East Coast Mystery Correspondent also reports that in the Ivy League "I intentionally consider Brown as last, because that is where they will inevitably end up. Brown is not really bad, but laws prevent me from being more descriptive."

Big 8 Comments, Notes And Quotes

"Our fans have been wanting a team with a record like Michigan State's," said Kansas coach Pepper Rodgers. "Now they've got one—we're both 0-2."

What is fun about defense? Husker middle guard Wayne Meylan said, "getting yourself a quarterback. That's the best part about defense—it is if you can get them from behind."

The Nebraska football staff will again teach a class entitled "Football—A Spectator's Sport" for women this fall.

"I expect (Bob Anderson) to deal more punishment than he absorbs," said Colorado coach Eddie Crowder about his sophomore quarterback who broke in with 221 total yards, the most ever by a Big Eight sophomore in his first game.

"We don't baby our quarterbacks while getting ready," he continued. "They have to be able to take their lumps along with the rest of the squad."

When a fan reminded

Kansas coach Pepper Rodgers that Kansas was making games interesting, Rodgers said "I'd rather be a dull winner than an interesting loser."

'Kickers' Win Second Match

Steve Mwamba's second three-goal hat trick of the season led the University Soccer Club past John F. Kennedy of Wahoo Wednesday, 7-1.

The local crew, 2-0 on the season, will face the Omaha Internationals at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Job Corps

Field at the former Lincoln Air Force Base.

The local crew jumped to a 7-0 lead at the end of the first half, then "rested" four of the top players," said club president Tim Rickard.

"We had the ball almost entirely in their half during the first half," Rickard added, "and we had complete command of the middle of the field."

Besides Mwamba's three-goal performance, four other men scored goals. Sumer Hasimoglu, Mehmet Unsal, Osaidi Mohammad and Ahmed each scored during the first half.
